PUBLISHER'S NOTE

The necessity of an All India Criminal Digest has been keenly felt by the members of the Bar. In fact, certain lawyer friends of the Publisher requested him to remove this long-felt want. He is, therefore, in response to this call, bringing out the present Digest, the first volume of which is before the learned reader. How far he has succeeded in doing this job efficiently is for the members of the learned fraternity to judge and not for the publisher to claim. He can, however, safely say that he has spared no pains to make the publication useful to those for whom it is meant. The Headnotes, the learned reader will find, are both copious and comprehensive and so also are the Catch-words. It is true that a Headnote cannot be a substitute for the judgment, but it is equally certain that it is not always possible for a busy lawyer to read the entire judgment in order to know exactly what law has been laid down. Hence the importance of a copious Headnote cannot be overrated. Wherever necessary, the reasoning of the Hon'ble Judges and Obiters have also been incorporated in the Headnotes. The subscribers of the Cr. L. J. will appreciate this publication most as the rulings cited therein start from 1904, a year which saw the birth of that journal. Similarly the subscribers of the All India Reporter will find references of that journal not from 1921 but from 1914 which enhances the value of the publication to them as no other Digest, so far published, does the same. The references to the Provincial Periodicals are also invariably given as no publication can afford to ignore them except at its own cost.

In spite of enormous increase in the price of the material, the Publisher has done his best to give a nice get-up to the publication.

In the end, the Publisher has to thank his friends Messrs. Malik Ram Lal Anand, S. C. Manchanda and H. L. Soni, Advocates of the Lahore High Court for their help in the shape of valuable suggestions and even otherwise.

———Aiding offender, after commission of offence, whether abetment.

A wrong entry made long after an alleged embezzlement by another person would not make the scribe guilty of abetment of embezzlement. At the worst he would only be an accessory after the fact, and as such, could not be punished under the Indian Law for abetment of the offence. Pritchard v. Emperor.

I. R. 1929 Lah. 97 :
112 I. C. 850 : A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 382.

———Charge of abetment not framed—Conviction of abetment, whether legal.

A conviction of an accused for abetment of an offence of murder is illegal in the absence of a charge to that effect. Kishen Das v. Emperor.

———Charge for substantive offence—Conviction for abetment.

Where the proof of abetment of an offence must necessarily differ from the proof of the substantive offence and the attention of the accused has not been directed at the time of framing the charges or during the trial to the fact that he might have to meet a charge of abetment, it is highly unfair for a Court of Appeal to alter a conviction for a substantive offence into one for abetment of the offence. Pritchard v. Emperor.

———Conspiracy—Duty of prosecution.

Per Sundra Aiyar, J.—In a case of abetment by conspiracy the prosecution has to prove an agreement between the alleged conspirators to do the criminal act. National Bank of India, Ltd. v. Kothandarama Chetty.

ABETMENT.

———Intention—Absence of knowledge of nature of act aided—Act or omission, whether abetment.

A mere giving of an aid or omission to give it will not make the act an abetment of an offence if the person who gave the aid did not know that an offence was being committed or contemplated. There must be an intention to aid an offence or to facilitate the commission of an offence and there must be knowledge or belief that the act being committed was an offence. Shevanti v. Emperor.

29 Cr. L. J. 561 :
10 A. I. Cr. R. 358 :
109 I. C. 497 : A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 257.

———Of an offence—What is necessary to constitute—Instigation or joining in conspiracy or intentional aiding on the part of abettor—Intentional aiding constituted by some act or illegal omission on the part of the abettor.

To constitute abetment of an offence there must have been instigation or joining in a conspiracy, or intentional aiding on the part of the abettor. The facts proved were as follows : K was sitting with others looking at a poo. The appellant, who had been seen earlier on the night in C's company, approached the spot where K sat, closely followed by C. The accused asked in an ordinary voice and manner where K was, whereupon C got behind K and, saying "Here" he drove a spear into K's back killing him on the spot. The men nearest him ran away, with the exception of T. This man said something about a man having been stabbed, whereupon the appellant and C each seized one of his hands and questioned him as to whether he had seen anything. They released him on being told to do so by M. A relation of the deceased saw that later on he passed the accused and C at some distance from the spot where the murder was committed and he overheard the appellant ask C why he had overdone it, to which C replied that if he had not finished K the latter would have retaliated. Held that, the facts did not disclose any case of instigation to murder on the part of the appellant, nor did they disclose any act or illegal omission on his part, which could be considered intentional aiding by him in C's act which constituted the murder. Held also that, there were not sufficient materials on which to base a conclusion that the appellant engaged with C in a conspiracy to injure K. Tha La Aung v. Emperor.

ACCOMPLICE.

Corroboration.

An accomplice is a competent witness and there is no absolute rule of law which enacts that a conviction based on the evidence of an accomplice is bad, but there is an established practice, founded on the judicial experience of generations, which requires corroboration by same untainted evidence in a material particular pointing not only to the crime but to the participation of the accused in that crime. Munassar Ahir v. Emperor. 15 Cr. L. J. 438 : 24 I. C. 174 : 18 C. W. N. 550 : A. I. R. 1915 Cal. 73.

Corroboration.

Corroborative evidence must be independent and must connect accused with crime. It may be direct or circumstantial. Khairati Ram v. Emperor. 33 Cr. L. J. 324 : I. R. 1932 Sind 49 :

136 I. C. 753 : A. I. R. 1932 Sind 100.

Corroboration.

Evidence of accomplice against two prisoners—corroboration as to one prisoner's crime is no corroboration as regards the other. Khairati Ram v. Emperor. 33 Cr. L. J. 324 : I. R. 1932 Sind 49 :

136 I. C. 753 : A. I. R. 1932 Sind 100.

Corroboration.

It is salutary rule that the evidence of an accomplice should be corroborated. When a trial takes place before a Judge and a jury, it is the duty of the Judge to warn the jury that it is unsafe to act upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice. In the same way when a trial takes place before Commissioners who are the Judges both of law and of facts, it is right and proper and indeed obligatory upon them that they should warn themselves that it is unsafe to act on the uncorroborated testimony of the accomplice. The question whether the evidence of an accomplice has been sufficiently corroborated is largely a matter for the Court which is trying the case. Moti Lal Roy v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 999 (F. B.) :

164 I. C. 779 : 39 C. W. N. 754 : 9 R. C. 298 (F. B.).

Corroboration—Hearsay evidence.

Although a conviction based on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is not illegal, the Court should require corroboration of that evidence in some material particulars. Hearsay evidence, cannot be admitted as corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice. Ah Tat v. Emperor. 13 Cr. L. J. 424 :

U. B. R. (1911), 196 : 14 I. C. 968.

Corroboration—Nature of.

Before a conviction can be sustained on the evidence of an accomplice, there must be corroboration in material particulars by means of independent testimony. The degree or amount of corroboration required depends upon the facts of each case. The position, connection and general conduct of an accused cannot be taken as affording sufficient corroboration; nor can the circumstances elicited in the accomplice's evidence be held in themselves as affording sufficient corroboration. Emperor v. Chhotalal Babar. 13 Cr. L. J. 542 :

14 Bom. L. R. 147 : 36 B. 524 : 14 I. C. 970.

ACCOMPLICE.

Corroboration—Necessity of.

Per Sir S. Subrahmaniam Aiyer, C. J.—The rule that an accomplice must be corroborated in a material particular is a mere rule of general and usual practice, the application of which is for the discretion of the Judge by whom the case is tried. The rule has no application in the case of an accomplice who is merely a youthful tool in the hands of one who stood to him in loco parentis. Ramaswami Gounden v. Emperor. 1 Cr. L. J. 641 : S. C. 14 M. L. J. 2226 : I. L. R. 27 Mad. 271 : 2 Weir 203.

Corroboration—Necessity of.

Per V. Bhashyam Aiyangar, J.—The conviction of an accused on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is perfectly legal, and a direction to the Jury that it will be their duty to convict the accused if they believed the accomplice and gave credit to his evidence is a perfectly legal direction. A direction to the Jury that the evidence of an accomplice is not sufficient to find the accused guilty will be a misdirection. Ramaswami Gounden v. Emperor. 1 Cr. L. J. 641 :

S. 14 M. L. J. 226 : I. L. R. 27 Mad. 271 : 2 Weir 203.

Corroboration—Necessity of.

An accomplice is unworthy of belief, unless he is corroborated in material particulars and similarly the evidence of one accomplice is not available as corroboration of another. Consequently, the convictions cannot be sustained upon the uncorroborated testimony of the approver. Bhabhuti v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1096 :

1936 O. L. R. 595 : 9 R. O. 164 : 165 I. C. 144.

Corroboration—Rule as to.

The evidence of an accessory must be corroborated in some material particular not only bearing upon the facts of the crime but upon the accused's implication in it and the evidence of one accomplice is not available as corroboration of another. This rule as to corroboration, being a rule of practice, is now virtually a rule of law and is a rule of the greatest possible importance in a case where there are three persons all implicated in a crime and one of them or two of them exculpates himself or themselves by fastening the guilt upon the other and all the persons concerned had originally given false statements and belonged to a class of persons who are at the best not reliable witnesses. Mahadeo v. The King. 37 Cr. L. J. 914 (P. C.).

44 L. W. 253 : (1936) A. L. J. 869 : 40 C. W. N. 1164 : (1936) M. W. N. 889 : (1936) Cr. C. 757 : 9 R. P. C. 51 : 38 Bom. L. R. 1101 (P. C.) : 163 I. C. 681 : A. I. R. 1936 P. C. 242.

Corroboration—Rule of law.

There is no rule of law or practice that the self-incriminating portion of the evidence of an accomplice is unworthy of belief unless corroborated. The credibility of a witness who says that he and another joined in committing an offence stands per se so far as his self-accusation is concerned on the same footing as that of a witness who says that he alone committed an offence though in the latter instance there would be a narrow basis for cross-examination to test his own self-accusation. What must first be decided is whether the witness in question is in truth an accomplice or is merely posing as an accomplice. When it is once established that he is an accomplice then the next practical question arises who are the other accomplices and it is at that stage when his evidence implicating others has to be weighed, and when comes into application the maxim that it is unsafe to convict upon the evidence of an accomplice unless he is corroborated in material particulars both as to the circumstances of the offence and the identity of the person whom he implicates. Emperor v. Hanmant Vasudeo Mulgund. 1 Cr. L. J. 412 : S. C. 6 Bom. L. R. 443.

—————Evidence—Value of.

The rule of evidence contained in S. 133, Evidence Act, and in S. 114 (b) amounts to nothing more than a direction to all Judges and Magistrates that a fact cannot be held proved, within the meaning of S. 3, if there be no other evidence of it than the statement of an unreliable witness. *Ramchand v. —————Evidence—Value of.

Per Boddam, J.—An accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars. Where there is no such corroboration, it will be the duty of a Judge to direct the Jury that there is no sufficient evidence before them upon which they will be justified in finding an accused guilty. A Judge who combines the functions of Judge and Jury is equally bound to scrutinise an accomplices evidence with great care and to consider whether there is any corroborating evidence when the main evidence is of an accomplice character. *Ramaswami Gounden v. If a witness has made himself an agent for the prosecution before associating with the wrong-doers or before the actual perpetration of the offence, he is not an accomplice, and his evidence does not stand in need of corroboration; but he may be an accomplice if he extends no aid to the prosecution until after the offence has been committed. An Excise Deputy Collector deputed B to purchase cocaine from the accused and B purchased it with money supplied by the Excise Sub-Inspector and handed the same over to the Deputy Collector. The accused was tried for illicit sale of cocaine. B in the evidence deposed to the purchase of cocaine from the accused under instructions from the Excise Deputy Collector who stated that he gave such instructions and received the cocaine from him. ———Court Resident at Aden—Review of Criminal case by Bombay High Court—Certificate of the Advocate-General—High Court can go only into questions of law.

There is nothing in S. 29 which can operate either by express words or by necessary implication, to limit the application of Ss. 29 and 30 to cases tried by the Resident as a Court of Session or to exclude appeals from their purview. S. 30 empowers and requires the High Court of Bombay to review the case or such part of it as may be necessary with reference only to the points of law specified in the certificate of the Advocate-General, and the section does not contemplate that any decision by the Resident on a point of fact should be questioned in review, save in so far as such decision may be dependent for its validity on the determination of a point of law mentioned in the certificate. *Emperor v. ADMIRALTY —Collision—Negligence—Principles regulating determination of liability—Method of investigating into cause of accident—Prosecution under Calcutta Pilot Act, XII of 1889.

In every collision case, whether it occurs on land or at sea, the same tests are to be applied for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of the accident, although, where the Court is of opinion that the damage was caused by the fault of two or more vessels, the rule in admiralty for assessing liability is different, for the Court in that event must allocate the liability to make good the loss or damage "in proportion to the degree in which each was in fault." If the cause of the damage is the combined operation of more acts than one, such acts need not be synchronous, for in order to establish that the damage was caused by more acts than one it is essential to prove, not that the damage was the result of two or more simultaneous acts, but that it was the effect of the concurrent operation of those acts which in combination were the cause of it. In investigating the cause of an accident the Court must be careful to keep the material incidents in their true perspective, and not to attach undue importance to the particular times and exact situations to which witnesses on various occasions have deposed. The circumstances attending a collision should thoroughly be examined, and great care should be exercised by the authorities concerned before a prosecution in respect of it is launched against a pilot under Act XII of 1889. In re, Rabenfels, 31 Cr. —Accused's written statement—Conviction based on partial statement, legality of.

It is settled law that the case for the prosecution must be proved by the evidence of the Crown witnesses and cannot be based upon the partial admission of the accused in his defence. A written statement filed by the accused is either to be accepted in toto or to be rejected in toto and a portion of the contents of that statement cannot be used to base the conviction of the accused. Rameshwar v. Emperor. 29 Cr. L. J. 763 :

—By accused—Charge of giving false evidence.

When a person charged with giving false evidence has admitted both in his examination and in his defence that he made the statement which is alleged to be false, the conviction is not necessarily illegal by reason of the fact that no evidence of the identity of the accused with the person who made the alleged false statement was adduced. Abbas Ali v. Emperor. 4 Cr. L. J. 471 :

3 L. B. R. 208 (F. B).

—By witness that previous statement is false.

Where in cross-examination a witness admits that a statement previously made by him relative to a certain fact is a false statement, he ought to be asked in re-examination by the prosecution, or at any rate by the Court, why he made a statement which was false. The mere fact that the witness acknowledges the previous statement to be false is no justification for rejecting such previous statement, if on other grounds the Court is able to reach the conclusion that that statement is in substance true. *Sushil Chandra v. To be an admission, it is not necessary that a document should have been written by the person against whom it is sought to be used ; it is sufficient if it be proved that the document has been in his possession and that his conduct in reference to it has been such as to create an inference that he was aware of its contents and admitted their accuracy. Unless this be done, the document cannot be used as proof of its contents. What conduct would properly give rise to such an inference must necessarily depend on the circumstances of each case. Mere possession of letters would not ordinarily go for such, and the value of such possession must largely depend upon whether it can be shown that their contents have been recognized and adopted by the replies they may have elicited, or the conduct they may have inspired. If no such consequence can be traced, their value must necessarily be materially discounted. Barindra Kumar v. Emperor. 11 Cr. L. J. 453 : 7 I. C. 359 : 37 Cal. 467 : 14 C. W. N. 1114.

Document in possession of accused.

For a document to amount to an admission, it is not necessary that it should have been written by the person against whom it is sought to be used. Mere possession of the document would not ordinarily go for much ; but it is sufficient if it be proved that the document has been in his possession, and that his conduct in reference to it has been such as to create an inference that he was aware of its contents and admitted their accuracy. The rule would apply more strongly where the document was received or written by the person against whom it is sought to be used. Lalit Chandra v. Emperor.

It is disgraceful on the part of an Advocate to arrange to get from his client, in addition to the fee agreed upon, an inam or a present if he is successful in the case. A Barrister does not get rid of his original obligation to his client and the Court if he fails in his attempt to extort from his clients a supplemental fee. Where an Advocate demanded from his client a supplemental fee at the last moment and, on the client's failure to satisfy the demand, did not appear and argue a criminal appeal in which he had been duly engaged : Held, that the Advocate's demand under the circumstances was nothing less than an attempt to levy blackmail and that his conduct amounted to gross misconduct of his profession. *Advocate-General v. ADVOCATE.

———Misconduct—Publication of articles in a newspaper by the Advocate defaming Judges.

Any act which tends to discredit or bring into contempt the order of Advocates or the Court amounts to misconduct of which the High Court can take notice. Acts which on the part of a private individual offend against the dignity of the Court or are calculated to prejudice the course of Justice and are in his case contempts of Court do not cease to be acts of misconduct because they are committed by an Advocate. Rather are they aggravated inasmuch as the Advocate is bound to uphold and maintain the dignity of the Court. Acts which scandalise the Court as libels on its integrity, or its Judges, officers and proceedings are all instances of such misconduct. Hence when an Advocate published in a paper published by him articles throwing discredit upon the Judges of the Court in various ways, and his defence inter alia was that he had done so in his capacity of Editor and not in his capacity of Advocate of the Court, held that he was guilty of professional misconduct and the High Court had power to deal with him under S. 8 of the Letters Patent (Allahabad) and Rule 2 of the Rules of the Court. In re : Sarvadhicary.

3 A. L. J. 592 : A. W. N. 1906 226 (F. B.).

———Professional misconduct—Advising clients.

Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council expressed disapproval of the view that a professional man acting for clients, and taking part in connection with the execution of a compromise directly arising out of the matter in which he is employed, is not bound to warn his clients if they are acting in ignorance of the nature of what they are doing while he is in a position to inform them or under a mistake as to their rights which he could correct, unless expressly asked by them on the subject. An Advocate, was charged with professional misconduct on two counts, and having been found guilty was suspended from practice for a period of four months. The charges were :

(1) That he being at the time the legal adviser of the parties, and knowing and believing at the time of the execution of the document that it was worthless and valueless, did either wrongfully advise and induce the execution thereof by the said parties, or did allow them to remain under the belief that the said document was legal and valid, in that he at their request attested the same ; (2) That being the legal adviser and as such bound to advise the parties as to the effect upon their rights to the property of the deceased of the execution of another document, did not give them the advice they were entitled to expect, and did thereby allow them to execute the said document, which he at the time, according to his admission knew and believed to be worthless as a legally binding agreement, and by attesting the said document, induced the clients to believe that it was legal and binding. Held, reversing the order, (as to the first aspect) of the charge that in allowing his clients to execute the documents under the circumstances the Advocate was not guilty of such professional misconduct as justly to call for punishment. Held, also, (as to the second aspect of the charge) that there was a decided opinion in the case that the

AGENCY TRACTS

—Sub-Divisional Magistrate also acting as Assistant Agent—Duty to indicate the capacity in which he is trying a case—Failure to do so—Appeal to Sessions Judge—Calling for report from Magistrate, propriety of—Question of jurisdiction—Report of Magistrate, whether conclusive.

Though it is the same officer who exercises jurisdiction in the two capacities of District Magistrate and Government Agent of an Agency tract, the capacities are quite different not only as regards the territorial limits within which the authority is to be exercised but in other respects as well. A Magistrate who exercises an authority as a Sub-Divisional Magistrate in the plains and as Assistant Agent in an Agency tract must bear in mind the particular capacity in which he acts in a particular case and must indicate the same in his proceedings. Laxity in this respect should not be encouraged and the Magistrate should not be permitted to rectify the omission later on by making a special report after the case has been disposed of, as to the capacity in which he acted. A report made by a Magistrate after pronouncing his judgment cannot be used to contradict or vary what is contained in the judgments themselves. The question whether a Sessions Judge has jurisdiction or not to entertain an appeal in such a case does not depend upon the report of the Subordinate Magistrate as to the capacity in which he acted but on the real facts of the case to be ascertained by the Judge. In re Alla Satyam.

Although there is nothing in S. 417, Criminal Procedure Code, to indicate that an appeal from an acquittal should receive any different treatment from any other appeal or class of appeals, there is a distinction of considerable practical significance between an appeal from an acquittal, and one from a conviction. When an accused has been acquitted by a Magistrate after hearing all the evidence against him, the presumption is that there was at least reasonable doubt, and the appellate Court must be positively convinced that there was no such reasonable doubt before it can set aside the acquittal. So that in an appeal from an acquittal, the benefit of all doubt shown to exist is against the appellant, whereas, in an appeal from a conviction the benefit of all reasonable doubt has to be given in favour of the appellant. *Emperor v. Jurisdiction—Powers of Appellate Court restricted by original Court's jurisdiction—Appellate Court cannot pass sentence beyond Court's power—Enhancement of sentence—Commutation of imprisonment into fine.

It is a rule underlying the whole fabric of appellate jurisdiction that the power of an Appellate Court is measured by the power of the Court from whose judgment or order the appeal before it has been made. Every Court of appeal exists for the purpose where necessary, of doing or causing to be done that which each Court subordinate to its appellate jurisdiction should have, but has not, done or caused to be done, and nothing further. An Appellate Court cannot, on appeal, pass a sentence which the original Magistrate was not competent to pass. All jurisdiction starts with the first Court and remains a constant factor throughout all subsequent stages of the suit or proceeding governed by it. An appellate Court, which alters a sentence of imprisonment into a sentence of fine, cannot inflict a fine beyond the maximum which could have been imposed by the first Court. The altered sentence, taken as a whole, must be such as was within the power of the original Court to pass. The substitution of fine for imprisonment is a merciful commutation of punishment, and does not constitute an enhancement in the severity of the sentence. Sita Ram v. Emperor.

Jurisdiction—Magistrate passing non-appealable sentence—Subsequent enhancement to make it appealable.

A Magistrate first passed a non-appealable sentence on an accused but at the request of the accused he enhanced the sentence so as to make it appealable. The accused appealed to the Sessions Judge who dismissed the appeal on the preliminary ground that no appeal lay as the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to alter his sentence after he had delivered and signed his judgment: Held, that the Sessions Judge committed an error in holding that he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Although the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to alter his sentence, yet for the purposes of the Sessions Judge's jurisdiction, so far as the appeal was concerned, that was the very mistake which the Judge was called upon to correct by way of appeal. *Emperor v. The Benares State came into existence on 1st April 1911 and the territory in which the offence was committed was transferred to that State. On 10th April 1911, the Sessions Judge made a reference to the High Court recommending that his order for re-trial of 3rd April was made without jurisdiction and that it be declared null and void: Held, that the order was perfectly valid and was made with jurisdiction. *Emperor v. In cases where a large number of persons have been arrested by the Police and confessions are obtained one after the other, it is likely enough that those confessions should agree with each other and each man would be likely to name, as far as possible, those persons who have already been named in the previous confessions. The fact of any particular person having been named in the confessions of more than one of the co-accused cannot, therefore, be regarded as sufficiently reliable corroboration of the statement of the approver. — Evidence—Accomplice—Evidence, rule of—Corroboration—Quantity of corroboration.

The law, as such, does not require any corroboration to validate the testimony of an accomplice. The rule of practice which does lay down this requirement must be applied with due regard to the varying circumstances of each particular case. The corroboration is necessary not only quoad the incidents and circumstances of the crime but also quoad the identity or personality of the offenders. There is no rule, whether of law or practice, which seeks to furnish an inflexible canon as to the precise degree of corroboration which, in all cases, should be demanded for an accomplice's evidence. The law does not require that every detail of the approver's story should be fortified by a similar story told by an independent witness, since the effect of any such principle would be to rule out the accomplice's evidence as altogether inadmissible. It is only necessary that accomplice's evidence should, in the circumstances of each particular case, receive that corroboration which it seems to require. Emperor v. Kuberappa.

The evidence of an approver should not be believed without material corroboration, and in order to see whether there is such a corroboration, it is the duty of the Court to scrutinize and marshal out very carefully the proof relating thereto. Where this duty has not been properly performed by the lower Court, the High Court will interfere on the Revision side and set aside even the concurrent finding of the Court below. Manna v. Emperor. 12 Cr. L. J. 35 : 9 I. C. 232 : 3 P. W. R. 1911, Cr.

—————Evidence—Corroboration—Find of unidentifiable article, whether amounts to corroboration of approver's evidence.

In a case of dacoity a find of sugar claimed by the complainant as stolen in the dacoity can be relied on as a circumstance corroborating an approver's evidence even though sugar is not an article capable of identification. Ram Sarup Singh v. Emperor. 32 Cr. L. J. 72 : 128 I. C. 121 : 9 Pat. 606 : I. R. (1931) Pat. 9 : 11 P. L. T. 867 : A. I. R. 1930, Pat. 513.

—————Evidence—Corroboration—Nature of charge to jury—How far approver to be believed is matter for jury.

The question how far an approver is to be believed is a matter essentially for the Jury. It is not, therefore, open to the Judge to tell the Jury that the approver is an out-and-out liar. Where the Judge in his charge to the Jury stated as follows: "The fact, therefore, that the approver says that a certain one of the accused was not present at the dacoity does not prove that prisoner guiltless unless you are satisfied that the approver is really telling the truth:" Held, that the Judge was not bound to ask the Jury to deal with the approver as a witness who was either truthful or untruthful, as an approver's story may be true in some parts, but not in others, and the direction was not erroneous. Ramsarup Singh v. Emperor. 32 Cr. L. J. 72 : 128 I. C. 121 : 9 Pat. 606 : I. R. (1931) Pat. 9 : 11 P. L. T. 867 : A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 513 :

APPROVER.

—————Evidence—Corroboration, necessity of—Evidence, if discarded must be discarded as a whole.

The evidence of an approver must be corroborated in material particulars and those material particulars should connect the accused persons with the crime. If the evidence of an approver is discarded, it must be discarded as a whole and the defence cannot base arguments on it any more than the prosecution. Shco Barhi v. Emperor. 32 Cr. L. J. 5 : 127 I. C. 566 : 11 P. L. T. 520 : I. R. (1930) Pat. 710 : A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 164.

—————Evidence—Corroboration—Omission of warning to jury—Conviction, legality of.

Per Courtney Terrel, C. J.—In view of the rule according to which the evidence of an accomplice must be regarded with grave suspicion, it is the practice, amounting almost to a rule of law, that a Jury must be warned expressly of the danger in accepting the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, and if the warning is omitted, a conviction based upon such uncorroborated evidence must be set aside. Ratan Dhanuk v. Emperor. 30 Cr. L. J. 137 : 113 I. C. 329 : 9 P. L. T. 672 : 8 Pat. 235 : A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 630.

—————Evidence—Corroboration—Retracted confession of co-accused—Conviction for murder—Independent corroboration, necessity of.

It is unsafe to convict an accused for murder on the testimony of an approver and retracted confession of a co-accused, especially when they are in conflict with each other and there is no independent corroboration. Parmeshwar v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 1207 : 82 I. C. 135 : 11 O. L. J. 325 : (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 369.

—————Evidence—Corroboration—Tainted evidence.

Evidence that is itself tainted cannot be useful for purposes of corroboration of tainted evidence. A wife who knows all about a proposal to murder her husband and is a consenting party to the commission of the crime is in the position of an accomplice and her evidence should not ordinarily be accepted either as corroborative of the evidence of an approver or as sufficient, apart from independent corroboration, to justify the conviction of the accused. Ahmad Nur v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 597 : 68 I. C. 821 : 4 U. P. L. R. (L.) 110.

—————Evidence—Corroboration held, not sufficient.

Evidence to prove that certain accused persons were seen on certain occasions with the gang of the dacoits before and after dacoity and particularly where that evidence is unsatisfactory, is not sufficient to corroborate the approver's statement so as to make it admissible against the said accused. Chet Singh v. Emperor. 7 Cr. L. J. 227 : 2 P. W. R. Cr. 86.

APPROVER.

Evidence—Corroboration, necessity of.

An accused person should not be convicted solely upon the evidence of an approver. To support a conviction, the approver's evidence must be corroborated in material particulars. Emperor v. Mathuri.

8 R. A. 928 (2) : 58 A. 695 :
A. I. R. 1936 All. 337.

Evidence—Corroboration, necessity of.

In the absence of reliable corroboration as to the identity of the accused and other material particulars, no reliance can be placed on the evidence of an approver (especially where he exonerates himself). Kailash Chandra Rishi v. Emperor.

30 Cr. L. J. 57 :
113 I. C. 73 : 48 C. L. J. 481 :
I. R. 1929 Cal. 77.

Evidence—Corroboration of, necessary for.

No conviction can be based on the evidence of an approver without clear and independent corroboration. Evidence in corroboration of the statement of an approver must be evidence tending to prove that the particular person to whom it relates was guilty of the offence charged; it is not sufficient that it should merely corroborate the general accuracy of the story told by the approver. Evidence dealing with facts outside the knowledge of the approver would amount to a corroboration of the approver's statement, if it tends to prove the guilt of the particular accused with reference to the offence charged. Gaya Din v. Emperor.

11 Cr. L. J. 551 :
7 I. C. 1006 : 13 O. C. 235.

Evidence—Corroboration, necessity of.

Obiter.—It is not imperative that in every case there should be corroboration of the evidence of an approver though no doubt as a matter of precaution it is, generally speaking, desirable that there should be some sort of corroboration. Sarat Chandra Dhupri v. Emperor.

151 I. C. 473 : 7 R. C. 133 :
A. I. R. 1934 Cal. 719 (S. B.).

Evidence—Nature of—Value of.

Per Courtney Terrel, C. J.—The evidence of an approver does not differ from the evidence of any other witness save in one particular respect, namely, that the evidence of an accomplice is regarded ab initio as open to grave suspicion. Accordingly, if the suspicion which attaches to the evidence of an accomplice be not removed that evidence should not be acted upon unless corroborated in some material particular, and, if the suspicion attaching to the accomplice's evidence be removed, then that evidence may be acted upon even though uncorroborated and the guilt of the accused may be established upon that evidence alone. Ratan Dhanuk v. Emperor.

Evidence—Statement of, as to his accomplices—Corroboration, necessity of—Corroborative statement made after long delay, reliability of.

The statement of an approver as to who were his accomplices must be corroborated by reliable evidence before it can form the basis of a conviction. Where the corroboration offered is the statement of two men who apparently knew something about the matter from the very beginning but refused to make any statement until the third day of the Police investigation, the statement must be regarded with suspicion and as not sufficient corroboration. Fatta v. Emperor.

Evidence—Value of.

A conviction cannot be based entirely on a statement made by an approver.

12 Cr. L. J. 537.

Evidence—Necessity of corroboration.

There is no bar to the conviction of an accused person even on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver if the Court is fully satisfied about its truth. But the testimony of an approver being usually of a tainted character, the Courts, as a matter of prudence, insist generally on some material corroboration thereof in so far as it implicates the accused person. The extent of corroboration which the Court will insist on, will, however, naturally vary with the circumstances of each case. If the approver's evidence appears to be on the whole reliable and he has no motive for implicating an accused person falsely, the corroboration required will be comparatively less. Shajang v. Emperor.

Evidence—Corroboration—Retracted confession of co-accused.

The testimony of an approver, which is itself tainted, cannot be held to be sufficiently corroborated by a retracted confession of a co-accused. Kanshi Ram v. Emperor.

—Statement by—Made at end of trial, value of—Corroboration.

An approver's evidence is in itself tainted evidence though in some cases it may be worthy of belief for various reasons, but the uncorroborated statement of an approver taken at the end of the trial is of no value whatever. *Sundar Singh v. A piece of lead in the shape of a bullet or in the shape of shot is certainly ammunition or a part of ammunition. Lead, as such, which is not in such a shape, is excluded from the meaning of the term. Emperor v. Bhopal Singh. 37 Cr. L. J. 727 :

—Air-gun—similar to "Gem" air-gun—not adapted for use with explosive substances—whether it is a toy—whether it comes under definition of arms.

The air-gun in case was said to be similar to the "Gem" air-gun, which is not adapted for use with explosive substances. Moreover, "Gem" air-guns had been classed as toys by the Government for the purposes of the Tariff Act : Held, that the air-gun in question was a toy and did not come under the definition of arms. Emperor v. Maung Shwe The. 4 Cr. L. J. 239 : 12 Bur. L. R. 201.

The expression "all parts of ammunition," as used in S. 4 includes empty cartridge cases. Emperor v. Ebrahim Alibhoy. 2 Cr. L. J. 449 : 7 Bom. L. R. 474.

ARMS ACT.

—S. 4.—Arms—Dah—Criterion for determining whether dah an arm.

In determining whether any given dah is an arm within the meaning of that term in S. 4, the true criterion is the "intention of the maker as regards its purpose." A dah having a blade 22½ inches long, not intended for domestic purposes, is an arm. Po Mc v. Emperor.

—S. 4—"Arms," definition of—Cook's knife whether an arm—Primary intention of manufacturer.

Primarily manufactured for culinary purposes, a cook's knife however carried or intended to be used, is not converted into an arm notwithstanding that it is provided with a sheath. The purpose for which an implement is primarily intended decides whether it is an arm or not. Crown v. Nga Hmat Kyan, 1 L. B. R. 271 : Ebrahim Dacoodji Babi Barea v. King-Emperor, 3 L. B. —S. 4—"Arm," definition of—Dashe-upyat, whether an arm—Weapon used for domestic and agricultural purposes—Test—Intention of manufacturer and not of possessor material.

A weapon primarily intended for domestic and agricultural purposes, even if it can be used for purposes of offence and defence, is not an arm within the meaning of the Act. It is the intention of the manufacturer, and not of the possessor of a weapon as to the use to which it is to be put, which determines whether a weapon is an arm or not. Therefore, a dashe-upyat of the usual type is not an arm within the meaning of the Arms Act. Emperor v. Hamyji, 11 Cr. L. J. 744 :

8 I. C. 972 : 5 L. B. R. 207 : 3 Bur. L. T. 91.

—S. 4—Arms, definition of—Sword-stick, if sword.

A sword-stick is a sword sheathed in a cane-stick and comes within the definition of arms in S. 4. The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Satish Chandra, 6 Cr. L. J. 227 :

11 C. W. N. 971 : I. L. R. 34 Cal. 749 :

—S. 4—"Arms," definition of—Weapon, dangerous and probably deadly—Whether 'arm.'

The definition of "arms" in the Arms Act is neither exhaustive nor altogether happy.

The mere fact that a weapon is dangerous and, if used, may probably cause death, does not make it "arms" within the meaning of S. 4 of the Arms Act. Gajja v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L. J. 658 :

A. I. R. 1914 Oudh 285.

—S. 4—Arms, definition of, whether exhaustive—Hunting knives, whether arms.

S. 4 does not purport to give an inclusive definition of arms. Hunting knives fall within S. 4, and are, therefore, subject to the provision contained in S. 5. Bishan Singh v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J. 1119 :

ARMS ACT.

—S. 4—"Arms," if includes "fire arms."

Unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context, wherever the word "arms" occurs in the Indian Arms Act, it has got to be read as including "parts of arms." By S. 4 of the Act the word "arms" also includes "fire-arms." Harsha Nath Chatterjee v. Emperor, 16 Cr. L. J. 9 :

—S. 4—Arms, if must be in serviceable condition.

It is not necessary that an arm or a part of an arm should be in a serviceable condition before it can fall within the definitⁿ contained in S. 4. Karam Din v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J. 539 :

77 I. C. 1003 : A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 617.

—S. 4—"Arms," meaning of—Weapon of domestic use, whether 'arm.'

It is the purpose for which an implement is primarily used which determines the question whether it does or does not fall within the definition of "arms" given in S. 4. Implements of ordinary domestic use like an axe or a knife cannot be brought within the purview of the definition of "arms" in the section by the mere fact that they have been on a particular occasion used as weapons of offence or defence. Mehr Din v. Emperor, 28 Cr. L. J. 199 :

99 I. C. 935 : A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 162.

—S. 4—"Arm," out of order if falls within S. 4.

An arm, even out of order, comes within the definition of 'arm' in S. 4. Emperor v. Samiullah, 7 Cr. L. J. 350.

—S. 4—"Arms," what are—Definition whether exhaustive—Test.

The definition of the expression "arms" as given in the Act is not, and is not intended to be, exhaustive, and the true meaning of the term must be arrived at by consideration of the circumstances in each case. Neither the length, breadth or the form of the blade of a weapon, nor the handle affords any certain test of its classification as "arms." Whatever can be used as an instrument of attack or defence and is not an ordinary implement for domestic purposes falls within the purview of the Act. Emperor v. Ralla Singh, 20 Cr. L. J. 11 :

48 I. C. 486 : 32 P. R. 1918 Cr. :
A. I. R. 1919 Lah. 472.

—S. 4—"Arms," what are.

Whatever can be used as an instrument of attack of defence, for cutting as well as for thrusting and is not an ordinary implement for domestic purposes, comes within the meaning of the statute. The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Satish Chandra, 6 Cr. L. J. 227 :

6 C. L. J. 751.

—S. 4—"Arm," what is—Test—Clasp knife whether 'arm.'

It cannot be laid down as a hard and fast rule that a clasp knife does not fall within the definition of 'arms.' The purpose for which an implement is primarily intended regulates whether it should be deemed to be 'arms.' Where a knife had a blade 5½ inches long with

The entry in Schedule II to the Arms Rules which excludes "kirpans possessed or carried by Sikhs" from the prohibitions and directions contained in the Arms Act, refers to kirpans actually in existence and in the possession of or carried by Sikhs. But the entry does not exempt the manufacture of kirpans from the operation of the prohibition contained in S. 5 of the Arms Act. —Ss. 14, 15—Prosecution under—Duty of prosecution—Possession of arms in furtherance of terrorist movement—Offence under.

In a prosecution for possession of fire-arms in contravention of Ss. 14 and 15, it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove that the fire arms were possessed in contravention of Ss. 14 and 15. The fact that these fire-arms have been possessed in furtherance of terrorist movements is not in itself an offence under the Act. It may be that there is a conspiracy to commit terrorist crimes and it may be that there is a conspiracy to possess fire-arms in contravention of the Act. But the two things are not the same. From the fact of being members of an organisation, the object of which is to commit terroristic offences, it would not follow in the absence of other evidence, that the accused were also parties to a criminal conspiracy for the specific and definite purpose of possessing fire-arms in contravention of the Arms Act. It is a fallacy to suppose that merely because one was a member of the larger organisation, one was also a member of the smaller organisation although the immediate objects of the two were not one and the same. *Bimal Krishna Biswas v. —S. 19 (a), Sch. II (7) (a)—Possession of lead by people selling nets—No offence.

Certain iron-mongers of a place which was the headquarters of a large fishery industry were charged under S. 19 (a), with being in possession of lead in large quantities without licence. Some of them pleaded guilty and were not represented by counsel. The Magistrate merely asked them whether they admitted having the lead for sale without licence and convicted them on their plea of guilty. They applied in revision to the Sessions Judge stating that they were vendors of nets and that the lead was used for manufacturing nets. He refused to take action. On application to the High Court: Held, that under the circumstances the Magistrate should, in his examination of the accused, have put some question to them with a view to elucidating whether they were prima facie vendors of lead for industrial, that is, fishing purposes and as the presumption was that they were selling the lead in good faith for industrial purposes there was no ground for the conviction of the accused. *Ali Hossain v. A miscellaneous collection of arms and ammunition was found in a house belonging to the accused. Except the fact that the arms and ammunition were found in the accused's house, there was no other evidence for the prosecution. The defence was that the contraband property must have been foisted into the house and an attempt was made to prove by positive evidence that persons had been seen tampering with the roof of the house on the night before the property was seized. The articles found were not prima facie the type of articles which would be kept by a man who wished to shoot with a gun or a revolver without a licence most of them being quite unserviceable and there was a mass of miscellaneous collection of cartridges some of which might and some of which could not fit the gun or revolver: Held, that the property found of itself suggested the possibility that the plea of foisting put forward might not be altogether unreasonable, and that a sufficient element of reasonable doubt was introduced to make it possible that the plea might be true so as to warrant his acquittal. In re Ramalinga Goundan.

The expression "going armed" within the meaning of Cl. (c) of S. 19 indicates, first an intention to use the weapon as a fire-arm, and secondly, the possibility of using it. For the purpose of a conviction under Cl. (c), there must be some clear evidence of intention on the part of the accused to use the weapon. Where in a prosecution under the section, it was found that the accused had only one empty cartridge in his fire-arm and no cartridges at all were found on the person of the accused and there was no proof of the accused having ever previously used the fire-arm : Held, that the accused could not be convicted of an offence under S. 19 (c). In re: Sonai Muthu Ambalam.

The word "arms" as defined in S. 4, includes part of arms. contrary, be presumed to be carrying it with the intention of using it, should an opportunity for using it arise. S. 13 itself as it stands is distinct from S. 14, as it implies the action or process of going armed. If arms according to the definition, are carried, the requirements of the section are fulfilled even where the weapon could not immediately be fired. Any other interpretation would open the way to evasion of the law by carrying caps or cartridges secretly or in the keeping of a companion. Local Government v. Gajraj Singh. 38 Cr. L. ———Ss. 19 (e), (f), 29—Sanction to prosecute—Illegal possession of fire-arms—Previous sanction—Institution of proceedings—Charge.

The accused was sent up for trial under S. 19 (e). After hearing the prosecution, the Magistrate charged him in the alternative with this offence and under S. 19 (f). The sanction of the District Magistrate, required under S. 29, was not obtained till after the framing of the charge. The accused was finally convicted under S. 19 (f): Held, that proceedings under cl. (f) were not instituted until the Magistrate framed the charge under that clause. Although the charge was actually framed without jurisdiction, the Magistrate might have instituted proceedings afresh, after receiving sanction, by framing a fresh charge; and as the accused had not been in any way prejudiced by the procedure adopted, the absence of a fresh charge after the receipt of sanction was cured by S. 535 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment under S. 19 (f) for the offence of being in possession of unlicensed revolver is not appropriate. If it had been the case of some other unlicensed weapon having been found in the possession of an accused person, a sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment might well be considered to be adequate. The case of pistol or revolver stands on a somewhat different footing. It is a dangerous weapon and can easily change hands without detection. The chances of a weapon of that kind falling into the hands of dangerous persons are not very remote. Sentence was enhanced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. Emperor v. Bishwanath.

Held, that the Notification of the U. P. Government No. 10-N-VIII, dated May 9, 1934, does not prohibit the possession of a spear-head in the District of Ghazipur. The word "spear" used in the Notification must be interpreted in the sense in which that word is used in S. 4 of the Act, and as a spear is used in that section in contra-distinction to spear-head, a spear cannot be held to include a spear-head. In the case of a licensed weapon a person who merely assist the owner of the weapon by carrying it for him or taking it somewhere for him may be said to assist his master in doing a perfectly legal act, for the master being the licensee is entitled to have the gun in his possession. But in the case of an unlicensed weapon neither the actual owner of the gun nor anybody to whom he entrusts it, can be said to be engaged in a legal act, for the possession in that case is illegal whether it be in the possession of the master or of a servant. But where it is not proved that the accused had knowledge that the gun which he was carrying for his master was unlicensed, the offence does not call for a serious punishment. *Emperor v. S. 20 applies only to cases where the import or export of arms is attempted and not to every case of possession or concealment of arms. When a man is in illegal possession of arms, he does not usually carry them openly but takes some steps to conceal them from the public. In order, therefore, to bring a case within the meaning of S. 20 of the Act, something more than a mere ordinary concealment should be established. The fact that the accused was carrying a spear-head in the pocket of his waist coat which was worn beneath his shirt does not indicate an intention on his part to conceal the arm from a public servant and the offence committed is one under S. 19 (f) and not S. 20. Nor can any such intention be inferred by the accused running on being called by a Police constable. Harnam Singh v. Emperor.

—Ss. 19 (f), 20.—Concealment, meaning of—Carrying arms in gunny bag—Intention.

For a conviction to fall under S. 20, there must be some special indication of an intention that the possession of arms was being concealed from a public servant or from a Railway Official. Where the arms are carried through a place where it is not anticipated that a public servant would be met, the intention to conceal is not easy to infer. Consequently when a person carried arms wrapped upon in a gunny bag on horse back to an appointed place for sale where he did not expect any public servant to meet, he could not be said to have had an intention to conceal. *Chet Singh v. Where a case under S. 19 (f), is tried by a City Magistrate who is also the Additional District Magistrate empowered with the powers of District Magistrate, it cannot be said that sanction under S. 29 is unnecessary as he himself exercised the powers of the District Magistrate. Even in such a case the trial of the case without sanction under S. 29 is illegal. Sanction under S. 29, would only be granted on a —S. 20—Offence, essence of.

Act must show an intention that such acts may not be known to any public servant.

Merely keeping of a chhavi blade in one's own house and possessing a stick that would fit into it, cannot be regarded as falling within the purview of S. 20. The case would fall more appropriately under the definition of S. 19 (f). Ida v. Emperor, 33 Cr. L. J. 346 (1) : 136 I. C. 724 (1) : 33 P. L. R. 379 : I. R. 1932 Lah. 260 (1) : A. I. ARMS ACT, 1878.

———S. 20—Scope and applicability—Intention to conceal—Determination of.

It is difficult to lay down any general rule as to what cases fall under S. 20 and what cases under S. 19. Every case must be decided on its own facts. The question whether the circumstances justify the inference that the intention was such as is indicated in S. 20 must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. S. 20 is not confined to cases where import or export of arms is attempted and applies to cases where a person is concealing a weapon, be it at a Railway platform as it indicates an intention to conceal it from inter alia Railway officials who are on the platform, or anywhere else. Where the arms and ammunitions are tied up and concealed in such a manner that it must be presumed that the intention of the accused was not only to conceal them from the boys of the school hostel but also from any public servant who may happen to come to the hostel, there is no doubt that the intention of the accused is that his act may not be known to any public servant. 89 I. Per Boys, J.—Section 30 does not itself give any power of search to anybody. It is confined to a statement that when a search is being conducted under the Cr. P. C. in the case of any proceedings instituted in respect of an offence punishable under S. 19 (f), such search is to be conducted in the presence of a particular officer. The section merely places certain restrictions on such powers of search as may otherwise be possessed under the provisions of the Cr. P. C. The words "in the case of any proceedings instituted" were inserted in S. 30 with the intention of restricting all powers of an Investigating Officer in making searches for arms where there was no known unlawful purpose. *Kutroo v. ———S. 2 (1) (e)—Emigration—Intention of recruited person if material.

There is nothing in section 2, sub-clause (e), to indicate or to show that in order to constitute emigration there must be personal intention present to the mind of the person recruited, when he is recruited, to go to a labour district to work there for hire. Manik Ram Ahir v. Emperor.

———S. 2 (1) (e)—Emigration, definition of.

Sub-clause (e) of sub-section (1) of section 2 is merely descriptive of what emigration may mean, and is intended to avoid repetition in the main provisions of the Emigration Act of the various points of departure and destination to and from which it was desired to restrict emigration. This description or interpretation has no concern with the mind of the emigrant or whether the emigration was intentional on the part of the emigrant or otherwise. Manik Ram Ahir v. Emperor.

———S. 164—'Emigration', meaning of—Offence—Conviction.

Emigration, to be emigration within the meaning of the Act, must be emigration with the idea that the object to be attained or kept in view by the emigrant is arrival in a labour district and labouring there. Where the accused induced coolies to leave under a promise that they would be employed as domestic servants in C. but they were in fact taken to Assam to work in the labour districts and the accused were convicted under S. 164: Held, that the conviction was bad, inasmuch as the coolies did not depart from S. with the object of proceeding to a labour district and labouring there. *Manik Ram Ahir v. On the way they stopped at Arrah, and there the accused told L. that he would have to go to Sylhet and placed him in a train in charge of a Sardar for the purpose of ultimately going to that place: Held, that as L. was not induced to leave Cawnpore in order to go to labour at Sylhet, but in order to go to Fiji, no offence under S. 164 was committed at Cawnpore, that L. did not emigrate within the meaning of the Act from Cawnpore and was not induced to emigrate therefrom, that it was not until he arrived at Arrah that any attempt was made to induce him to depart from that place for the purpose of labouring for hire in Sylhet, and that the offence was committed at Arrah, and the Magistrate there had

—S. 164—“Magistrate” meaning of—Repatriation, order for, at cost of owner of garden—Order made by Sub-Deputy Magistrate, if legal—Employer not called upon to show cause—Undue influence or coercion, absence of.

A Sub-Deputy Magistrate, not appointed by the Local Government to perform the functions of a Magistrate under the Act, acquitted certain persons of offences under S. 164 but at the same time passed an order that the proprietor of the garden for which the coolies were recruited should deposit the expenses of repatriation of the coolies. There was nothing to show that there had been any undue influence or coercion and the employer was not called upon to show cause as required by S. 161, that the order was a bad one : Held, that the order of repatriation at the cost of the employer was bad. Emperor v. Ritu Chamar. 15 Cr. L. J. 195 : 22 I. C. 979 : 18 C. W. N. 1143 : A. I. R. 1914 Cal. 615.

—S. 164—Offence under, essentials—Intention of person recruited, if material.

To constitute an offence under S. 164 the recruiter must have present to his mind in the exercise of his powers the purpose for which he recruits, viz., emigration. It matters not that the individual recruited intended to emigrate. Manik Ram Ahir v. Emperor. 18 Cr. L. J. 404 : 38 I. C. 964 : 2 P. L. J. 91 : 1917 Pat. 89 : 2 P. L. W. 357 : A. I. ASSESSORS.

If an accused is running a recruiting concern for his own benefit, either under the guise of a licensed person or independently, without having secured the necessary protection of a licence, he ought to be prosecuted and if convicted, punished according to law but if all that the accused is doing is, for some remuneration, giving genuine assistance to a person authorised to carry on a depot and to recruit, he is not guilty of an offence under the Act. *Qasim Ali v. —Opinion of, how to be taken—cross-examination of assessors is contrary to law.

The cross-examination of the assessors is entirely contrary to law. S. 309 of the Code of Criminal Procedure gives the Judge no power to question the assessors until they have delivered their opinions orally and he has recorded such opinions. If there is anything obscure in their verdicts, there is no objection to the Judge asking questions to clear up such obscurity ; but he is bound to allow the assessors to express their own opinions independently in their own words on the whole case before interfering with them in any way or asking them any question whatever except “what is your opinion.” *Najumuddi v. The Sessions Judge under S. 326, Cr. P. C., had requested the District Magistrate to summon five persons to attend as assessors.

ASSESSORS.

When the case was taken up, only one of those persons was present. Thereupon the Sessions Judge directed that a search should be made as to whether there was any one present in the precincts of the Court who was acquainted with English and who could be required to act as an assessor. The result of the search was that the Nazir of the Court was produced and was directed by the Judge to act as an assessor. The Judge noted that no objection was raised to the course taken by him: Held, that as the Nazir was not a person summoned to act as an assessor, and there was nothing to show that he was on the list of assessors and could have been summoned, the trial was illegal: Held, further, that in the circumstances the Court was not properly constituted and a defect of this kind was not a mere irregularity which could be cured by S. 537, Cr. P. C.: Held, also, that the fact that the appellant did not object to the Nazir's sitting as an assessor was immaterial. Queen-Empress v. Bastirno, 15 Bom. 514 and *King Emperor v. 'Evidence' in the Act has the same meaning as in the Evidence Act, and as evidence is not given before a Police Officer, proceedings before him are not 'legal proceedings' as defined in that Act. Statements made by persons during investigation to a Police Officer are not made on oath; they need not be signed; they need not be made in the presence of the accused; and they are not subject to cross-examination, i.e., they lack many of the characteristics of 'evidence.' An Advocate who was engaged to file a suit, had employed an unregistered clerk to help him and the plaint in the suit was handed over to him for being filed. The client had given the Advocate certain moneys to cover his fees, stamps and other incidental expenses. The clerk, however, failed to file the suit and the Advocate did not take care to ascertain that the suit was filed and thus allowed his clerk to cheat his client. shown for the exercise of the discretion and the permission is not to be granted on mere application. The right of an Advocate of any particular Bar to appear in other High Courts does not exist as a matter of right. The Chief Justice will apply his mind to the circumstances of the application. One of the good reasons is that the Advocate for whom permission is sought to appear has, from the very beginning, in the lower Court, made a complete study of the case and is familiar with its details. Or it may appear that the litigant has his normal residence and carries on his normal business in another province and habitually consults a lawyer of that other province who is familiar with his business : and in such circumstances, again it is reasonable that the Advocate should be allowed to appear. A third circumstance may be the great magnitude of a case, the fact that it raises some extremely new and important questions of principle and of the jurisdiction of the Court, in which case again it may be right and proper that one of the more distinguished Advocates in India should be admitted to argue the case. But the position of the accused as the Acting Chief Manager of a big and important estate is no good reason and the mere fact that the proceedings are in respect of contempt of Court is also not sufficient for granting permission. In the matter of Pandit Girindra Mohan Mishra.

———S. 2, (3), (7), (15)—Manufacture—Dilution of denatured spirit with water, if process for manufacture of excisable article.

The essence of "manufacture" as defined in clause 15 of S. 2 is that it is a process and the mere dilution of denatured spirit with water is not a process for the manufacture of an excisable article, assuming that the diluted liquid is an excisable article within the meaning of the Act. The Act does not intend that spirit which had been effectually and permanently rendered unfit for human consumption should, by reason of mere dilution with water, be deemed to have become an intoxicating liquor within the meaning of the Act. *C. The definition of “Exciseable liquor” given in the Excise Act of 1909, prevents chemists and vendors of drugs from selling intoxicating liquors or otherwise dealing with them as medicinal preparations. Tinctures of Cinchona, Cardamon or Ginger and Spirits of Nitric Ether are not exciseable liquor. The smuggling of drugs prepared in French territory with French spirits in Bond into British territory can be prevented under the Customs Law. Therefore, those articles ought to be dealt with by the Customs Authorities; but the omission of these authorities to do so does not render the accused liable to punishment under the Excise Act. “Juice drawn from any cocoanut” in S. 2, cl. 20, of the Excise Act, does not refer to the milk of the cocoanut itself but means juice of the palm tree of whatever species and not its fruit. The act of taking an order for foreign goods does not constitute an abetment of their transport, though it might be an abetment of their import. Emperor v. Moti Lal Chander.

The opinion of an Excise Officer that a person accused of illicit sale and possession of cocaine had a reputation of being a dealer in such article on a large scale is wholly inadmissible in evidence. This bill of lading with endorsements by B. and Co. and R. was made over by the accused to K. and Co. in order that the goods might be cleared and passed through the Customs House. The goods were found to contain a large quantity of cocaine sought to be illicitly imported. The accused, when apprised of the discovery, professed to be acting on behalf of R. about whom he completely failed to give any clue : Held, that the accused was not in possession of the cocaine as he had no dominion or control over the goods, and, therefore, his conviction under Ss. 46 and 52 could not be supported : Held, further that the accused was liable to be convicted of the offence of attempting to import cocaine in contravention of the Excise Act, and to be punished under S. 61 read with S. 46, Cl. (a) and S. 2, Cl. (12).

The High Court, under Ss. 236 and 237 of the Cr. P. C. convicted the accused of the offence although he was not charged with it. Kali Charan Mukherjee v. Emperor. 15 Cr. L. J. 4 :

The Act provides for the punishment of an attempt to render fit for consumption denatured spirit, but it does not provide any punishment for a successful attempt, i.e., the completed act. ———Ss. 63, 64 (1)—Any liquor "lawfully had in possession along with and in addition to" liquor liable to confiscation—Person in possession, whether should be guilty of offence—Licit liquor on different premises from illicit liquor, effect of.

Under S. 63, any liquor lawfully "had in possession along with or in addition to any liquor liable to confiscation under S. 63 (1) is likewise liable to confiscation. It is immaterial who is the person in possession ; all that the sub-section requires is that some person should be in possession at some point of time subsequent to the commission of an excise offence, both of the illicit liquor and also of some licit liquor. When this condition is fulfilled, the licit liquor is confiscated equally with the illicit. The sub-section does not say that the person in possession need be guilty of any offence, and the Proviso to the sub-section distinctly implies that in the case of liquor even the owner need not be guilty. The section has to be construed according to its plain language. The fact that the licit liquor was on different premises from illicit is immaterial ; the point is that it was lawfully "had in possession" "in addition to" the illicit liquor. Therefore, the additional liquor is liable to confiscation under S. 63 (2). The fact that the person in possession of licit has not been prosecuted for or convicted of any offence is entirely irrelevant to the construction of S. 63 (2). *Ezekiel Ephraim Ezekiel v. BENGAL FERRIES ACT, 1885.

Liability for damages—Injunction—Carriage of passengers or property—Offence—Several offences, trial of—Procedure.

The maintenance of a private ferry is in contravention of S. 16 and the person maintaining it may be liable for damages and an injunction may also be issued against him. If, however, in addition to maintaining such a prohibited private ferry, he carries passengers or property, he is liable criminally under S. 28 and each time he conveys passengers or property for hire he commits an offence. Each trip is a separate transaction and can be tried separately. Where several trips are made within the course of a few days, the proper procedure is for the Magistrate to try the accused at one time only in respect of three of these transactions and to use the remaining transactions as evidence in the case for the purpose of determining the amount of the damages payable under the Act. If a conviction is obtained in respect of transactions selected for trial, the Court should stay the inquiry into or trial of the other charges which will have the effect of the acquittal of the accused on those charges subject to the event of the conviction being set aside on appeal or revision. If the conviction is set aside, the Magistrate may proceed with the trial of or inquiry into other charges. Jacobaran Singh v. Ramkrishun Lal. 27 Cr. L. J. 359 :

The proprietor of a village who merely leases out the ferry to lessees but does neither convey passengers nor collect tolls from them is not liable. Abdul Ghani v. Emperor.

The presumption in case of prosecution for sale of adulterated ghee would be that the ghee in the sample contained some substance other than the milk fat of cows or buffaloes. But inasmuch as in the case of ghee the notification is more severe than the conditions laid down in S. 6, the presumption would be of very little help to the prosecution. Under S. 6 ghee may contain curds and the prosecution would have to show that the additional constituents presumed to be present were something other than curds. The essential thing is that the rules under the Act should refer to deficiencies in or additions to any article of food, that is to say, they must lay down the absence of some-

"Possession" in S. 6 (4) means actual physical possession. Mere possession of any of the articles referred to therein is not an offence under the Act, but from the fact of possession a presumption is to be drawn which will establish an offence. The word "possession" cannot be extended to include "constructive possession." The fact that the ghee was not deposited in any place for the purpose of sale, but it was in transit, need not militate against the presumption of storing for sale. *Ram Charita Ram Bhakat v. —S. 139.—Bye-law—Encroachment, what is—Highway—District Board road—Right of user by public—Hanging verandah, if invades right of user of public.

Obiter.—An encroachment is an unlawful gaining upon the right or possession of another man. In the case of a District Board road, the right to the soil ordinarily rests with the owner of the land adjoining the road. But the public have an extended right of user in the road for the protection and control of which the District Boards were created.

A hanging verandah, therefore, would be an encroachment if it amounted to an unlawful gaining upon the right of user by the public. That right extends to all forms of traffic which have been usual or customary, and also all that are reasonably similar or incidental thereto. The question whether a hanging verandah amounts to an encroachment would depend in each case upon the question whether in the particular circumstances it constitutes an invasion of the public right of user as described above. The public have a right of user not merely on the roadway, but also on the side lands attached to the road. Hirji Baldeo v. Manbhoom District Board.

BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT, 1884.

Ss. 209, 353—Gift of land to Municipality on condition that it would erect necessary fencing—Requisition requiring erection of fencing, failure to obey—Offence.

Under S. 209 there is power in a Municipality to require a person to cause a fence to be erected by the side of a tank; but it does not follow that a Municipality cannot accept a condition or enter into a binding engagement that it would erect a certain fencing at its own cost. Where a Municipality has accepted a gift of certain land on condition that it would erect the fencing at its own cost, it is bound by the condition and has no power to issue a requisition calling upon the donor to erect it, and consequently, his failure to comply with the requisition is no offence. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Narayan Chandra Banerjee. 24 Cr. L. J. 680 : 73 I. C. 776 : 30 C. L. J. 13 : A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 101.

S. 210—Objection petition not stamped—Municipality's duty to take notice of it.

A petition of objection to a notice purporting to be under S. 210, though not stamped, and, therefore, informal, should be taken notice of by the Municipality and dealt with according to law. Harindra Nath Mukerjee v. Chairman, Birnagar Municipality. 2 Cr. L. J. 144 : 1 C. L. J. 15.

S. 210—Notice by Vice-Chairman—Absence of delegation—Validity.

A notice issued by the Vice-Chairman of a Municipality under S. 210 in the absence of proof of delegation of powers under S. 45, is invalid. Harindra Nath Mukerjee v. Birnagar Municipality. 2 Cr. L. J. 144 : 1 C. L. J. 15.

BENGAL PUBLIC GAMBLING ACT
(II OF 1867 AS AMENDED BY ACT VI OF 1913), Ss. 1, 10, 10-A.

—'Gaming,' meaning of—Amendment, effect of—'Gaming' and playing 'game,' distinguished.

BENGAL PUBLIC GAMBLING ACT, 1867.

Under the Act, as amended by Act IV of 1913, the questions as to whether a game is one of pure chance or one in which the element of skill preponderates are no longer pertinent. The Courts have to see whether the game is covered by what is meant by 'gaming'; if it is, it is hit by the Act unless it is a game of mere skill within S. 11-A of the Act. The definition in the Act does not really define "gaming", but merely indicates what it is like and excludes wagering or betting on some particular occasion, and in particular circumstances and also excludes a "lottery". 'Gaming' means playing at any game for money, which is staked on the result of the game, i.e., which is to be lost or won according to the success or failure of the person who has staked. The question of chance or skill does not enter into the connotation of the word. Emperor v. Arjoon Singh. 31 Cr. L. J. 901 :

—Ss. 5, 8—Money on person of gambler—Forfeiture.

The private property of an individual such as money or jewellery on his person who is found gaming in a gaming house cannot be seized and forfeited under S. 8 unless it is quite clear that there was attached to such private property the taint that it was reasonably suspected to have been used or intended for the purposes of gaming. Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Emperor.

—S. 11—Common gaming house—Presumption as to persons present—Persons found in public gambling place—Presumption—Person found running away from public gambling place—Whether supports presumption that he was actually gambling.

All the persons present in such an enclosed place as a common gaming house, may naturally be supposed to be members of the gaming party. But in dealing with a public place where the gravamen of the offence may be said to be the danger of corrupting the morals of the innocent passer-by, the presumption regarding anyone found present (unless something further is proved against him) is that he is such an innocent passer-by. The mere fact of running away is not sufficient to support the presumption that the persons who ran away were actually gambling. Ramjank Patwa v. Emperor.

—S. 11—Persons on their way to race-course—Possessing racing guides and notes on horses—Inference.

Having racing guides and notes on horses does not necessarily justify the inference that the persons possessing them were taking unauthorized bets. It is not unlawful for men to possess racing guides and notes on horses specially when they are on their way to the race-course to attend the races. Prafulla Kumar Mukerjee v. Emperor.

—S. 11—Public place, gambling, what is.

A public place of gambling need not be public property but if it is private property, the public must have access to it; nor is it sufficient that the place should be accessible to the public: it must be a place to which the public do in fact resort. Where the public has no access, the place is not a public place. Ramjank Patwa v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 608 : 168 I. C. 840 : 18 P. L. T. 352 : 3 B. R. 499 : 9 R. P. 518 : A. I. R. 1937 Pat. 276.

—Ss. 11, 11 (a)—“Ring game,” whether game of skill or chance—Finding of fact—Revision.

A finding on the question whether the ‘Ring game’ is a game of skill or a game of chance is a finding of fact and unless the Magistrate has committed any grave error in arriving at the finding, the High Court will not interfere. *Damri Mian v. —S. 9—Trial by jury—Misdirection to jury—Trial illegal.

In a trial under S. 9, the Judge omitted to point out to the jury that the prosecution must prove that the girl was taken to the house for the purpose of prostitution, but told them that the offence would be committed even if the house was not already a brothel within the definition of S. 3 of the Act: Held, that there was a serious misdirection. *Ekkari Das v. BENGAL SUPPRESSION OF TERRORIST OUTRAGES ACT (XII OF 1932), SS. 24, 25.

—Power of Special Magistrate to tender pardon under S. 337, Criminal Procedure Code.

Per Mukerji, J.—The Special Magistrate has no power to tender pardon under S. 337, Cr. P. C. The words used in the section are that “such person shall be tried”. Tendering pardon is not trial of such person. S. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be taken in compartments, and it cannot be held that all the compartments with the exception of that which ensures the right to have the case committed to the Court of Sessions may be availed of by the Special Magistrate.

Per Panckridge, J.—The various powers and directions given to Magistrates by S. 337 are so distinct and independent that each is a provision within the meaning of the Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act. The suggestion that the Special Magistrate is only clothed with power to “try” the accused under S. 25, Local Act and not with the power to “pardon” is to construe “try” and “trial” in an artificial and unnecessarily narrow fashion. S. 337, Criminal Procedure Code, is part of Chap. XXIV, which contains “General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials,” and the power to tender a pardon can be exercised “at any stage of the investigation or inquiry into, or the trial of the offence.” The Special Magistrate authorized under S. 25 (1) has all the powers which the Code confers on Magistrates trying such cases save such powers as are clearly inconsistent with the Local Act. Harihar Sinha v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 758 : 163 I. C. 9 : 40 C. W. N. 876 : 1936 Cr. C. 583 : 63 C. L. J. 307 : 8 R. C. 698 (F. B) : A. I. R. 1936 Cal. 356.

—S. 25—Application of provisions of Cr. P. C. to proceeding under.

The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, in so far as they are inconsistent with Bengal Act, XII of 1932, do not apply to trials by Special Magistrates. Mohammad Saleuddin v. Emperor. 36 Cr. L. J. 884 : 156 I. C. 238 : 39 C. W. N. 698 : 7 R. C. 695 : A. I. R. 1935 Cal. 281.

—S. 25—Appointment of Special Magistrate.

Per Henderson, J.—An opinion of the Local Government merely that an accused person had committed an offence not punishable with death would not give jurisdiction to appoint a Special Magistrate to try him. The Local Government do not have it in their power to decide finally that a particular accused person has not committed an offence punishable with death. Netai Chandra Jana v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1092 : 165 I. C. 162 : 40 C. W. N. 959 : 9 R. C. 351 : 64 C. L. J. 421 : A. I. R. 1936 Cal. 529.

—Ss. 25, 3—Scope of—Prima facie case of murder disclosed—Local Government, if can direct trial by Special Magistrate.

Section 25 does not empower the Local Government to order a trial before a Special Magistrate where a case of murder is prima facie disclosed by the prosecution evidence. Netai Chandra Jana v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1092 : 165 I. C. 162 : 40 C. W. N. 959 : 9 R. C. 351 : 64 C. L. J. 421 : A. I. R. 1936 Cal. 529.

—S. 35—Act must be read with supplementary Act—Appeal from conviction by Special Magistrate, if lies—Revision.

BENGAL SUPPRESSION OF TERRORIST OUTRAGES ACT, 1932.

The Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act, 1932, must be read with the supplementary Act, which contains various definitions and directions with regard to appeals and so on, and no appeal lies from a conviction and sentence passed by a Special Magistrate under the Local Act, nor can the High Court interfere with such conviction and sentence under the power of superintendence given by S. 107, Government of India Act. Madan Mohan Roy v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1025 : 164 I. C. 798 : 40 C. W. N. 735 : 9 R. C. 282 : 63 Cal. 1086.

———S. 35—Court, if can go behind the sanction.

Whether the sanctioning authority would authorize a prosecution for an alleged offence punishable under S. 35 (a) or not is a matter for that authority to decide. Once the prosecution is authorised, the trying Court cannot go behind the sanction or question the propriety of the judgment of the sanctioning authority. Haripada Sen Gupta v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 691 : 169 I. C. 60 : 9 R. C. 889 : I. L. R. 1937 (1) Cal. 774. A. I. R. 1937 Cal. 49.

———S. 35—Possession, nature of—Knowingly, significance of.

The word "knowingly" in S. 35, qualifies the word "possession". Constructive possession on the part of the person charged is not enough. If a book is in a room occupied by the person charged, he is no doubt in the eye of law in possession of the book, because he has possession of the room, but to sustain a conviction under the section, the Crown must prove that he knew that the book was in his room. It is immaterial whether the person had knowledge of the notification or not. Haripada Sen Gupta v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 691 : 169 I. C. 60 : 9 R. C. 889 : I. L. R. 1937 (1) Cal. 774 : A. I. R. 1937 Cal. 49.

———S. 35—Sentence, considerations governing.

For the purpose of deciding what sentence ought to be passed under S. 35, it is the duty of the Court to take into account the character of the book. If the book in question is a violent one advocating terrorism or terrorist crimes, the sentence ought to be substantial. If it is an innocent one in the sense that it does not encourage terrorism, it may be unfortunate that authority to file a complaint has been given by the District Magistrate, but the Court must take the character of the book into consideration in passing sentence. Haripada Sen Gupta v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 691 : 169 I. C. 60 : 9 R. C. 889 : I. L. R. 1937 (1) Cal. 774 : A. I. R. 1937 Cal. 49.

———S. 35 (a)—Offence—Test.

An offence under S. 35 (a), in respect of a book is committed if it could have been rightfully seized by the Chief Customs Officer at the time of its importation under the Sea Customs Act, 1878. Haripada Sen Gupta v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 691 : 169 I. C. 60 : 9 R. C. 889 : I. L. R. 1937 (1) Cal. 774 : A. I. R. 1937 Cal. 49.

———Ss. 35 (b), 38—Possession of proscribed book—Presumption of guilt.

In a prosecution under S. 35 (b), for possessing a proscribed book, it may safely be said that the trying Magistrate, before he comes to the judicial consideration of a case, is well aware that responsible persons have made up their minds that there is a prima facie presumption of guilt against the person who has been prosecuted. Rabindra Nath Chandra v. Emperor. 39 Cr. L. J. 61 : 172 I. C. 133 : 64 C. L. J. 417 : 10 R. C. 341 : A. I. R. 1937 Cal. 652.

———Ss. 45, 4, 5, 6—Assault on amin deputed by Collector to relay boundaries under S. 45—Offence.

S. 45 of the Survey Act is couched in the widest terms and all that it requires is that the Collector should be satisfied that a dispute exists in regard to a boundary settled in a previous public survey, and if so satisfied, he can legally delegate his powers of relaying boundaries to an amin and if the latter is resisted and assaulted, the resisters are guilty of offences under Ss. 147, 149 and 353, I. P. C. Judagi Raut v. Emperor. 18 Cr. L. J. 360 : 88 I. C. 744 : 2 P. L. J. 18 : 3 P. L. W. 429 : A. I. R. 1916 Pat. 35.

———Ss. 45, 6—Proclamation required by S. 6, necessity of.

Section 45 does not require that an amin in making a demarcation of boundaries should previously make a proclamation as required by S. 6. The proclamation required by that section refers only to a survey carried on under Ss. 4 and 5. Judagi Raut v. Emperor. 18 Cr. L. J. 360 : 38 I. C. 744 : 2 P. L. J. 18 : 3 P. L. W. 429 : A. I. BERAR MUNICIPAL LAW, 1886 —Ss. 79, 116—Bye-law depriving public of right, legality of—Approval by Local Government, effect of.

Section 116 (1) (j) does not, even by implication, authorise a Committee to make a bye-law depriving the public of a right long enjoyed by it. The mere fact of the Local Government having signified its approval to a bye-law would not render the bye-law valid, in the absence of clear and unmistakable language in the Act empowering a Committee to make such a bye-law. *Mahammad Sarwar v. The mere fact that a permission to build was applied for and no order prohibiting the erection was passed within one month does not place the applicant in the same position as if written permission was accorded to him by the Committee as required by S. 86. So far as the encroachments dealt with by S. 86 are concerned, they are not in themselves punishable though declared unlawful by that section, but it is the disobedience to the order of the Committee for their removal under S. 130 which has been made punishable. *Radha Kisan v. ———Berar Criminal Procedure Code, S. 565—Previously convicted offender—Previous conviction under Indian Penal Code—Subsequent conviction under Berar Penal Code—Sentence of enhanced punishment and notification of address, whether legal.

The previous conviction of an offender in British India under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code cannot be used for the purpose of applying S. 75 of that Code or of S. 565 of the Criminal Procedure Code as applied to Berar. An accused was convicted by a Court of Session in Berar under S. 379 of the Berar Penal Code. Some previous convictions by British Indian Courts in the Presidency of Bombay under Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code were proved against the accused. On the strength of these convictions the accused was sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment, and was directed, under S. 565 of the Berar Criminal Procedure Code, to notify his residence for five years after the expiry of the said sentence : Held, that the sentence for enhanced punishment and the order to notify residence, in so far as they were based on S. 75 of the Berar Penal Code and S. 565 of the Berar Criminal Procedure Code, were ultra vires and must be set aside. *Ganga Ram v. BIHAR AND ORISSA ADULTERATION ACT (II OF 1919).

———S. 3 (2)—Adulteration—Offence, essence of.

Prosecution need not prove that the adulterated food stuff would be injurious to public health. It is sufficient to show that the article is not what it purports to be or that it is

BIHAR AND ORISSA EXCISE ACT (II OF 1915) S. 47.

—Pass to possess and import excisable articles in one province—Possession of Articles while en route to destination in an another province.

Accused had obtained a pass to import excisable articles from one place to another in one Province. In travelling that Province they were obliged to make a short halt at a place in a neighbouring Province of Bihar : Held, that the possession was not illegal and accused could not be convicted under S. 47. *Mulchand v. —Ss. 47, 48, 55—Report under S. 47 (h)—Cognizance of offences under S. 47 (a) or S. 55, Removal of liquor—Presumption under S. 48.

In the report of an Excise Sub-Inspector prosecution was asked for only under S. 47 (h), but the accused was in addition tried for and convicted of offences under Ss. 47 (a) and 55: Held, that such a proceeding was not illegal, especially as the report disclosed facts constituting offences under the other sections. S. 48 does not apply to a case of removal of liquor, and it is, therefore, illegal to make use of the presumption created by that section in the trial of an offence under S. 47 (h). *Mahabir Singh v. A Sanitary Inspector went to the accused's shop and found 15 tins of mustard oil exposed for sale. He demanded and got 24 chhataks of oil and found that the oil was highly adulterated. The accused was prosecuted for an offence under S. 3 (1). The accused pleaded that he had purchased the tins in a sealed condition and used to sell them in the same condition : Held, that the procedure adopted by the Inspector in not taking a full tin of oil in its unopened condition was illegal and seriously prejudicial to the accused in view of the provisions of Cl. Where notice under S. 238 was served upon a person asking him to improve drains within a month but the alternative that if he did not do it, the Municipal Commissioners would get it done themselves was not mentioned in the notice : Held, that the notice was illegal due to non-compliance with the imperative provisions of S. 359 (2) and hence no prosecution could be based on it. Further as nothing was expressed therein as to what was the proper type of drains to be constructed the notice was vague and it was also defective from the point of view of S. 217 as no specification had been supplied. *Manager, Dhalbhum Estate v. It is necessary for the Municipal Authorities, when they come to a resolution under S. 259, to notify it to the public in some manner. If an offence is to be created by a bye-law or order or notice, then it is necessary for those who have power under the Act, to create such offence to publish the fact so that the public at large may know that such an offence has been created, and no one can be prosecuted for contravening such bye-law, order or notice, if it has not been notified to the public in some manner. *Lal Singh v. Resolutions passed by a Municipality under powers conferred by S. 259 (1) and (3), fixing local limits and requiring licences to be taken out in respect of working a surkhi mill are not matters of the same nature as the matters to be provided for bye-laws under S. 264, and can neither be regarded as bye-laws nor as rules, but are of the nature of an order applying a section of the Act. The opening word of r. 18, 'Whoever' is not restricted in any way to the purchaser of cane. A Jamadar used to weigh sugarcane at the weigh-bridge on behalf of the factory. Taking advantage of this position he was in the habit of demanding payments for himself before making out and delivering the purjis to the persons entitled to them. This resulted in the growers of sugarcane receiving about 5 per cent. less than the minimum price fixed by the Government : Held, that what had to be seen was whether by demanding gratification or other payment the accused prevented the cane growers from receiving the full benefit of the minimum price fixed for their produce. The cane growers dealing with the factory were unable to receive the full minimum rate for their produce. The Jamadar was, therefore, guilty under r. 18. Ram Saran Jha v. Emperor.

Under S. 2 (b) in order to be a boiler, the definite and clear object of a contrivance should be to generate steam under pressure. A contrivance used at a dairy to clean and sterilize utensils used for keeping milk and other products, consisting of a closed tin canister with a capacity of more than 7 gallons with two stopcocks, one on the top and the other at the bottom placed upon a brick furnace and generating steam under pressure, falls within the purview of the definition of boiler. —Ss. 9, 13, 43,—Cocaine—forwarding of from—Lucknow to Bombay through rail without transshipment—Crossing the frontier—application of Act.

Where the accused forwards a large consignment of cocaine from Lucknow to Bombay through railway, and the consignment reaches Bombay direct without transshipment and traverses British territory, the whole way, neither the mere fact that cocaine is consigned from Lucknow to Bombay and is conveyed thereto without transshipment at the frontier of the Bombay Presidency, nor the mere fact that the journey from Lucknow to Bombay is throughout through British territory, prevents cocaine from coming within the provisions of the Bombay Abkari Act as soon as it crosses the frontier. *Emperor v. 8 Bom. L. R. 601.

—Ss. 9, 43—Sea Customs Act, S. 19—Importation of Cocaine, what is—Prohibition, nature of.

S. 9 does not prohibit importing of cocaine generally : it merely prohibits its importation. The intention and requirement of the section in the case of articles liable to duty under the Tariff Act are that the duty shall be paid. That intention and requirement can only be contravened when reasonable opportunity to pay the duty has been afforded and has been evaded. The mere entry into the harbour or tying up against the dock wall is not importing goods in contravention of the obligation to pay duty. Therefore, such an import is not an import within the meaning of S. 43. The word "import" as used in the Abkari Act includes by implication the conveying into any part of the Presidency of Bombay by sea. Emperor v. De Silva.

When the Act talks about transport from one place to another, it means transport from the starting point to the ultimate destination. It is a question of fact for the Court to determine what the destination may be. If a man comes to a place and stays there for an appreciable time, the Court may hold that that place is the destination although it appears that the journey is to be resumed subsequently. In order to convict a person of illegal possession of contraband liquor, it is necessary for the Crown to prove that he had knowledge of his possession. The mere fact that three brothers belong to a joint Hindu family, and as such, own the godown in which the bottles containing the liquor are found concealed does not prove that any one of them is in conscious possession of the bottles. *Narumal Dayaldas v. BOMBAY CITY MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1888), Ss. 3, 305.

—“Sewer,” “public and private streets” meaning of—Pipe laid for carrying of mere liquid filth—Responsibility of Corporation.

The word “sewer,” in S. 3 means a drain or passage to convey off water and filth underground and refers to the carrying of other water besides liquid filth. A street cannot be said to be sewered by the Corporation merely because there runs under it a pipe laid by the Corporation, which, though carrying off sullage water from certain houses, has no direct connection with the surface of the street. Such a street is a private and not a public street and a notice under S. 305 can validly issue in respect thereof. The Corporation cannot be said to have undertaken the responsibility of maintaining a street as a public street, when their action has been limited to the mere provision of a pipe disconnected from the street and designed only to remove excrementitious and other filthy matter from the houses which happen to adjoin the line of the street. *Emperor v. —S. 305—Owner of property, meaning of.
The mere owner of the land who has let it out for building purposes is not the owner of the property, within the meaning of S. 305, because the property contemplated by the section necessarily embraces buildings, whether erected or to be erected; and the legislature regards him as the owner of the premises who has the right to receive rent in respect of that property. Emperor v. Ramchandra. 11 Cr. L. J. 544 : 7 I. C. 935 : 12 Bom. L. R. 669.

—S. 305—Premises, legal meaning of.
The word “premises” in the section is in its legal sense, as referring to the particular kind of property which forms the subject-matter of the group of immediately preceding sections of the Act. That group, consisting of Ss. 302 to 307, has reference to streets made for the use of buildings or building sites. The dominant idea running through Ss. 302 to 304 is that of buildings, either erected or projected, that is, the kind of property dealt with in what has gone before S. 305; and, therefore, that is its “pramissa.” The word “premises” has a technical meaning in law. Its strict legal meaning is that which comes before the “pramissa” of the document or deed which includes that word. Emperor v. Ramchandra.

—Ss. 28, 129—Police Commissioner—Notice to vacate—Specific Relief Act, S. 45—Enforcement of public duties—Public servant—High Court.

The Commissioner of Police at Bombay, acting under S. 28 of the Act issued a notice upon the accused requiring them to vacate the premises occupied by them, and intimating that failure to comply with the notice would render them liable to punishment. The accused applied to the High Court under S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act, for a rule against the Commissioner of Police to show cause why the notice should not be cancelled and why he should not be restrained from carrying the same into effect : Held, that the cancellation of the notice or the non-enforcing of it is an act clearly incumbent by law upon the Commissioner of Police, so as to bring it within S. 45 (b) of the Specific Relief Act. In re : Tarabai Ibrahimpurkar.

Such goods are, therefore, liable to the payment of octroi duty within the meaning of S. 77 (2) of the Act though the duty is paid in such cases merely as a deposit to be refunded afterwards. Where an accused knows that his servants pass with his goods through the limits of a Municipality without giving the Municipal Officers a chance of inspecting the contents and systematically shutting his eyes to their conduct, it is open to the Courts to infer his connivance and consent to the conduct of his servants. ———S. 96—Scope and object.

Municipality cannot deprive owners of the legitimate use of their land or to refuse permission to build at all though it has a very wide power of regulating buildings. The object of the power is to secure the safety and sanitation of buildings to be newly erected. This power, though an encroachment on private rights, is not inconsistent with the Act. Khusaldas Moolchand v. Emperor.

A District Magistrate is not empowered by an order, under S. 42 promulgated only in the Taluka headquarters and containing no reference to any area, to make punishable acts done in a village twelve miles away where the District Magistrate was not present at the time of the proclamation of the order. Per Batchelor, J.—A distance of twelve miles cannot be regarded as either neighbourhood or vicinity as these words include only suburbs or immediate surroundings. The words "having jurisdiction in any town or village" and "prohibit in such town or village" in S. 42 refer equally to the Magistrate of the first class and the Magistrate of the District. S. 42 limits the prohibiting powers of the Magistrate, whether it be the Magistrate of the District or the Magistrate of the first class; in either case all that he may do is to "prohibit in such town or village", that is to say, in any town or village which is within his jurisdiction and in which, or the neighbourhood of which, he is present. Per Chandavarkar, J.—The preliminary conditions essential for the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred by S. 42 are these: first, the jurisdiction is conferred on the Magistrate of the District or, in his absence and subject to his own order, the Magistrate of the first class; secondly, these must have jurisdiction in the town or village where the jurisdiction is intended to operate; thirdly, they must be present in such town or village or in the neighbourhood thereof at the time the jurisdiction is set in motion. The intention of the Legislature appears to have been that such a proclamation as is contemplated by the section should be issued in such a manner as to give full publicity to its terms on the responsibility of the District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class who must be personally in the place to satisfy himself that there is necessity for the proclamation. *Emperor v. Where apprehending that playing of music in temple during certain festival would inflame religious animosity and lead to breach of the public peace, a Magistrate issues a notice under S. 42 forbidding the playing of music, the notice is prima facie legal and the onus of showing that it is unlawful is on the persons challenging it. But a person who rings the temple bell once at the time of making darshan, does not play music for ever. Thus the mere ringing of bell not being an offence under S. 71, the existence of mens rea, is not enough for conviction. Emperor v. Ramkrishna Gopal Bhide. 39 Cr. L. J. 498 : 174 I. Section 44 empowers a District Magistrate to regulate a procession, that is to decide whether a procession should or should not be carried. The rules under S. 48 (1) (a), must be made before the processions are contemplated. Police must make the rules with reference to possible future events. But the rules as made can only regulate the conduct of persons as members of assemblies and processions. Rule 1 deals only with the conduct of persons constituting processions. Such persons cannot go in procession along a street within the Municipal limits of Ahmedabad without a pass. The actual prohibition under the rule is against some action by a person who is at the time a member of an assembly or procession. Therefore, there is no objection to the rule on the ground that it deals with those who have contemplated a procession and not with those who have formed a procession. There is no prohibition against the forming of an assembly and the starting of that assembly into motion which would constitute a procession, provided that the procession does not proceed along streets. *Krishnalal Mehta v. BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT (IV OF 1890).

—S. 61, cl. (a)—Driving vehicle without light—“Lawful excuse” unexpected detention till dark, whether lawful excuse.

Per Fawcett, J.—The word ‘lawful’ as used with the word ‘excuse’ in cl. (a) of S. 61 of the Bombay District Police Act, conveys the idea that the excuse is (a) reasonable and (b) not opposed to any law or principle of law. The fact that a lamp or lantern can be carried on in a vehicle so as to be lit when required, is an important factor to be taken into consideration in considering whether an excuse is reasonable. The mere excuse, therefore, that the accused was unexpectedly kept out till dark is not in the absence of exceptional circumstances, a reasonable one. BOMBAY EXCISE ACT (V OF 1878).

(IX of 1908), S. 15—'Expressly excluded,' meaning and significance of.

Where in a street and in a place of public resort, a person has apparent possession of letters which a Police Officer honestly and in good faith suspects to be stolen property, the Police Officer is empowered by S. 51, Cl. 3, Bombay District Police Act, to search for the same. Although it is very mortifying for him to be searched in the public street and also very mortifying for him that the police approached his house, and rumour got about that his house is going to be searched, he cannot be held to have suffered any damage or loss which will be recognized by the law if the Police Officer has acted legally and with bona fides. An investigation includes all the proceedings under the Cr. P. C. for the collection of evidence, conducted inter alia by a Police Officer.

Where a Police Officer decides to make a search, the reasons in writing referred to in S. 165, Cr. P. C., can be recorded at any time or in any place prior to the actual search.

S. 80 (4), Civil Procedure Code, does not specifically require that the notice should bear any particular heading or refer to any particular act. Even if it is assumed that this is intended, where all the express requirements of the law so far as the ingredients of the notices are concerned were complied with, there is a substantial compliance with the requirements of the law and that substantial compliance which consists of a compliance with all the express requirements of the law is a sufficient compliance.

Under S. 15, Limitation Act, "expressly excluded" means excluded by express words. Ravachand Fatchchand v. Karachi Municipality (2), followed. [ibid.] Asandas Hashmatrai v. Khan Chand.

S. 125 rests upon public policy and it protects the name of a spy or secret informant, not the nature of the information and it has no application whatever to an informant who lays a sworn information and thereby initiates criminal proceedings. Per Faccett, A. J. C.—The Bombay Act requires the complaint to be on oath merely as an additional guarantee of the truth of the complaint. It is not intended to imply that the complaint is a

BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE (ACT V OF 1879).

—Ss. 40, 214, r. 93—Reserved trees growing after settlement, ownership of.

There is nothing in the language of S. 40 to show that all future growths of reserved trees would belong to the Government. The plain and natural meaning of rule 93 of the rules framed under S. 214 is that the existing reserved trees belong to the Government and that all future growths belong to the occupant. *Emperor v. BOMBAY LOCAL BOARDS ACT (VI OF 1923).

The necessity of a fresh sanction and a fresh notification under r. 18 of the Land Revenue Rules in the event of Government raising the rates proposed by the Settlement Officer is not prescribed by any section of the Land Revenue Code or by any rules made thereunder and even if a notification inviting objections be presumed to have been given, it would not nullify the effect of that introduction of the Survey Settlement under S. 102, completed by the sanction accorded by the Government and the notification under r. 18. *Moreshear Janardan Gogate v. BOMBAY LOCAL BOARDS ACT (VI OF 1923).

—S. 4 (3)—"Notified area" under Bombay District Municipal Act whether 'municipal district'—levy of octroi on goods imported in notified area within district.

There is a distinction between a municipal district and a notified area under Bombay District Municipal Act. When the Bombay Local Boards Act, in S. 4 (3), refers to a municipal district, it does not include a notified area. The District Local Boards can, therefore, if duly empowered by its rules and by-laws levy octroi on goods imported into a notified area within the limit of its district. *Moheddin Baxasaheb Thakur v. BOMBAY MOTOR VEHICLES ACT (II OF 1904).S. 2—Motor-car—Reckless or negligent driving.

The accused, who was driving his own motor-car, attempted to pass a victoria which was a little ahead of him on the left, but as he was doing so the driver of the victoria turned it suddenly to the left with the result that it collided with the motor-car. The accused was, on these facts, convicted of driving his motor-car negligently and recklessly: Held, that the victoria driver was not justified in so suddenly changing his course back to the left, and therefore, the accused could not be said to have been negligent or reckless in driving his motor-car. In re : Jehangir.

—S. 410, 318—Selling or exposing for sale fish—Sale from a basket placed on the foreshore of Chowpati—Place between high and low water mark—Private market—Burden of proof.

The accused was charged with selling or exposing for sale, without licence fish intended for human food on the Chowpati foreshore, contrary to the provisions of S. 410 (1). The sale was from a basket which the accused had placed on the sand at some distance from the water, the place being between the high and the low water mark. The fish sold was fresh fish and it had been recently brought from one of the boats then in the Back Bay: Held, that the accused was liable under S. 410 (1) since it was impossible to say that fresh fish was sold from a vessel, when as a matter of fact it had been sold from the basket on the shore, having been brought from the vessel which was in the water. A place like the whole of the foreshore of Chowpatti could not be held to be a private market : and, even if this were not so, since the Municipality started their case by showing that the place in question was the foreshore of Chowpatti, that was sufficient to throw the onus upon the accused to show that the foreshore of Chowpatti was a private market within the meaning of S. 308: Held also, that the Act applied to the spot in question. *Emperor v. Even when a purchaser of adulterated food is a public officer, an offence under S. 4 (1) (a), is committed in respect of adulterated food purchased by him as such public officer. *Gobindram Jamiatrai v. Ss. 4 (4) (b), 5—Warranty, proof of—Personal attendance of warrantor—Issue of commission to warrantor under S. 506, Criminal Procedure Code—Rejection of application for—Reasons in writing, if necessary.

It is the rule that the warrantor must personally attend in Court, and it is only in exceptional cases that he should not do so. The words in the 'exception' in S. 4 (4) (b) include the power of the Magistrate to ask for the issue of a commission under S. 506, Criminal Procedure Code. If he thinks that it is only just and proper that that power should be exercised, there is nothing to prevent the Court asking the District Magistrate to issue a commission for the examination of the warrantor. The Magistrate need not, however, give his reasons in writing, while rejecting the application for the commission. Girdharilal Mohanji v. Emperor. 39 Cr. L. J. 477 : 174 I. C. 542 : 10 R. S. 12 (1)—Complaint addressed to Bench of Magistrates as such—Verification of complaint signed by one Magistrate only—Whether sitting as Bench.

In Hyderabad (Sind) the Magistrates who constitute the "B" Bench are Magistrates of the Second Class only when sitting together as a Bench, and when sitting singly, they are Magistrates only of the Third Class. Where the record shows that the complaint was addressed to a Bench of Magistrates as such ; from the mere fact that upon the verification of the complaint itself, there is only the signature of one Magistrate, it by no means follows that two Magistrates were not present sitting as a Bench on the case. Lilaram Ladakmal v. Wadhmal Assudomal. 40 Cr. L. J. 122 : 178 I. C. 648 : 11 R. S. S. 100 : 1939 Kar. 230 : A. I. R. 1938 Sind 209.

—S. 13 (1)—Summons not applied for within 30 days of granting of certificate by analyst—Defect, if fatal.

Section 13 should be considered separately as regards its two Sub-Sections because Sub-S. (1) relates to a condition of time, and that if it can be shown that a summons was not applied for within 30 days of the date of the grant of the certificate by the public analyst, that would be fatal to the prosecution case, for time once gone is gone beyond recall. This is not a mere irregularity which can be cured: It is a fatal defect in the proceedings in limine. Lilaram Ladakmal v. Wadhmal Assudomal. 40 Cr. L. J. 122 : 178 I. C. 648 : 11 R. S. S. 100 : 1939 Kar. 230 : A. I. R. 1938 Sind 209.

—S. 13 (2)—Omission of date from summons whether mere irregularity which can be cured.

Although it is desirable that the provisions of S. 13 (2), should be closely followed, that the name of the complainant should be given, the name and place fixed for hearing should be shown, it cannot be held that if for instance, the date be omitted from the summons, that could be said to be a fatal flaw in the proceedings. All that can be said is that it is an irregularity when can be cured, if necessary, by an issue of amended summons and by the Magistrate allowing such adjournment as the omission of any particular from the summons may seem to require so as to give the accused the notice in the summons to which he is entitled. Lilaram Ladakmal v. Wadhmal Assudomal. 40 Cr. L. J. 122 : 178 I. C. 648 : 11 R. S. S. 100 : 1939 Kar. 230 : A. I. R. 1938 Sind 209.

—Ss. 14, 16—Presumption under S. 14 (1)—Applicability to certificate of public analyst produced by accused.

Per Broomfield, J.—S. 14 (1) of the Act applies to any certificate of a public analyst and not only to a certificate on which the prosecution is based. There is no necessary connection between it and S. 16. The rebuttable presumption under S. 14 (1) will equally apply to a certificate of a public analyst produced by the accused himself. Haridas Vallabhdas v. Bombay Municipality. 38 Cr. L. —Ss. 14, 16—Right to insist upon public analyst to be summoned and examined as witness even before accused leads evidence in defence.

Per N. J. Wadia, J.—S. 14 does not deal with the procedure to be followed in a trial under the Act: it merely lays down a rule of evidence and allows a presumption to be drawn. The language of the S. 16 shows clearly that it is open to the accused at the commencement of the trial, as soon as he is accused of the —S. 3—Common gaming house, what is—"Used for the profit or gain of the owner," meaning of.

In order to prove that a house is a common gaming house within the meaning of S. 3, it is sufficient to show that the house is one in which instruments of gaming are kept or used for the profit or gain of the persons keeping or using such place. The profit or gain may not actually result from such use. But the prosecution must establish that the purpose is profit or gain. This may be done either by showing that the owner was charging for use of the instruments of gaming or for the use of the house, room or place, or in any other manner that may be possible under the circumstances of the case, having regard to the nature of the game carried on in that house. *Emperor v. —S. 3—"Using or keeping" meaning of—Case, when can come under S. 3.

The expression "using or keeping" in S. 3 means having a right to use or keep as in S. 4 (a) and if the accused is not a person having a right to use this passage, then it would be irrelevant to prove that he is making a profit out of the gaming carried on there. To bring the case within the definition under S. 3 it is necessary to show that profit was to be made for the person owning, keeping or using the passage. Ibrahim Haji Abdul Rahiman v. Emperor.

Section 3 makes "gaming" within the meaning of the Act the collection or soliciting of bets, and it makes no difference if these bets are brought by a messenger or person or sent by telephone or sent and received by telephone. It is gaming within the definition of S. 3 and in S. 7 the word "persons," includes "person" the plural includes the singular. Therefore, a person caught actually in the act of taking bets over the telephone can be rightly convicted of gaming, under S. 5. Bhagwandas Ghanshamdas v. Emperor.

The bogus punters are usually very unsatisfactory witnesses. It does not much matter whether they are called accomplices or spies or Police agents. No doubt, it is very difficult to get better evidence and the Police may have to make use of such people, and if their evidence is corroborated and fits in reasonably well with the prosecution case, the Court may be justified in relying on it. But if the punter is called as a witness and does not support the prosecution case, it is obviously worse than if he was not called at all. Baptist De Souza v. Emperor.

—Ss. 4, 5, 6, 7—Warrant of search, defective—Effect—Guilt, proof of, by other evidence.

A search warrant which gives a wrong number of the house to be searched and gives no other description of it, is a defective one. If the search warrant is bad because of misdescription of the house, no presumption can be made that the house where the accused were found is a common gaming house. But it cannot be said that because a search warrant is illegal, whatever is found as a result of that search cannot be evidence. Similarly the mere fact that presumption under S. 7 cannot be raised, does not prevent the prosecution from establishing by evidence in the ordinary way that on the facts proved the accused were guilty of the offences charged. The fact of a stranger going into a house and obtaining a bet on a horse race coupled with the betting books and slips found on Police search shortly afterwards necessitates the inference that the house is a common gaming house. Emperor v. Abasbhai Abdulhussein.

—Ss. 4, 5, 6, 7, 12—"Place"—Shop abutting on public street, whether 'place'—Issue of—Search warrant—Presumption against keeper of such shop—Conviction.

The word "place" in S. 4 has a wide meaning. S. 12 does not exclude the application of S. 4 in proper cases even though in certain circumstances S. 12 might apply to the same "place". Hence a place such as a shop abutting on to a public street although a place within the meaning of S. 12 is still a place within the meaning of S. 4, and a search warrant under the Act can be issued and presumption under S. 7 can be drawn against the keeper of such a shop kept for the purposes of gaming for profit and he can be convicted under S. 4. *Sat Narain Amratal v. The legislature must be presumed to have intended that the Magistrate, First Class, should have the authority to make the arrest and the search himself, if necessary. For when the legislature empowers an officer to delegate an authority to do a certain act to another person, it necessarily implies that the original authority to do such act is fully and completely in the officer himself, but that it is necessary for the exigencies of business that it should be done in the majority of cases by persons acting under authority derived from him. No provision of the Code of Criminal Procedure as to the authority empowered to issue a warrant for arrest or search, or the persons to whom and the conditions under which such warrant may be issued can apply for the purposes of S. 7 of

Before applying the provisions of S. 7, the prosecution is bound to prove that the house was entered under a warrant duly issued under S. 6. The mere assertion of a police officer that information was given on oath to the Magistrate granting the warrant is not sufficient material to justify the conclusion that the warrant was properly issued. No presumption can be drawn against the accused in the absence of proof as to the validity of the warrant, and in such a case, the mere finding of instruments of gaming in the house entered under the warrant is not proof that it was used as a common gaming house. *Kadir v. Where the money seized was found in the coat pocket of the accused, it cannot be said, in the absence of any satisfactory explanation by him that this money was not rightly seized under S. 6 and was not connected with the gaming of which he has been convicted. *Bhagwandas Ghanshamdas v. Some cricketing things as well as some cards and dice and a money box, with a little cash in it, were found on the premises. ———S. 7—Presumption under, nature of—When arises and how rebutted.

There are two events on which presumption under S. 7 arises. The first event is when any instrument of gaming has been seized in the house, room or place entered under S. 6 or about the person of anyone found therein. All that the Court has to do is to see whether the documents and things found in the house raided fall within the definition of "instruments of gaming." If they do, then the presumption arises. The occurrence of other event requires two things to be proved, first, that something has been seized, which is other than an instrument of gaming, and secondly, that the Police Officer had reasonable grounds for suspecting that the thing so seized was an instrument of gaming. When these two things are proved, then the Court must presume that the house, which has been entered was used as a common gaming house until the contrary is proved. But obviously if the only evidence of the house being used as a common gaming-house lies in the seizure in the house of something which is in fact not an instrument of gaming although the Police Officer had reasonable grounds for suspecting that it was an instrument of gaming, then there is no evidence of such user and the presumption is rebutted. The presumption arising in the second event specified in S. 7 must always be stillborn, because it is rebutted by proof of the very event which gives it birth, namely seizure of something other than an instrument of gaming. The second event can only arise, when it is proved that the thing which was found in the house raided was not an instrument of gaming and, directly it is proved, the evidential value of the thing found is destroyed. Emperor v. Nathalal Vanmali.

S. 12 does not require that the Police should apprehend persons in the actual act of gaming. The words "are found gaming" in S. 12 have a wider meaning than "seen gaming." The word "found" is more akin to the word "discovered" in its nature and purpose, and if people are found by the Police in such circumstances that it is clear that when the Police came upon the scene they were engaged in gaming, it does not matter that dice and darts were not seen actually thrown. The transaction as a whole must be looked at, and not one particular minute or second of time. Ghanshamdas v. Emperor.

In construing the expression, "any place to which the public have or are permitted to have access" in S. 12, the deciding factor is not whether the place is or is not owned by a private individual or a statutory body, but the use to which it is put. If a private owner invites either expressly or by implication the public generally to enter his garden, then so long as that invitation is extended to the public generally, the garden is a place to which the public have or are permitted to have access within the meaning of the section. The mere fact of being reasonably suspected by a Police Officer is not sufficient to justify a conviction of a criminal offence. A man can only be convicted of actual gaming in public. When the Courts are concerned with a particular form of gaming made punishable under the Act and the charge is based on one of the ancillary acts in the definition, some connection ought to be shown between that act and the particular form of gaming which is the subject of the charge. The words "intended to aid or facilitating the various acts described must be read as ancillary to the general words of the definition. Before convicting a man of aiding or facilitating an act, it must be shown that that act has taken place and that it is an offence. If it be proved that gaming has taken place in a public place, then anyone who is shown to have aided or facilitated such gaming is guilty although he has not himself taken part in the actual gaming. But it is impossible to convict a person under this statute of aiding or facilitating an act when the act itself which he has aided or facilitated is not shown to be a criminal act. But if the charge is gaming in a public place and the only act alleged is one which facilitates the distribution of profits of some other kinds of gaming, the ancillary act cannot be said to form part of the offence charged, unless it is an overt act which itself amounts to gaming in public within the intendment of the section. To put in a nutshell though the distribution of the winnings of gaming and any act facilitating the same is gaming, it is not gaming in a public place, unless (a) the winnings are the winnings of gaming in a public place, in which case the mischief aimed at has been committed somewhere, or (b) the distribution or ancillary act is itself public. *Emperor v. ———S. 24—Essentials for conviction under—Licensee of public conveyance himself taking his family or permitting unlicensed driver to take his family for a treat—Offence, if committed.

To convict an accused under S. 24 it is not sufficient merely to show that the accused is a licensee of a public conveyance and that he permitted it to be driven by a driver who is not licensed; it must be shown that when this unlicensed driver was driving, he was driving a public conveyance for use as such. The section does not mean that if the licensee of a public conveyance himself takes his family out for a treat or permits an unlicensed driver to take his family out for a treat, an offence is committed, for the public conveyance is not then used for the purpose of public conveyance at all. It is used for the purpose of private conveyance. It is not being plied for hire or for carrying members of the public for hire. Bhojraj Pheroomal v. Abdul Wahed.

A District Superintendent of Police has the authority to delegate powers conferred upon him under the Act to the Assistant Superintendent of Police, but where in a criminal case the question arises whether there was such delegation, the delegation must be clearly proved. There should be written order giving references to the various sections of the Act and specifying particular powers and duties which the Superintendent delegates to the Assistant or Deputy Superintendent of Police. The power to refuse to grant a license or to refuse to renew it or to suspend or cancel it, is one which is of some importance, and before delegating such a power, the Superintendent of Police ought to consider whether it can be properly delegated. Emperor v. —(Bom. Act VI of 1863), S. 34 (a)—"All vehicles kept in readiness for hiring on demand," meaning of—Government notification extending provisions of the Act to such vehicles, legality of.*

BOMBAY REGULATION (XII OF 1827).

Bombay Government Notification No. 955 of 1885, applying the provisions of the Bombay Public Conveyance Act to "all vehicles kept in readiness for hiring on demand," is not inconsistent with the provisions of S. 34 (a) of the Act and is, therefore, not ultra vires. The words 'on demand' are equivalent to 'not ordinarily used for the purpose of plying for hire.' The words 'in readiness' do not limit the application of the Act to any particular class of vehicles. The words "all vehicles kept in readiness for hiring on demand" include vehicles let on monthly hire and kept in the stables of the hirer. The owner of such a vehicle would be guilty of an offence under S. 2 of the Act if he let the vehicle on hire without a license; but the driver of such a vehicle could not be convicted under S. 3 of the Act for plying for hire, as the contract for hiring is between the owner and the hirer. *Jiwanji & Co. v. BOMBAY REGULATION (XII of 1827).

Before any action, under S. 27 of the Regulation, can be taken against a person (1) he must be shown, in accordance with legal procedure, to have been a suspected person, and (2) his assent to the measures adopted should be taken. Emperor v. Kavtik Chaitram. 3 Cr. L. J. 338 : 8 Bom. L. R. 241.

—S. 27—Conditions in bond to be imposed by the District Magistrate himself, nature of.

The restriction in a bond taken under S. 27 of the Regulation should be imposed by the District Magistrate himself, and should not unreasonably affect the personal liberty of the suspect, or have the effect of depriving him of the means of procuring a livelihood. Emperor v. Umar. 14 Cr. L. J. 255 :

19 I. C. 511 : 6 S. L. R. 177.

—S. 27—Notice under, when to be issued—Restrictions when to be enforced.

A notice, under S. 27 of the Regulation, can only be issued after proceedings have been taken against each person individually under Ch. VIII of the Cr. P. C.; and it is only on his failure to furnish security under that chapter that the restrictions mentioned in the latter half of the section can be enforced and that, too, with the assent of the accused person. Emperor v. Gahina Kom Babaji. 7 Bom. L. R. 459.

—S. 37—"Investigate the matter as a criminal offence"—Presence of accused at trial optional—Conviction of individual members—'Village,' meaning.

In proceedings under S. 37, the attendance of the villagers against whom action is being taken is not necessary. The words in S. 37 "investigate the matter as a criminal offence" merely mean that the Magistrate should proceed on evidence and after hearing both sides, or giving both parties an opportunity of being heard. S. 37 only empowers the Magistrate to take proceedings against the inhabitants of a village. When notice has been given to the villagers, the Magistrate may make an order affecting the whole village as a community, but he cannot make an order affecting only individual villagers. The Magistrate has no power to limit to a part of the village the responsibility which attaches under S. 37 to the whole village. The word "village" might be construed to mean also a hamlet or any such independent cluster of houses as might be described as a hamlet or village. Imperator v. Abdula Shah.

11 I. C. 256 : 4 S. L. R. 269.

—S. 37—Neglect—Cowardice not included—Exemption by particular hamlets or individuals—Imposing separate fines on Hindus and Muhammadans.

Neglect under S. 37 must at least consist of acts or omissions which lead to the inference that the inhabitants of a village were in sympathy with the robbers and endeavoured to obstruct or defeat the Police investigation. Mere cowardice is irrelevant to the matter. The section imposes responsibility on the whole community residing within the boundaries of a village, and a Magistrate proceeding under the section has no jurisdiction to exempt particular hamlets, or to exempt particular villagers from his order. It is incompetent to impose separate fines on Muhammadan and on Hindu residents. Emperor v. The Entire Deh (Village) of Chakarkote.

—Ss. 50, 53, 56—Pleader's duty towards client—Clients with conflicting interests, whether can be represented by same Pleader.

By the custom of the mofussil, a Pleader, employed by a party to a proceeding before a Court, is bound faithfully and exclusively to serve that party throughout the whole proceeding. The practice is based on, and implied in, the words of S. 50, cl. 3, and S. 53, cl. 3 of the Regulation. The Pleader in the mofussil is not merely an Advocate—he is the confidential Legal Adviser of the client and does for him those things which in the Presidency towns are often done by Solicitors. For legal advice, for the prosecution of legal proceedings in all their stages, the client depends on the Pleader. This dependence makes the position of the Pleader peculiarly onerous and binds him to give exclusive attention to the interests of the client throughout any proceeding in which he is engaged. It is possible, in winding up proceedings, for a single Pleader to represent several independent creditors of a Company whose interests are not identical. But a Pleader must not represent two different creditors whose interests are known to conflict. The principle is that a Pleader must show exclusive devotion to the interests of his client throughout the proceedings. Therefore, a Pleader must not accept a vakalatnama when he knows that he cannot act for his client throughout the proceedings. Government Pleader v. Bhagubhai Dayabhai.

The duties which are enumerated in S. 6 are the executive duties of the Police Patel; they are duties imposed upon him quite independently of the authority which he has been given under S. 14 to try and punish in cases of petty assault and abuse. The authority been given by S. 14 is a judicial and not an executive authority. S. 6, therefore, does not justify the District Magistrate in stopping the judicial proceeding which is already in progress before the Police Patel. Apart from the power expressly conferred by the Act upon the Magistrate in that connection, the only right of superintendence over the judicial functions of the Police Patel created by the Village Police Act, is vested in the High Court by Clauses 26 and 27 of the Letters Patent. In re : Dayal Kanji.

BURMA ANTI-BOYCOTT ACT (V OF 1922)

the intention to enter into married life must be clear. Clandestine acts of sexual intercourse do not, by themselves, establish marital relationship, and where there is no regular co-habitation under the same roof, and the couple who resort to each other for purposes of intimacy, are thought by some to be engaged, and by others to be cousins or mere friends, proof of marriage has not been established by reputation. Moreover, as it takes two persons to make a contract in order to prove marriage, there must be evidence not merely of a desire by one person to be considered as having married another, but of the consent of that other, express or implied, to the joint assumption of a status consistent only with the marriage bond: Held, on facts that the parties were not married and, therefore, no maintenance order could be passed under S. 488, Cr. P. C. Tun Sein v. Ma San Myint.

BURMA FISHERIES ACT (III OF 1905)

—Preamble—Lessee of fishery rights, whether buys fish—Putting dams to fishery—Members of public, if can fish—Offence of criminal trespass or theft.

Under the preamble to the Act, the Government merely claims to dispose of the right to fish. When a person takes the lease of a fishery, he does not thereby buy the fish to be found therein from Government ; nor does Government transfer the property in the fish to him. The fish come into his possession only when he catches them. It matters not that for his own convenience of catching them he dams up the pond so that the fish cannot escape out of it. This operation is merely preliminary to catching the fish. Even after that has been done, any member of the public may come to the fishery and, provided that he uses not more than four rods and lines, may catch fish therefrom and he does not thereby commit any offence of criminal trespass or theft. *Mohamed Kassim v. —Ss. 6, 7—Criminal Procedure Code, S. 101—Search warrant under S. 6, endorsement of, to another officer—Search by officer to whom warrant endorsed, legality of—Presumption under S. 7.

S. 101 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not applicable to warrants issued under S. 6. The Burma Gambling Act contains no provision authorising the endorsement of a warrant issued under S. 6 thereof by the officer to whom it is issued, to another officer. Therefore, the entry and search of a house by an officer to whom a warrant is so endorsed is not an entry under the provisions of S. 6 of the Act, and consequently anything found as the result of such search cannot give rise to the presumption contained in S. 7 of the Act. *Po Thwai v. —Ss. 6, 7—Search—Entry—Presumption from discovery of instruments of gaming—List of things seized in search.

No presumption arises under S. 7 unless the search, as well as the entry is made in accordance with the provisions of S. 6, and consequently in accordance with the provisions of Ss. 102 (3) and 103 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Where a list of articles seized in a house entered under S. 6 was written on three sheets of paper, the first of which only was signed by the witnesses, it was held that only the articles mentioned on the first sheet had been seized in accordance with the provisions of S. 103 of the Cr. P. C. : and as no instruments of gaming were mentioned in that sheet, it followed that no instruments of gaming had been seized at a search made in accordance with the provisions of S. 6, and that therefore the presumption provided for in S. 7 did not arise. Ana Deva Sing v. Emperor.

—Ss. 6, 7—Search by police-officer—Entry—Witnesses to search—Persons not qualified to witness search—Ward-headman in Rangoon—Respectable inhabitant of locality.

A place is not entered under the provisions of S. 6 unless the officer entering is accompanied by two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality. Where certain premises were entered by a police officer accompanied only by two Ward-headmen appointed under the Lower Burma Towns Act by the Commissioner of Police, Rangoon : Held (Irwin J., dissenting), that in view of the fact that the Ward-headmen in Rangoon are appointed by the Commissioner of Police, and have police duties to perform, and are, in some cases, being constantly called on to attend searches, they do not fall within the class of persons whom the Legislature intended to be called as witnesses, and that, therefore, the premises in question were not duly entered in accordance with the provisions of S. 6. *Emperor v. —Ss. 6, 7—Warrant issued after recording information that gambling is going on at certain place—Presumption under S. 7 if can be made.

The provisions of Sub-S. (1), S. 6 are all important and unless those provisions are strictly carried out, a house or place cannot be said to have been entered under the provisions of that section and consequently the presumption specified in S. 7 cannot be made. A mere record made of the information that illegal gambling is going on at a certain place and leaving no stamp of credibility in issuing the warrant, is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the law. Consequently, the result of the raid or the search made under that warrant does not constitute a legal basis of the presumption under S. 7. Ah Sein v. The King.

—Ss. 6, 7—Criminal Procedure Code, S. 103—Search—Respectable persons in the locality.

The object of S. 103 of the Cr. P. C. in requiring that respectable inhabitants of the "locality" should be called to witness the search, is to ensure that false evidence may not be fabricated. The stress is on the word "respectable" and not on the word "locality". Therefore, for the purposes of S. 103, a person living in a quarter within hail of the place to be searched may reasonably be regarded as an inhabitant of the locality, even if a river flows between. *Emperor v. 12 Cr. L. J. 80 :
9 I. C. 450 : 4 Bur. L. T. 11.

—S. 7—Presumption—Headmen of wards—Whether respectable inhabitants of locality.

Held, that S. 103, Cr. P. C., contemplates that two respectable members of the public and inhabitants of the locality, unconnected with the Government and officialdom, should be called in to witness a search: Held, further, that the headmen were not such persons as S. 103 of the Cr. P. C., contemplates should be called in to witness a search, and consequently the premises were not duly entered and searched under the provisions of S. 6 of the Burma Gambling Act; and that, therefore, the presumption, which S. 7 of that Act enacts shall be drawn, could not legitimately be applied: Held, therefore, that in the absence of evidence to show that illegal gaming occurred on the premises, there was no justification for holding that the premises constituted a common gaming house under the Act and that the convictions of all the accused were unjustified. Ah Tuck v. Emperor.

Where there is no independent evidence as to the actual taking of the commission by the accused and the conviction of the accused rests on the bare presumption coupled with the discovery of the instruments of gaming under S. 7, it is necessary to consider very carefully whether the legal presumption is rebutted by the circumstances of the case and by the evidence produced for the defence. *Chari v. —Ss. 8, 9—Accused, whether can be examined as witness—Evidence of incompetent witness—Procedure.

The evidence given by an accused person under S. 8 is not defence evidence and it does not justify the examination of an accused person otherwise than on the requisition of the Magistrate before whom the trial is being conducted. An accused person cannot be put on his oath or examined as a witness in the case in which he is accused. The fact that there are several co-accused in the case is immaterial, if the accused person whom it is sought to examine as a witness is at the time himself upon his trial with the other accused. *Nga Ngae Gyaw v. ———Ss. 11, 12—Owner of common gaming-house taking part in gambling—Double conviction—Sentence—Separable offences—Penal Code, S. 71.

The taking part in gambling by the house-owner or occupant himself may be and often is, a part of the method of conducting or assisting in conducting the business of a common gaming-house, and may also be a part of the way in which a house is used as a common gaming-house for the profit or gain of the owner or occupier. A house-owner, therefore, who used her house as a common gaming-house, and at the same time took part herself in the unlawful card playing therein, was held to be only liable, by virtue of S. 71 of the Penal Code, to one sentence, viz., under S. 12 of the Gambling Act, although she was liable to convictions under both S. 11 and S. 12. *Emperor v. He cannot be convicted even if there is evidence to show that he received a commission for the use of the cards in the absence of some evidence of habitual keeping or using. —(I of 1918) Ss. 2, 10—Area of restriction—Duty of Magistrate.

An order under the Act confining a person to the four corners of his house is improper. The narrowest limits of restriction should be the village of the person concerned, or the limits of the village to which he is restricted. Before making an order of restriction under the above Act, the Magistrate should satisfy himself that the accused is able to earn his livelihood within the area of restriction. Nga Ba Sein v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 559 : 73 I. C. 175 : 11 L. B. R. 383 : A. I. R. 1923 Rang. 102.

—(II of 1918) Ss. 3, 7—Burma Excise Act, Ss. 64-A—Restriction of person against whom action under S. 64-A may be taken.

The fact that proceedings under S. 64-A of the Burma Excise Act may be taken against an accused does not warrant a Magistrate in taking proceedings against him under S. 3 or in making an order under S. 7 of that Act. Nga Pa v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. J. 141 : 99 I. C. 349 : 4 Rang. 455 : 5 Bur. L. J. 186 : A. I. R. 1927 Rang. 98.

—Ss. 3, 7—Case falling under Burma Opium Law (Amendment) Act, S. 3 does not apply—Order under S. 7 cannot be passed.

S. 3 (1) does not apply to cases which come under S. 3 of the Burma Opium Law (Amendment) Act. A restriction order under S. 7 cannot, therefore, be passed in such a case. Emperor v. Nga Kyaw Hlu. 27 Cr. L. J. 1402 : 98 I. C. 714 : 5 Bur. L. J. 78 : 4 Rang. 123 : A. I. R. 1926 Rang. 182.

—Ss. 3, 7—Person earning livelihood by unlawful sale of opium, whether can be restricted.

The effect of S. 3 of the Burma Opium Law Amendment Act is to introduce an additional ground on which S. 110 of the Cr. P. C. may be applied, and a person who falls within the purview of S. 3 of the Burma Opium Law Amendment Act, may, therefore, by virtue of the provisions of S. 3 of the Burma Habitual Offenders' Restriction Act, be dealt with under S. 7 of the latter Act. Emperor v. Nga Kyaung. 25 Cr. L. J. 930 : 81 I. C. 546 : 3 Bur. L. J. 17 : 2 Rang. 61 : A. I. R. 1924 Rang. 244.

—Ss. 3, 7, 18—Order of restriction, when may be passed.

The Burma Habitual Offenders' Restriction Act provides an alternative to an action under the good behaviour sections of the Cr. P. C., and can be used when it is considered more appropriate or when security cannot be furnished. An order of restriction may also be substituted for an order requiring security for good behaviour, and whether security has been given or not for the unexpired portion of the period. But no order can be passed except in those cases in which the Magistrate could have acted under S. 110 of the Cr. P. C. Before a Magistrate decides to pass an order restricting a person to any specified area, he must be satisfied that that person has adequate means of earning his livelihood within that area. *Emperor v. —Ss. 4, 7—Criminal Procedure Code, Ss. 110, 112—Preliminary order—Failure to mention period of proposed restriction—Irregularity—Proceedings, legality of.

A preliminary order passed under S. 4 of the Burma Habitual Offenders' Restriction Act omitted to state the period for which it was proposed to pass an order of restriction. On the same form, however, the Magistrate passed a preliminary order under Ss. 110 and 112 of the Cr. P. C., and in this case a term of three years was duly entered in the order : Held, (1) that the accused must have been aware that the proposed restriction order was for the same term as that mentioned in the order under Ss. 110 and 112 of the Cr. P. C., and that no failure of the justice had in fact been occasioned ; (2) that the proceedings were not vitiated in view of Cl. XV of the Sch. II to the Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation, on account of the omission to state the period of restriction in the preliminary order. Maung Thwa v. Emperor. 26 Cr. L. J. 1391 : 89 I. —(I of 1918) Ss. 6, 7, 10—Registered offender—Surety bond—Restriction of person to village other than his own—Double report, legality of.

A person restricted under the Act, should not be made to report himself to the village-headman. A person who is proceeded against under the Act cannot be required to execute a surety bond. In order to justify the restriction of a person to a village other than his own, there must be proof that he is able to support himself at that village. Emperor v. Nga Kala. 24 Cr. L. BURMA HABITUAL OFFENDERS RESTRICTION ACT (II OF 1919)

———(II of 1919) S. 7—"General repute," evidence of—Police Officers and headmen, statements of, value.

In order to satisfy himself that the general repute of an accused person is that of an habitual offender, a Magistrate should, as a matter of prudence, require more evidence than that of Policemen and village authorities. But this is not a rule of law, and a Magistrate must, in each case, weigh the evidence and decide as to its sufficiency. No hard and fast rule can be laid down. Nga Pan Yin v. Emperor.

The District Magistrate is the only Magistrate empowered under S. 13 to convert an order under S. 118 of the Cr. P. It is not persons who enter upon available land who are subject to eviction, but persons who are actually occupying available land. R. 52 of rules framed under S. 8 of the Act applies to a person to whom a grant had been made but whose grant had been cancelled, and who remains in occupation even after such cancellation. Such a person is a person who entered upon land which was not available. The rule refers to present occupation and the present status of the land. Certain persons entered upon land which was available. Subsequently such land was made the subject of a grant and a notice under r. 52 (1) was issued but the persons failed to comply with it: Held that the persons could not be deemed to have occupied available land and therefore, could not be proceeded against under r. 52 (2). *Ma Ngaw Yon v. A person proceeded to erect a building in contravention of the plans approved by the Municipality upon which he was ordered by written notice to stop going on with the erection and was prosecuted under S. 180 for building contrary to the plan. The Magistrate found that he did not stop when ordered to do so and that no notice was issued requiring him to pull down or dismantle the extension. He found him guilty of a breach, in contravention of S. 92 (3), (4) and bye-laws framed under the Act and directed that he pay a fine of Rs. 50, and in case of a continuing breach, of a further fine of Rs. 5 a day for every day in which the erection continues to exist after the date of the order: Held, there was no continuing breach of any notice issued by the Municipality, as no notice was proved to have been issued under S. 92 (3) or (4) requiring the building to be altered or demolished, and therefore, that portion of the order was meaningless and inoperative and the only proper order was as to fine of Rs. 50 and was thus not appealable. *Emperor v. BURMA MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1898)

—S. 114 (1)—The Provisions of S. 114 (1).

S. 114 (1) as amended in 1931 does not prohibit the newly establishing of a private market which was not in existence at the commencement of the Act, i.e., 1st July 1898, without a licence from the Municipal Committee within whose area the market is established. Maung Ba Thin v. Pannawantha.

—S. 121—Power to demand passage over lands of private owners for scavenging purposes.

S. 121 empowers a Municipal Committee to require an owner to allow the servants of the Committee reasonable access to or passage over his land for scavenging purposes, whether these purposes concern the land in question or other land, the rights of the residents of the Municipality being protected by the provision that the access to or passage over the land must be reasonable. *Emperor v. —S. 121—Right of Municipality to claim passage over a person's land for scavenging other person's land.

Under S. 121 the Committee has no right to claim a passage over any man's land for scavenging any other man's land. The section only authorises the Committee to require the owner of land to allow access to or passage over his land for the purpose of scavenging it. A person, therefore, cannot be fined for disobeying a notice issued on behalf of the Municipal Committee requiring him to allow reasonable access to or passage over his land for scavenging not only his own property but also that of other people. *Maung Nyein v. A was ordered under S. 130 to refrain from using certain premises, which were considered to be unfit for human habitation, until the Committee was satisfied of their fitness for use. He carried out some repairs, but let the premises to a tenant before doing all that the Committee considered necessary. He was prosecuted and convicted under S. 180 of disobedience of the order, the Magistrate holding that by virtue of S. 147, the propriety or legality of the order could only be questioned in an appeal to the Commissioner : Held, that S. 147 did not debar accused from pleading as a defence to criminal prosecution that the order was ultra vires. Further,—that that part of the order which requir-

A condition in pawnbrokers' licences issued under S. 142 limiting the rate of interest chargeable by pawnbrokers does modify and restrict the law which allows freedom of contract, but it is not on that account ultra vires of the Municipal Committee inasmuch as the power to limit the rate of interest is reasonably implied in the power to determine the conditions of such licenses. If a building is divided into separate and independent dwellings or tenements and those dwellings and tenements are such that the occupants of them do not, to any extent, use or occupy the building as a whole in common, then, even if the separate tenements or some of them are actually used as lodging houses, the building as a whole does not thereby become a lodging house and only those separate and independent tenements which are used as lodging houses need to be registered and licensed. *Emperor v. An order for detention in a Borstal School for any period permitted by the provisions of the Act, can never amount to an enhancement of sentence within cl. (a) (3), S. 423 (1), Cr. P. C. It is clear from S. 25 that an order of detention in a Borstal School is not a sentence of imprisonment; in fact, it is something which is substituted for a sentence of imprisonment. In considering the proper period of detention in a Borstal School entirely different and, in fact, almost opposite consideration arise to those which arise in considering the sentence of imprisonment to be passed on an adult. Under S. 10 a Court of Session on appeal has jurisdiction to order detention in a Borstal School for any period which is legal under the provisions of Sub-S. (1), S. 25, irrespective of the length of the sentence of imprisonment which has been passed by the Magistrate from whose judgment the appeal is brought; and in ordering such detention, of an enhancement of sentence having been made. *Emperor v. It is no part of the ordinary duty of a ward headman to provide coolies to take out a Deputy Commissioner's letters from his headquarters. Therefore, where a person residing within a ward is requested by the headman to convey letters to the Deputy Commissioner's camp and he fails to do so, he is not guilty of an offence under S. 9 (2) of the Burma Towns Act. Emperor v. Nga Po Sin. 22 Cr. L. J. 207 : 60 I. C. 63 : 3 U. B. R. 1920 234.

BURMA VILLAGE ACT (VI OF 1907)

—S. 10.

An abuse of a power means that when a person has power to do a certain thing, he exercises that power in a manner in which authority is not given to him to exercise it. Maung Ba Shin v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 295 : 160 I. C. 477 : 8 R. Rang. 386 : A. I. R. 1936 Rang. 11.

—S. 10.

The meaning and effect of Ss. 10 and 28, is that no Court can entertain a complaint against a headman punishable under S. 10 unless the prosecution has been instituted with the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner. Sein Tha U v. Maung Kyaw Khine. 36 Cr. L. J. 875 : 156 I. C. 149 : 13 R. 336 : 7 R. Rang. 378 : A. I. R. 1935 Rang. 137.

—Ss. 10, 28—Village headman—Protection from prosecution.

A village headman is protected by S. 28 to this extent that he cannot be prosecuted for an act or omission punishable under S. 10 of that Act or for an abuse of his power similarly punishable, even though such act or omission, or such abuse of power is punishable under the Penal Code, or some other law, unless the prosecution is instituted by order of, or under authority from, the Deputy Commissioner. Nga Tun Lin v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 581 : 73 I. C. 325 : 4 U. B. R. 1922 101 : A. I. R. 1923 Rang. 27.

—S. 12—Person who did not pay thathameda tax directed by village headman to appear at Township Office—Failure to appear, if offence under S. 12.

The payment of thathameda tax is not a public duty imposed upon a villager by the Village Act, nor is it any part of his public duties to betake himself to any spot which the headman chooses to order him to visit. If, therefore, a person who has not paid his thathameda tax is directed by his headman to appear at a Township Office but fails to do so, he does not commit any offence punishable under S. 12 of the Village Act. The King v. Maung Kan Tun. 39 Cr. L. J. 626 : 175 I. C. 512 : 1938 Rang. 119 : 10 R. Rang. 505 (1) : A. I. R. 1938 Rang. 180.

—S. 12—Refusal to obey requisition of Headman—Offence—Duty of prosecution.

In Settlement Operation, Headmen have to assist Settlement Officials by turning out villagers for such duties as soil classification, holding-marking, crop reaping, etc., and a villager who refuses to comply with such a requisition by a Headman is guilty of an offence under S. 12. Under S. 12 the prosecution has to prove that the accused was either present at the time when the requisition was made or was informed of it in time to obey it. Pan Ba v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 371 : 77 I. C. 419 : 11 L. B. R. 412 : A. I. R. 1923 Rang. 81.

—S. 19—Headman's order—Removal to another site in village.

A villager refusing to obey an order of the

BURMA VILLAGE ACT (VI OF 1907)

headman to remove to another site in the village is not guilty of an offence under S. 19. Emperor v. Nga Sein. 25 Cr. L. J. 319 :

To justify a conviction under S. 19 (1), it is necessary to show that the accused had built his house without the permission of the Deputy Commissioner, and later than the year 1908, in which year the Act came into force. Emperor v. Nga Nyo. 15 Cr. L. J. 250 :

———S. 21 (a)—Pwe, meaning of—Dramatic performance by amateurs for public entertainment—Notice, absence of—Robbery—Offence.

For the purposes of the Act a pwe ordinarily includes a theatrical or dramatic performance held for public entertainment whether on public or private property. Accused gave a dramatic performance at his house for public entertainment without obtaining a permit for the same. The troupe was composed of local amateurs. During the performance a robbery took place in the neighbourhood : Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under S. 21 (a). Emperor v. Maung Than Gyaung.

———S. 21 (3)—Pwe, what is.

An ordinary anyein, which is a name given to the playing of soft music, or the beating of drums, or a sing-song, cannot be considered to be a pwe within the meaning of S. 21 (3), unless it is performed for profit or by travelling troupes. Emperor v. Ma Lf.

63 I. C. 855 : 13 Bur. L. T. 243.

———S. 23 (as amended in 1921)—Conviction by Magistrate—Deputy Commissioner's power to revise.

The conviction and sentence of a person for an offence made punishable by the Act or Rules made thereunder is not 'an order made under the Act' within the meaning of S. 23 of the Act, nor is a Magistrate when exercising his jurisdiction as such an authority subordinate to the Deputy Commissioner within the meaning of the said section. A conviction and sentence by a Magistrate for an offence under the Act cannot, therefore, be revised by the Deputy Commissioner.

Persons genuinely carrying on the business of money-lending and advancing money on a promissory note or other documents are exempted from the operation of the rules made under S. 20-A and cannot be convicted for taking goods and chattels in pawn for loans of money. *Emperor v. In determining the validity of bye-laws made by public representative bodies under statutory powers, their consideration is approached from a different standpoint from bye-laws of Railway or other Companies, which carry on business for their own profit, although incidentally for the advantage of the public. Courts of Justice are slow to condemn Municipal bye-laws as invalid, on the supposed ground of unreasonableness, and support them, if possible, by a "benevolent" interpretation, and credit those who have to administer them with an intention to do so in a reasonable manner. But, on the other hand, if a bye-law necessarily involves that which is unreasonable, it is the duty of the Court to declare it to be invalid. B. P. S. Pillay v. Moulmein Municipal Committee. 22 Cr. L. J. 113 : 59 I. C. 545 : 13 Bur. L. I. 107.

The building of a wall, however high, on a man's own property for the purpose of preventing his neighbour from acquiring rights of easement over his land, is not in itself a nuisance under the Act. But although the height of the wall may not be a nuisance, yet the accumulation of filth and want of space to clear the drainage between it and the neighbour's house may cause it to be a nuisance. CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1899)

———S. 406—Officers who should inspect busti or submit report—Notice—Owners, duty of.

Under S. 406 an inspection of the busti in which the premises belonging to the petitioner are situate, was made and a standard plan was prepared on a report of a Medical Officer, an Officer of the Corporation and an Engineer who was not an officer: Held, that the plan was not bad in law. The section does not require that Engineer should be a permanent Municipal Officer. Srimati Atarmani Dasi v. Corporation of Calcutta. 8 Cr. L. J. 481 :

8 C. L. J. 507 : 12 C. W. N. 1116.

———Ss. 406, 408, 409—General Committee, powers of—Sub-Committee's power to sanction amendment of original plan.

The law contemplates that all persons interested will be present before the Sub-Committee and will present not merely their own objections to the scheme, but also any objection which they may have to any modification of the scheme on the objections raised by others. It is not impossible that the deflection of the road may be an improvement on the original plan, but that in itself is not sufficient under the law to invalidate the proceedings of the General Committee if the whole scheme was one calculated to effect a necessary improvement in the land covered by the busti. The Calcutta Municipal Act gives the General Committee full discretion to proceed either under S. 406 or under S. 409. The Sub-Committee has power under the Act to sanction any amendment of the original plan even though it be merely to avoid expense and not for the purpose of improving the busti. Srimati Atarmani Dasi v. Corporation of Calcutta. 8 Cr. L. J. 481 :

8 C. L. J. 507 : 12 C. W. N. 1116.

———S. 407—"Owner," meaning of.

The word "owner" in S. 407 does not include "owner of huts" so as to make it obligatory on the General Committee to hear the objections of "owners of huts" under S. 407 before the approval of the standard plan. Corporation of Calcutta v. Muzaffar Hossein Khan. 11 Cr. L. J. 558 :

8 I. C. 53.

———S. 408—Busti ceasing to be so—Applicability of S. 408.

After huts have been removed from a busti land, the land ceases to be a busti land and the provisions of S. 408 can then no longer have any operation on the owner. Abinash Chandra Ganguli v. Corporation of Calcutta. 6 Cr. L. J. 380 :

12 C. W. N. 72.

———S. 408—Notice to improve busti—Owner—Estate vested in Receiver—Direction of Court by whom to be taken.

Where a notice under S. 408 for improving a busti was given to the owner whose estate was in the hands of a Receiver appointed by the High Court: Held, that it was incumbent on the owner to request the Receiver to comply with the notice, after taking the directions of the High Court, and on his failure to comply, to apply to the Court making the Receiver a party to his application. Corporation of Calcutta v. Kassim Ariff Bhau. 12 Cr. L. J. 361 : 11 I. C. 129 : 15 C. W. N. 1002.

———S. 408—Receiver—If Owner, Agent or Trustee.

A Receiver is not the owner of the premises he holds as Receiver within the definition of the term as contained in the Municipal Act, nor is he an agent or trustee in that behalf. Corporation of Calcutta v. Kassim Ariff Bhau. 12 Cr. L. J. 361 :

11 I. C. 129 : 15 C. W. N. 1002.

———S. 408—Road, deflection of—Fresh notice.

Under S. 408 a notice was served upon all the owners of land of a busti. One of the owners objected to a certain proposed road in the standard plan going in a certain direction, on which the Sub-Committee decided that the road be deflected and the standard plan thus modified was approved by the General Committee. The petitioner was then served with a notice under S. 408 to carry out the improvements according to the standard plan so modified, but was prosecuted for non-compliance: Held, that the petitioner was not entitled to a fresh notice with regard to the deflection of the road in order to urge her objections to the deflection before the General Committee. Srimati Atarmani Dasi v. Corporation of Calcutta. 8 Cr. L. J. 481 :

8 C. L. J. 507 : 12 C. W. N. 1116.

———Ss. 408, 407—Notice under S. 408—Standard plan—Copy of plan to be attached to notice.

When the Municipality directs one of several owners of a busti to carry out certain improvements and issues a general notice under S. 408, it is the duty of the Municipality to serve him with a copy of the standard plan approved by the General Committee under S. 407 and point out to him on that plan what work he is to do. Kanai Lal v. Corporation of Calcutta. 5 Cr. L. J. 293 :

11 C. W. N. 508.

———Ss. 408, 409, 574—Owner of land—Owner of busti—Notice—Standard plan.

The Municipality does not proceed against anybody under S. 408. They issue notices in three different kinds of cases. If huts belonging to the occupiers have to be removed, a notice need be issued to them; if they disobey, they are liable to prosecution under S. 574. If improvements are to be done which can be exclusively done by the owners of the land, the same rule applies. If the standard plan includes work which has to be done partly by the owners of the huts and partly by the owner of the land, and a notice is issued under S. 408 on either or both of them, and it is disobeyed, the party in default is still liable to be prosecuted under S. 574. If the whole of the work has to be done by the owners of the huts, then the cancelling of the notice on the owner of the land does not oust the jurisdiction of the Municipality under S. 409. If, on the other hand, the Municipality have cancelled the notice on the owner of the busti land but still require him to carry out any portion of the work, it is clear that they must serve fresh notice on the owner of the busti before they can become vested with any jurisdiction under S. 409. Corporation of Calcutta v. Muzaffar Hossein Khan.

—Ss. 408, 574—Busti improvement—Power and duty of the Corporation in respect thereof.

The duty of the Corporation in improving busti is a most important one and they have been invested with the most ample power, but when certain penal sections enforced by the Criminal Law are put in motion on the report of the servants of the Municipality, it is incumbent on the Magistrate and the authorities of the Corporation to see that the legal procedure which is a condition precedent to any conviction, is strictly and properly carried out. Where a letter was issued by the Deputy Chairman requiring the petitioners to do certain works, but no notice under S. 408 was issued directing them to specifically carry out the works: Held, the conviction of the petitioners under Ss. 574—408 for neglecting to carry out the works, cannot stand. *Kanai Lal v. —Ss. 408, 574, 419—Limitation for starting prosecution under Ss. 408 and 574—S. 419, effect of, in enlarging time after the commission of the offence.

Where a notice under S. 408 was served upon the petitioner, on the 3rd March 1906, requiring her to make certain improvements in a busti within 3 months and on her non-compliance with the notice within the time, a reminder was sent by the Corporation on the 21st June 1906, and then on the 2nd July 1906, a notice under S. 419 of the Act was sent by the petitioner to the Chairman, and on the expiry of six months from the date of this notice, prosecution was started against the petitioner on the 23rd January 1907 with the result that she was convicted under Ss. 408 and 574 of the Act and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 25 : Held, that the conviction and sentence were bad in law as the prosecution was barred by limitation. That the notice under S. 419 of the Act having been served after the offence of the petitioner under Ss. 408 and 574 had been committed, could not have the effect of enlarging the time by six months. *Sm. The petitioner was convicted for disobedience to an order made under S. 449 directing him to demolish a certain building. Since that order, the Municipality had taken rates from the petitioner in respect of that very building : Held, that the acceptance of the rates, did not establish that the Municipality had acquiesced in the disobedience of the petitioner to the order, and that the conviction was good. *Lachmi Narain v. CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1899)

—Ss. 449, 450, 452, 579—Demolition of building, order for—Discretion of Magistrate—Analogy to case of mandatory injunction—Difference.

It is discretionary with the Municipal Magistrate to make or not an order of demolition under S. 449. This discretion is to be exercised after receiving evidence and hearing the defence. The Municipal Magistrate should exercise the discretion vested in him under Ss. 449, 450 and 452 with due regard to those rules which guide Courts of equity in granting injunctions—with this difference that he has also to consider whether or not a building ought to be demolished on the ground of its being a danger or obstruction to the public. *Chunilal Dutt v. The provisions of S. 466 of the old Act were different from the corresponding section of the new Act. In order to determine whether a bye-law framed by a local body duly authorised in this behalf by an Act of the Provincial Legislature and sanctioned by Government,—in this case a bye-law made by the Corporation of Calcutta, under S. 559 (18) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, prohibiting the leaving of a cart or carriage in a public street unattended, is repealed by implication by a rule made subsequently by the Local Government under the authority of an Act of the Imperial Legislature,—in this case a rule made under the Motor Vehicles Act, S. 11 (2) (f) (i), prohibiting a motor vehicle from being allowed to stand in a street or public place unattended,—the test is, whether there is a repugnancy between the bye-law and the rule, where, as in this case, it is possible to read the bye-law and the rule together in such a way as to make the one supplement the other, there is no repugnancy and consequently, no repeal by implication. The mere fact that the offences contemplated by the bye-law and the rule are identical, is immaterial. Manager, Indian Motor Taxi Cab Co., Ltd. v. Corporation of Calcutta.

—S. 561—Bye-laws Nos. 88, 85, interpretation of—Persons guilty of breach of bye-law, whether punishable separately.

Per Curiam (Teunon, J., dissenting).—The breach of a bye-law of the Calcutta Corporation by several persons acting in concert is punishable under the Act as a single offence, the individual offenders not being punishable separately. The joint proprietors of a theatre are "a person" for the purposes of Bye-law No. 85 of the Calcutta Corporation. Therefore, for a breach of the bye-law the proprietors are not liable to be fined separately or more than Rs. 20 in all. When a theatrical performance is continued later than 1 a. m. in violation of bye-law No. 83 of the Calcutta Corporation, the Calcutta Municipal Act provides a punishment for the offence and not for the individual offenders.

Per Chitty, J.—The provisions of the Penal Code have no direct bearing on the question of the interpretation of a bye-law of the Calcutta Corporation. It will be ultra vires of the Calcutta Corporation to frame a bye-law under the Municipal Act providing separate punishments for offenders jointly implicated in a breach of the bye-law. Per Teunon, J.—Under S. 561 a breach of a bye-law framed by the Calcutta Corporation makes the persons jointly guilty of a breach separately liable to be punished with a fine of Rs. 20 each. *Amrita Lal Bose v. There being no express provisions in the Calcutta Municipal Act requiring that notices issued under the Act on behalf of the General Committee should be signed at all, S. 589 of the Act does not stand in the way of the Secretary to the Corporation, who is also the Secretary to the General Committee, signing such notices. But unless a notice purports to have been signed by the Chairman of the Corporation, the special rule of evidence contained in the section would not apply. That is to say, if a notice purports to have been signed by the Chairman, it would not have to be proved that a meeting was held or that it was regularly held. Where, however, the special rule contained in S. 589 cannot apply, proceedings of the General Committee can be proved under the general law of evidence. But printed proceedings themselves would not be sufficient legal proof unless they answer the description of a printed book purported to be published by the authority of the Committee as required by S. 78 of the Evidence Act. The mere fact that the Secretary has signed a notice instead of the Chairman does not affect the merits, inasmuch as it is a defect or irregularity which is cured by S. 102. *Corporation of Calcutta v. Where, therefore, the owner of the land is not the owner of the structures standing thereon, the requisition under S. 271 should be served in the first instance upon the owner of the structures built upon the land and not upon the owner of the land. Where there is an infringement of the Building Rules, the Corporation may make an application either under S. 363 (or S. 364) or under S. 493 but not under both: in other words, it may ask either for demolition or for a fine and not for both. This does not and cannot, however, affect the Magistrate's jurisdiction merely because the Corporation, if it proceeds under S. 363 may not make an application under S. 493. It does not follow that if in a proceeding under S. 363 the Magistrate is satisfied on the facts that a case exists for imposing a fine under S. 493, he may not make such a penal order, either in lieu of or in addition to an order for demolition. The Magistrate, however, should not do so without giving the party affected reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the proposed order. Corporation of Calcutta v. Bangeshidhar Bidasava.

The petitioner set up a flour mill in a room intending to work it by electricity without the previous permission of the Corporation and was convicted under S. 385 (1) read with S. 488 (1) on the 30th March, 1927. He continued to work the mill from the 1st April onwards, and for this, he was prosecuted for having committed an offence under S. 385 (1) read with S. 488 (2) of the Act and was sentenced to a daily fine of Rs. 10 : Held, that the working of the mill from the 1st April onwards did not amount to a continuance of the offence mentioned in S. 385 (1) inasmuch as matters had passed beyond the stage of intention to use electricity and that the conviction was, therefore, illegal. *Murli Dhar Ram Narayan v. —S. 418—Order directing destruction of article—Onus of proving that article is intended for human consumption.

S. 418, cl. (2) puts the burden upon the accused to prove that the article is not intended for human consumption in a case of prosecution under the chapter, but it does not indicate that in all other cases the onus will be upon the Corporation to prove that it is intended for human consumption. Court is entitled to take for granted, when it is not denied, that ghee is an article intended for human consumption. The ordinary presumption that ghee is intended for human consumption is not a presumption of law but a supposition based on common sense when there is no assertion to the contrary. *Daulat Ram Bishan Das v. —Ss. 418, 412—S. 418, when can be invoked—Burden of Proof—Presumption from the mere fact of prosecution.

Before S. 418 can be invoked, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove that what was charged as unwholesome food was "food". Unless this is established, S. 412 cannot, in fact, be infringed at all. In a prosecution for an offence under this section, the burden of proving that what was being sold is "food" intended for human consumption must rest on the prosecuting authority. Once it is shown that the article is an article of human food, if the party charged says it was not intended for human consumption, the onus of proving this will be on him. Merely because the Corporation decide to commence a prosecution under S. 412, the law will not and cannot raise a presumption in their favour that it cannot necessarily be in respect of an article mentioned in the section. Gangadhar Nathmull v. Corporation of Calcutta.

—Ss. 418, 421—Prosecution, meaning of.

Per Graham, J.—Ghee comes within the definition of food as given in S. 3 (31), and is ordinarily used for human consumption. The word "prosecution" used in S. 418, Sub-S. (2), does not necessarily connote prosecution for an offence. Prosecution in its wider or more general sense means a proceeding by way of indictment or information, and as used in S. 418 (2), it may include such proceedings as those taken under S. 421 of the Act. *Daulat Ram Bishan Das v. —Ss. 488, 534—Necessity of prompt action—Delay in starting proceedings—Effect—Corporation must establish that they are within prescribed period.

The provisions of S. 534 indicate the necessity for prompt action and delay in prosecuting an offence under the Act is as little to the interest of the Corporation as to that of the rate-payers. Where, therefore, Corporation seeks to prosecute certain persons under S. 488 and there is no evidence whatever on the record to show when the offence was first brought to its notice, it is the duty of the Corporation to establish that the ———S. 3—Common gaming-house—Necessary requisites—Slips of papers for recording bets whether instruments of gaming—Mere chance of winning, whether a gain.

To make a house, room, place, etc., a common gaming-house, two things are necessary : namely : (i) instruments of gaming must be kept or used there, and (ii) such instruments must be kept or used for the purpose of gain of the person owning, occupying, using or keeping such house, room, place, etc. Slips of paper used for the purpose of facilitating betting operations, e. g., papers on which bets had been recorded are to be instruments of gaming. To satisfy the second element, the intended gain must result to the person owning, occupying, using or keeping the place otherwise than as a result of betting by him. The chance of profit of, or the actual profit made by the successful gambler, is not such gain as the section contemplates. An entrance fee charged by a person owning, occupying or using the place would be gain within the meaning of the section. A commission charged by such a person from persons winning wagers as a result of betting in that place is such gain. A person running a proprietary club where, he allows gaming or betting, would be the keeper of a common gaming-house, whether he himself takes part in betting or not. Such a person makes profit or intends to make profit from his establishment which profit is not the direct result of betting in which he himself may have taken part. The chance of winning wagers is not the gain which the section contemplates. Dr. Ranga Lal Sen v. Emperor.

Where an accused who is proved to have accepted a marked five rupee note, is found with two others and no incriminating articles except a racing book is discovered, the evidence is totally insufficient to show that the accused are found gaming in a common gaming-house or present during any gaming or playing therein or are found present in the gaming-house for the purpose of gaming within the meaning of S. 3. The mere acceptance of the marked currency note is not sufficient to find the accused guilty under S. 45. Hari Charan Banerjee v. Emperor.

Where a person is charged for keeping a common gaming-house and also for permitting his room to be used as a common gaming-house and he is not present in the room at the time of the search, the provisions of S. 47 do not apply to him personally, and when there is no evidence at all to show that the person is the owner or occupier of the room or that he realizes commission for allowing other persons to use the room for the purpose of carrying of the business of betting, the mere fact that some betting slips and racing literature was found in the room is not sufficient to convict the person under S. 44. *Ranjit Singha Roy v. Where in a search-warrant it is stated that the issuing officer has "cause to suspect", and not "reason to believe" as specified in the S. 46, that the premises in question are used and kept as and for a common gaming-house, the search-warrant is invalid, and no presumption arises under S. 47, in favour of the prosecution. *Walvekar v. The words "it shall be evidence, until the contrary is made to appear" in S. 47, mean that the finding of certain things shall be evidence that the place is a common gaming-house. It would be transparently absurd to say that the finding of a pack of cards in a house would be evidence that that house is a common gaming-house. The section was intended to create a special rule of evidence because in view of the preliminary provisions there is not this absurdity in a case when there had been a proper search under S. 46. The section only raises a presumption of fact, and so a rebuttable presumption. If a search warrant is issued under S. 46 and if on a search made on the basis of the said warrant, instruments of gaming are found at the place or on the person of men found there at the time of the search, the fact that such instruments of gaming are found would be evidence of the further fact that the place is a common gaming-house. —Ss. 47, 3—Presumption—Significance of absence of words 'shall presume' or 'may presume' in S. 47—S. 47, explained.

Though the words "until the contrary is made to appear" are rather appropriate to a presumption in the technical sense of the word, the absence of any word like "may presume" or "shall presume" in the section is very much significant, and the discovery of the instruments of gaming in the place on a proper search which is contemplated by the Act, would be an evidence not only to prove the existence of these instruments in that place, as an element to constitute a common gaming-house, but it would be an evidence on the other point also, as regards the making of profit or gain by the owner or occupier, etc., of the place, although according to the ordinary law, it cannot be treated as an evidence of the other fact. When the prosecution relies upon S. 47, the accused can certainly explain away the whole circumstances and "show the contrary" as the section lays down. If the explanation is sufficient, the evidence practically loses its force, and if, on the other hand, no explanation or evidence to the contrary is coming from the side of the accused, a duty is cast upon the Court, to weigh and appraise the evidence in the best manner possible, and he may, if it thinks proper, convict the accused on this evidence, though he is not bound to do so. *Abdul Latif v. CANTONMENT CODE, 1899

It is no part of the duty of the superior Courts to search through a voluminous enactment like the Cantonment Code in order to ascertain whether convictions are maintainable otherwise than under the precise sections quoted by the Magistrate as his authority. Where, therefore, a Magistrate convicts under a wrong section of the Code, whether by inadvertence or otherwise, the accused is entitled to benefit of the mistake and the Magistrate's orders are liable to be set aside as illegal. *Emperor v. The phrase "insanitary state" in S. 83, does not mean an insanitary state generally, but an insanitary state as qualified by the preceding words, that is, an insanitary state resulting from the ill-construction or dilapidation of the building. The word 'defects' in that section means 'sanitary defects,' and the repairs which the notice may require the owner to execute must, therefore, be such repairs as are necessary to remove the sanitary defects resulting from the ill-construction or dilapidation of the building. The word “supply” in S. 13 has a restricted meaning. It has the same idea underlying it in common with the words preceding it. It relates to a transaction between two persons dealing at arm’s length and therefore independent of each other for its purposes. Hence, the servant of a soldier who buys liquor on his master’s behalf and gives it to his master, cannot be said to have “supplied” the liquor to his master within the meaning of S. 13. *Emperor v. —S. 106 (c)—S. 106 (c), whether ultra vires the then Indian Legislature—Even if it had related to Provincial and not Central subject, it could not be challenged by virtue of S. 84 (2), Government of India Act, 1919.

No doubt fines imposed by Criminal Courts in the Province would be properly credited to provincial revenues as receipts accruing in respect of the administration of justice, but only if not otherwise appropriated by competent authority, and entry No. 30 in the list of central subjects, contained in Sch. I of Government of India Act of 1919, “Criminal Law, including criminal procedure,” clearly includes the power to legislate for the destination of fines for any criminal offences with respect to which it was competent for the Indian Legislature to legislate. The Devolution Rules of 1920, in making Criminal Law a central subject, gave the then Indian Legislature power not only to create criminal offences but also to provide for the destination of fines imposed in respect of such offences. Thus the Indian Legislature had power under the Devolution Rules to legislate with respect to Cantonments and with respect to Criminal Law and the latter power included a power to legislate with respect to the destination of fines imposed for breaches of the Criminal Law. The Indian Legislature had, therefore, power to enact S. 106 of the Cantonments Act, 1924. S. 106 was not, therefore, ultra vires the then Legislature. Even if S. 106 of the Cantonments Act, 1924, had related to a provincial and not a central subject, the Act once passed could not be successfully challenged in any Court of law by virtue of S. 84 (2), of Government of India Act of 1919. Accordingly, it was a law in force in British India immediately before the commencement of Part III of the Constitution Act of 1935, and by reason of S. 292 of that Act it continued in force in British India until altered or repealed or amended by a competent Legislature or other competent authority. *United Provinces v. The fact that the lessee may hope that in order to prevent the impounding, the owners will make a payment, does not make the lessee's conduct unlawful nor converts the seizure of the cattle into an attempt at distraint. Per Huda, J.—Such seizure by the lessee without any intention to take the cattle to a pound for the purpose of coercing the owners of the cattle to pay the arrears of rent for grazing is clearly illegal and amounts to an attempt of theft, which the owners are entitled to resist by use of force. *Wazuddi v. The inclusion in S. 4 (o) of the Criminal Procedure Code in the definition of an offence of an "act in respect of which a complaint may be made under S. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act" renders it unnecessary for a Magistrate who is generally empowered under the Criminal Procedure Code to receive complaints of offences, to be specially authorised by the District Magistrate to receive complaints under that section of the Cattle Trespass Act. *Deenadayulu Naidu v. The illegal seizure or detention of cattle, referred to in S. 20, is an "offence" under S. 4 (o) of the Cr. P. C. and is, by virtue of the last clause of Sch. II thereof, triable by any Magistrate; and though, under S. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, a complaint of such illegal seizure or detention must be entertained by a District Magistrate or one specially authorized as required by the section, such Magistrate has power, under S. 192, to transfer such cases, after taking cognizance, to any Subordinate Magistrate for trial. *Budhan Mahto v. The words “under this Act or bye-law made thereunder” in S. 68, should not be read as including any rule made by the Local Government consistent with this Act. Where what the accused has broken is not any section of the Act nor any bye-law under the section, which are the only cases mentioned in S. 68, in respect of which prosecution by a District Council or Local Board or Market Committee is necessary, but a rule made by the Local Government, there is no provision in S. 68, that prosecution for a breach of such a rule can only be initiated by a local body. Where a person has been convicted under R. 16-(a) (2) made under S. 79 (1) (iv) the conviction is not illegal on the ground that the prosecution was not made on a complaint of the District Council or Local Board of Market Committee or some person authorized by District Council or Local Board in this behalf, as required by S. 68, but by a complaint of a Sub-Divisional Magistrate. *Emperor v. ————S. 3 (1), Proviso—License fee imposed by a Municipality on motor lorry, if tax—Person residing in Notified Area Committee plying lorry between C. and A. Municipality, if can impose such fees.

The person residing within one Municipality would not be liable to pay any tax on his motor vehicles which any other Municipal Committee might impose under the provisions of S. 66 of the C. P. Municipalities Act as applied to Berar, but would be liable for any other fee imposed by its bye-laws. The definition of “tax” in the Municipalities Act would not include any toll, rate, due or fee of any kind whatever in addition to whatever kind of impost is mentioned in S. 66. License fee for motor lorry imposed by Amraoti Town Municipality is not a tax. Consequently a person residing in Chandur Bazar Notified Area Committee would be liable for license fee imposed by Amraoti Town Municipality, on motor lorries plying between Amraoti and Chandur Bazar. *Amruttal v. A notice given by a Municipal Committee requiring a party to alter or demolish a building is bad unless given within a reasonable time. What is "reasonable time" is determined according to the circumstances of the case and with particular reference to the means and ability of the person by whom the duty is to be discharged. What is made criminally punishable under S. 122 is the act of making an encroachment. The section cannot reasonably be construed as making punishable an existing encroachment not made by the accused person. In the case of an encroachment not made by the accused, S. 67 (2) provides full means of redress which can be enforced by the penal provisions of S. 139. Under S. 199 it is disobedience of a lawful direction given by the Municipal Committee which is punishable. There is no provision in that section for punishing the mere erection of a building without the sanction of the Committee. The correct procedure, if a person erects a building without sanction, is laid down in S. 103, whereby the Committee may require the building to be demolished. If that order is disobeyed, then S. 199 comes into play but not before. The words "plying for hire within the limits of Amraoti Town Municipality" occurring in R. 1, framed by Amraoti Town Municipality under S. 179 (g) (as applied to Berar) cannot be confined to the narrow interpretation that the whole of the service which is offered must take place within the limits of the Municipalities and that otherwise the rules do not apply. Held, that sanction is given to prosecute in respect of offences against bye-laws framed inter alia under S. 180, cl. (a), and not in respect of specific or existing bye-laws. The sanction is given to take action for breach of any bye-laws which have been made under that section or which will be made under that section, and it is quite unnecessary for the Municipal Committee to give fresh delegation each time a bye-law is made, if it falls under the clause in respect of which sanction has already been given. *Ramchandra Jagannath v. —S. 180, proviso—"At the time of the making of such bye-law," meaning of—Limitation, when starts—Confirmation by Government, effect of.

The words "at the time of the making of such bye-law" in the proviso to S. 180, must refer to the making by the Municipal Committee and can have no reference to the confirmation of a bye-law by an authority which has no power to make any bye-law. The date of confirmation by Government may be a more convenient and generally intelligible starting point for the limitation provided in the proviso to S. 180, but it is impossible to depart from the clear meaning of the words used. Government has no power to make bye-laws or to alter them. It can only accept or reject what is put before it by a Municipal Committee, and the making of bye-laws must, accordingly, refer to the final resolution of the Municipal Committee in

The words 'every day after the first' in S. 199 must be interpreted as every day after the first day to which the conviction relates. A fine of Rs. 50 for a breach on a particular date of a bye-law framed by a Municipal Committee under the Act and Rs. 5 for the subsequent days on which the offender persisted in the breach is illegal, even though the breach of the bye-law was first committed on a day previous to that for which there is actually a conviction. *The Secretary, Municipal Committee, Nagpur v. —Ss. 3, 4—"Molestation"—Creditor demanding payment of debt—Debtor becoming angry and bidding him go to Civil Court—Creditor losing temper beating debtor with shoe and leaving the place—If can be punished under S. 4.

The terms of the definition of "molestation" given in S. 3, indicate that the obstruction or using violence or intimidation to constitute molestation should be accompanied by the intent to cause the debtor to abstain from doing what he has a right to do or to compel him to do what he has a right to abstain from doing. The creditor demanded payment of his debt, from his debtor whereupon the latter became angry and bade him go to Civil Court. The creditor lost his temper and beat the debtor with a shoe and left the place. The creditor was prosecuted for an offence under S. 4. Held, that the circumstances in which the creditor used violence did not warrant any assumption that the creditor's intention was to compel him to pay the debt. But on the contrary its effect would presumably be to confirm the debtor's resolve not to pay. The creditor did not resort to violence as an instrument to compel the debtor to pay when he was not disposed to pay. 41 Cr. L. J. 168 : 185 I. C. 348 : 1939 N. L. J. 455 : 12 R. N. 156 : A. I. The power to issue writs of certiorari to inferior Tribunals is not taken away from the High

CEYLON CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ORDINANCE No. XV OF 1898)

Court by the Press Act. Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J.—A High Court has jurisdiction to issue writs of certiorari in order to remove the proceedings of Courts or of persons entrusted with judicial functions out of the ordinary course of legal procedure for the purpose of quashing them. A writ of certiorari is issued not only to Courts but to Tribunals specially constituted and entrusted with duties of a judicial character. The proceedings will not be removed to the superior Court by a writ unless they are capable of being determined there. Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The freedom of the Press is not a 'licensed calling' but a common law right inherent in the subject, subject to certain limitations, and this right is not affected by the Press Act. It is not a condition precedent to the issue of a writ of certiorari that the Court issuing should be able to place itself in the position of the Court whose order is complained against. The fact that the power to issue the writ is recognized in legislative provisions is not an argument for holding that the power does not exist alimunde. Unless the power to issue a writ of certiorari is expressly taken away, it inheres in the Court. There is nothing in the Press Act which can be said, expressly or even by implication, to take away this power from the High Court. Even if the right is taken away, the High Court can interfere, if there has been a want of jurisdiction in the inferior Court. The reason of the rule is that the power prima facie exists in the High Court in all matters which are not within the cognizance of the inferior Court: and when this latter Court acts beyond its powers, it usurps jurisdiction which the High Court can control. Even where jurisdiction to issue the writ has been expressly taken away, if fraud was practised, the writ can issue. Annie Besant v. Government of Madras. 18 Cr. L. J. 239 : 37 I. C. 607 : 2 M. W. —————Defective charge—Previous conviction not set out distinctly in the charge-sheet, effect of—Material omission—Enhanced punishment—Penal Code, S. 75.

It is a part of the duty of the Courts to draw charge-sheets accurately, and where they fail to do this, the persons convicted are entitled to the benefit of any material omission. Where enhanced sentences are contemplated under S. 75, I. P. C. a separate head of charge must be distinctly drawn with this object. Where this was not done, the Court reduced the enhanced punishment awarded under S. 75, I. P. C., though there was some reference to previous convictions in the statements of the accused recorded on the reverse of the charge-sheets. Dungri v. Emperor.

An accused person is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact nature of the charge brought against him, and, unless he has this knowledge, he must be seriously prejudiced in his defence. Where he is convicted on a charge different from that on which he is tried, the nature of the case made at the trial, the evidence given and the line of defence made are matters to be taken into consideration to decide whether he has been prejudiced or not in the trial. *Balkeshwar Singh v. —————Frame of—Charge under S. 398, Penal Code, substantive S. 393 should be mentioned—Omission curable under S. 537, Cr. P. C.

In a charge and finding under S. 398, P. C., the substantive S. 393, should be mentioned as well as the supplementary S. 398. The omission to specify the section would, however, be covered by S. 537 of Cr. P. C. Where the heads of charge did not contain a mention of the allegation that two out of three accused were carrying das and the Judge omitted to ascertain from the jury whether they found, as a fact, that the said two accused were armed with das : Held, that it was possible the jury overlooked the serious nature of the charge. Joinder of charges of offences under S. 411, I. P. C. with charges of offences under S. 414, is bad. If, however, the charges are framed in the alternative under S. 236, there would be no defect in the trial. But having framed defective charges the Magistrate cannot remedy the error at the conclusion of the trial by saying in his judgment that he would only proceed on the charges that had been legally joined. If he wishes to strike out any of the charges, he should do so before concluding the trial, and should give the accused an opportunity of making such defence as he thinks fit on the charges as amended. Where this is not done, the error vitiates the trial and makes the conviction illegal. Chettu Kakkar v. Emperor.

If the accused be charged with an offence under S. 304 or with one under S. 325, they may be convicted of an offence under S. 323, though no charge under that section has been drawn up against them. But if they be charged with the offences alleged to have been committed by another person in the course of a riot and it is found that there is no riot, they should not be convicted of the offence of hurt in respect of their individual acts with which they are not charged and of which there is no trace in the Judge's charge to the jury of ever having been imputed to them. If the Judge omits to call the attention of the jury to the fact of the original witnesses having been abandoned by the prosecution of two of them having given evidence for the defence and of the witnesses examined in Court for the prosecution being entirely new witnesses, it is sufficient misdirection in the Judge's charge to the jury to set aside the conviction. *Dasarath Mandal v. I. L. R. 34 Cal. 325.

———Misdirection—Jury not misled.

In a case of theft the Judge in his charge to the Jury said 'the accused may be presumed to be the thief if there is no evidence to the contrary' instead of the word 'unless he can account for his possession.' But there were passages in the charge which showed that the Judge did not mean and the jury did not understand him to mean that they should pay no attention to any explanation which the accused might put forward in the absence of evidence to support it: Held, that the passage did not amount to a mis-direction. In re : Chinmu. 16 Cr. ———Misdirection—Proof of previous conviction against accused—Judge charging Jury that they were proved—Effect of misdirection on sentence and verdict.

Where, in a Sessions case, the Judge told the Jury that certain alleged prior convictions against the accused were proved instead of leaving it to them to decide whether they were proved or not: Held, (1) that it amounted to a misdirection, (2) that the misdirection did not affect the conviction of the accused as the question of prior convictions could be gone into only after the Jury returns their verdict, and (3) that though it affected the question of sentence, the Court was not prepared to interfere seeing that the sentences passed were not too severe. *Thoolipatti Rama Gowndan v. Where there was a previous trial of certain persons for the same offence, the Judge ought to refer to that trial only, if at all, in order to warn the jury that they were not bound by its result, but were, on the contrary, bound to form an independent opinion on the evidence then before them. It is a misdirection if he Independently of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the High Court has jurisdiction under S. 15 of the Charter Act to interfere with the order of a Presidency Magistrate dismissing a complaint under S. 203, Cr. P. C., and direct a further enquiry. There is no form of judicial injustice which the High Court, if need be, cannot reach under the Charter Act. S. 15 of the Charter Act should be interpreted in an extended sense so as to give the High Court power of superintendence, that is to say, powers of revision over proceedings of subordinate Courts. *Lekhraj Ram v. —Ss. 27, 34—Nature of S. 27—Construction of S. 31 arrears—Realization by warrant—Procedure.

S. 27 is mandatory and prescribes the procedure which must be followed in realizing arrears by warrant. It affords no scope for the contention that an Assessor Panch if he chooses to act himself instead of authorizing some one else, can act arbitrarily, or irregularly. A section like S. 34 must be construed very strictly and narrowly as to a certain extent it detracts from the fundamental right of the subject to protection from any act of the executive authorities, which is not entirely lawful and regular, or is, in any way, arbitrary. The words "any defect in the power or writing" in S. 34 must be read with the words "want of form", and must, therefore, be taken as covering only formal defects. The fact that the signature of the Assessor Panch is placed wrongly at the bottom of the form instead of in the place provided for the purpose is only a formal defect, and would be covered by S. 34. Similarly, it may be that the omission of any date in the proper place is also a formal defect. With regard, however, to the complete omission of any authorization to any one to execute the warrant, this is not a formal defect such as can be remedied by S. 34. Gopal Mahlon v. Emperor. 41 Cr. —Policy of law—Guardianship of minor wife.

It is against the policy of the Child Marriage Restraint Act, that a husband should obtain possession of his wife if she has not attained the age of 14 years. When a Police Officer investigates a non-cognizable case under the orders of a Magistrate, the report which he makes, at the end of his investigation, is of the same nature as a report, made under S. 17, Cr. P. C., and such a report being a Police report, is not a "complaint," though if a Police Officer acting without instructions from a Magistrate reports a non-cognizable offence to a Magistrate with a view to the Magistrate taking action, this is a complaint.

An offence under S. 5, being punishable only with simple imprisonment up to one month or a fine of Rs. 1,000, or both under Sch. III, Cr. P. C. is not cognizable, so when such a case is forwarded to an Assistant Superintendent of Police for investigation, a letter written on behalf of the Assistant Superintendent of Police to the District Magistrate is a "Police Report" and not a "complaint."

A mistake of fact can be pleaded successfully only if on account of such mistake an act which otherwise would be an offence ceases to be an offence.

The Penal Code, as well as the Child Marriage Restraint Act, are extra-territorial to the extent, that if Native Indian subjects commit offences punishable under these laws even outside British India, they are liable to be tried and punished when found in British India. Where a child marriage is celebrated under a mistaken view that the territory where it was celebrated was outside British India, the mistake of fact does not have the effect of rendering the celebration of the child marriage in question innocuous or innocent. The Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, can pursue them even when they have broken that law after going outside British India, and a fortiori after going to a place which they believed to be not part of British India but is really part of British India. *Sreeramamurthy v. —Ss. 5, 6—Negotiations, preparation or preliminary acts, if punishable—Marriage outside British India not penalised.

CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT (XIX OF 1929)

S. 5 of the Child Marriage Restraint Act takes account only of performing, conducting or directing a child marriage, that is to say, the actual marriage ceremony itself and not of any negotiation, preparation or any other preliminary acts.

S. 3 of the Penal Code postulates that before any person can be tried in British India for an offence committed beyond British India, there must be in existence a law making him liable to be so tried. The contraction of a child marriage outside British India is not an offence under the Child Marriage Restraint Act, since there is no provision in the Act nor in any application of any part of the Penal Code that participating in such a marriage is an offence when committed outside British India. *Haider v. —S. 9—Taking cognizance, meaning of—taking cognizance before obtaining certificate required under S. 188, Cr. P. C.—Taking cognizance and enquiry into charge—Distinction between.

Taking cognizance does not involve any formal action or indeed action of any kind but occurs as soon as a Magistrate applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence. Thus it occurs as soon as he reads the complaint and even before he examines the complainant which he is bound to do. Having taken cognizance, he proceeds to enquire into the charge. Hence a Magistrate has jurisdiction to take cognizance under S. 9 before certificate is obtained under S. 188 of the Cr. P. C. The taking of cognizance is an action which is prior to and independent of the enquiry into the charge, so that the Court may have jurisdiction to take cognizance, although it has no jurisdiction to enquire into the charge before certificate is obtained. *Harnarayan v. Marriage is in China, concluded according to the will of the contracting parties, and has in some way or other to be made public. Where the question of the status of a chief or first wife is not involved, in the case of marriage among Chinese Buddhists, what really constitutes a valid marriage is the consent of the parties concerned to live together as husband and wife. They must, however, give sufficient publicity to their relationship. The result is the same whether the Burmese Buddhist Law or Chinese Customary Law applies to a marriage between a Chinese Buddhist man and a Chinese Buddhist woman. Consequently, where it is shown by the evidence that the parties lived together as husband and wife for some time and they were accepted as such by their relations and friends and there is no evidence to prove that the wife refused to live with her husband, she is entitled to maintenance. *Ma Kyin Hlaing v. There is nothing in S. 63 which deprives the ordinary Criminal Courts of Jurisdiction to try all offences under that section. S. 258 does not deprive a Criminal Court of its jurisdiction to try a criminal offence. Under S. 59-A, Court of Wards Act, a manager of Court of Wards is a public servant and where, according to the rules made by the Court of Wards under S. 70 of that Act, such a person getting certain salary cannot be appointed without the previous sanction of the Govt., it follows that he cannot also be dismissed without the sanction of the Govt. When such a manager therefore commits an offence under S. 63, Chota Nag. Ten. Act, while acting in his capacity as a manager of the estate, a sanction of the Govt. under S. 197, Cr. P. C., is

CHRISTIAN MARRIAGE ACT (XV OF 1872).

———Ss. 3, 68—Construction of—'Professing Christian religion,' meaning of—Act, scope of—S. 68, applicability of—Christian marrying according to Hindu rites—Offence—Estoppel, doctrine of, whether applies to Criminal Law.

Per Knox, J.—The Act has to be so construed that no case be held to fall within it which does not fall both within the reasonable meaning of its terms and within the spirit and scope of the enactment. No violence must be done to its language in order to bring people within it, but rather care must be taken that no one is brought within it who is not within its express language. It is not competent to a Court to extend the words of an enactment by construction.

The word 'means' in S. 3 is an inclusive term and, therefore, no one except a person who professes the Christian religion comes within the purview of S. 68. A person is not a 'person professing the Christian religion' within the meaning of the Act simply because he is baptised as an infant, when he has no possibility of saying to the world what is the faith to which he belongs, nor can any importance be attached to the fact that he attends a Christian school. The dressing as a Christian, especially in the Bhangi class, is not conclusive on the point either. A person cannot be said to profess the Christian religion if at the time of his marriage he performs devi ki puja. Quacre.—Whether S. 68 of Act XV of 1872 was intended to penalise marriages other than those intended to be or purporting to be marriage under the Act. Per Walsh, J.—A person, who, on the eve of his marriage, resists all pressure and persuasion to be married as a Christian by a Christian ceremony and who, having by birth and connection other religious associations, deliberately decides to marry a sweeper according to sweeper rites and does public worship to Hindu gods in the presence of his relatives and friends, is not 'a person professing the Christian religion' within the meaning of S. 3 of the Christian Marriage Act. The principle of estoppel has no place in the Criminal Law and the idea of a Christian by estoppel is a contradiction in terms. The object of Act XV of 1872 is not to prevent people marrying as they wish, but to enable them to protect themselves and their posterity by a lawful and binding marriage if they wish to be married as Christians. There is no express prohibition preventing a professing Christian from doing violence to his faith and marrying a non-Christian by a non-Christian ceremony. S. 68 of the Act does not make it criminal for a professing Christian to marry by a ceremony which is void under S. 4 of the Act. It refers to a class of persons who solemnize or profess to solemnise a Christian marriage under the Act not being authorized by S. 5 to do so. Maha Ram v. Emperor.

———Capital case—Admissions of Counsel—Reliance on circumstantial evidence—Conclusion, mode of arriving at

In a case of circumstantial evidence where the failure of one link destroys the chain, it is of the utmost importance to get on to the record every piece of evidence which makes the chain : otherwise there is danger of an Appellate Court not understanding how a particular conclusion has been reached and of miscarriage of justice resulting. It is better in a capital case not to take admissions from the Counsel for the defence at all. Every fact ought to be strictly proved on the record. Sheo Narain Singh v. Emperor.

In case of circumstantial evidence, the facts found should be inconsistent on a reasonable hypothesis with the innocence of the accused before a conviction is pronounced. It is not in every case of doubt nor in every case in which a view different from that of the Jury can be entertained on the evidence, that a reference under S. 307 of the Cr. P. C. is to be made to the High Court; the verdict of the Jury should be manifestly wrong before such a reference is made. Emperor v. Surnamoyee Biswas. 14 Cr. L. J. 660 : 21 I. C. 900.

———Conviction when evidence compatible with guilt and innocence, both.

It is a fundamental rule of universal application in cases dependent on circumstantial evidence that in order to justify the inference of guilt, the incriminating facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused, and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. Where, however, circumstances are as consistent with the innocence as with the guilt of an accused person, they cannot have any probative force, and no inference of his guilt should be drawn. *Hurjee Mul v. The complainant was a paying guest of one W, a tenant in a certain bungalow. The owner, having obtained the consent of the Municipal Commissioner, commenced to erect stables on the open land round the bungalow. A complaint was filed under S. 515 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, and the Magistrate being of the opinion that the stables were a nuisance, directed the Municipal Commissioner not to issue a licence. The Municipality appealed: Held, (1) that the stables were a nuisance with reference to the residents of the house in relation to the particular circumstances of the case; (2) that the fact that the complainant was a paying guest was not material; for the purpose of enabling him to complain of the nuisance, it was sufficient that he resided in the house; (3) that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to direct the Municipal Commissioner not to issue a licence. *Municipal Corporation of Bombay v. ———Ss. 33 (m), 380—‘Owner’, meaning of—Service of notice on trustee or agent.

The word ‘owner’ includes not only the person who ultimately receives the rent but also an agent or trustee who receives it on account of the ultimate owner, and the Municipality can serve a notice under S. 380 upon such agent or trustee. There is nothing in S. 380 which renders the definition of ‘owner’ inapplicable either to the case of the owner of a hut or shed or to the case of the owner of the land on which such hut or shed stands. *Lakshman Pandu v. S. 246-A and the following sections of the Act, dealing with water-closets, merely relate to the construction, position and proper maintenance of water-closets, and have nothing whatever to do with the supply of water to such closets.

S. 257 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act being a penal section must be strictly construed. Under that section, only certain kinds of work can be requisitioned by the Commissioner to bring the condition of the privy or water-closet within the previous provisions of the Chapter, that is to say, with regard to its construction or maintenance. The Commissioner has no power under this section to direct a landlord to maintain a water-closet in good order by pumping a sufficient quantity of water into the cistern. *Salé Mahomed Haji Ahmed v. The accused added small bath-rooms to the third and fourth floors of an old residential house in the City of Bombay. The house had been built before the coming into force of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, and newly added bath-rooms fell below the original height of the house : Held, that the accused had neither raised nor erected a building within the meaning of S. 349-B. *Kallianji Vardhaman v. —Ss. 461 (o), 418—Bombay Municipal Bye-laws, Ch. III, Bye-law 4, whether ultra vires—Measure, honest and current, but not verified, use of—Offence—Commissioner, duty of.

The fourth bye-law in Chapter III of the Bye-laws framed by the Bombay Municipal Corporation, which prohibits the use of any measure which has not been duly verified by comparison with the standard measure, is beyond the powers vested in the Municipal Corporation under S. 461 inasmuch as it purports to give the Municipal Corporation or the Commissioner far wider power than that conferred by S. 418 of the Act.

S. 461 (o) only empowers the Corporation to pass bye-laws to prevent the practice of fraud by the use of measures which are false or defective with reference to the standard measures assumed to have been verified by the Commissioner as directed in S. 418. But neither under S. 418 nor under S. 461 has the Corporation the power to say that in the private markets of the city no measure shall be brought into use unless it has already been verified by the Commissioner. Rather the provisions of the Act import that if the Commissioner has reason to suspect any particular measure which is current, his method of controlling it is to verify it as directed under S. 418, and thereafter to secure that the measures of that denomination in use shall correspond with the verified measure. There is nothing in S. 418 or under S. 461, Cl. (o), which would justify the Municipality in prohibiting the use of an honest measure in a private market merely on the plea that if the use of that measure were prohibited, it might be easier for the Municipality to ensure that the measure actually in use should not be false or defective with reference to the verified and standard measures.

The use of an honest measure of one description cannot be said to facilitate the commission of fraud by the use of false or defective measures of a wholly different name and description. In re : Jivraj Dhanji.

The words 'any assembly or procession' in S. 23 (3) of the City of Bombay Police Act are not restricted to an assembly or procession in a public place but are wide enough to include an assembly in a private place. A Commissioner of Police can lawfully promulgate an order under S. 23 (3), if, in his opinion, such an order is necessary for the preservation of the public peace or safety, but if he has manifestly abused his powers, the Court has power to say that he has not exercised his discretion fairly and honestly. There is no provision in the City of Bombay Police Act as to the mode of serving an order in writing under S. 23 (3) of the said Act but knowledge of the order may be proved by circumstances which give rise to an inference that the accused had such knowledge. In order that the disobedience of an order under S. 23 (3) may amount to an offence under S. 188, Penal Code, it is not necessary that the accused should intend to produce harm or contemplate his disobedience as likely to produce harm. It is sufficient if he knows of the order and his disobedience produces or is likely to produce harm. Though the disobedience of an order of the Police Commissioner under S. 23, Sub-s. (3) is an offence punishable under S. 127 of the Act, it would be equally punishable under S. 188 of the Penal Code, if all the conditions laid down by that section are fulfilled. *Bhalchandra Trimbak Ranadive v. CIVIL DISPUTE

—S. 112-D—"Reputed thief," meaning of—Person convicted of theft, whether reputed thief.

The fact that a person had actually been convicted of theft is a ground for holding that he is a "reputed thief" within the meaning of cl. (d) of S. 112. The expression "reputed thief" does not mean a thief who has achieved not merely one or two convictions but in addition a reputation and a distinction amongst his neighbours and his community as habitual offender. A reputed thief is not something more than a convicted thief but something less and means a person who even though he might not have been convicted as a thief is so reputed in the circles to which his reputation is a matter of interest. A man who is convicted twice of theft is more than a reputed thief and not less, the question of reputation being one of fact. Emperor v. Chand Mahboob. 27 Cr. L. J. 123 : 91 I. C. 699 : 27 Bom. L. ———Ss. 109, 110, 112—Proceedings for contempt for publication of article in newspaper by Advocate—Whether of a criminal nature—Leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

Where the High Court took cognizance of contempt committed by the publication of an article in a newspaper by an Advocate and ordered notice to be issued to the writer, editor printer and publisher to show cause why they should not be convicted and punished for contempt, the proceedings are in the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the High Court and of a criminal nature. A mere misdescription in the notice issued by the office will not make the proceeding one of a civil nature. Nor can it be said that merely because the Advocate was an officer of the Court, the proceeding against him was of an administrative character. The conviction and the fine imposed are themselves sufficient to show at least that the proceeding was not of a civil nature. The matter is of an exclusive jurisdiction and the order is final. S. 110 has no application to such a case. Nor is S. 109 applicable and S. 112, Sub-S. (2) expressly makes the Code inapplicable to matters of criminal jurisdiction. Further as the question for consideration being not so much of jurisdiction as of an interpretation of the passage objected to, the case cannot be certified as being otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council. *Kapildeva Malviya v. The District Judge informed the pleader that if the applicant did not appear in person, a warrant would be issued. The applicant, therefore, did appear in person on the same date and offered an explanation that as the notice was in Arabic characters, he did not know that his personal attendance was required. In such a case, a High Court has power to interfere under S. 115 of the C. P. C., 1908.

In a case where steps under S. 476, C. P. C., are to be taken, it is highly desirable

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT XIV OF 1882)

Refusal of sanction to prosecute—Application for revision to original side of High Court whether proper—Revision whether Civil or Criminal necessary—Application in civil case—Enquiry, if necessary.

Where a Judge of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta refuses sanction to prosecute under S. 196, Cr. P. C., an application for the revision of his order should be made to the original side of the High Court and not to the Appellate Side. Shamsher Mundul v. Ganindra Narain, 29 C. 498 followed.

An application for sanction to prosecute made before the Small Cause Court is a case under S. 115 of the C. P. C.

The High Court on the criminal side has no jurisdiction under S. 439 of the Cr. P. C. to interfere with an order of a Civil Court passed under S. 195, but the High Court has such power under S. 115 of the C. P. C. for a Civil Court when acting under S. 195 is not in any way exercising Criminal jurisdiction. Saligram v. Ramji Lal 28 A. 554 : 3 A. L. J. 394 : A. W. N. (1906) 103 : 3 Cr. L. J. 400 : I. M. L. In an application for sanction, it may be that to decide whether the case is a false case will involve an enquiry, but if the Judge finds that necessary, he must hold it. Ramdin Bania v. Saw Bakhsh Singh.

S. 151, C. P. C., does not give the Court a blank cheque or an absolute discretion to make any order it pleases. It certainly does not confer upon any Court a summary jurisdiction, which it does not otherwise possess, to punish contempts by fine or imprisonment.

The summary power conferred by S. 480 of the Cr. P. C. only extends to offences in the nature of contempt, committed in the view or presence of the Court. It may also extend to contempts committed in the precincts or offices of the Court, but it does not extend to contempts committed outside the Court.

An order fining a person for contempt of Court on his failure to appear with books in Court is not legal either under S. 151, C. P. C. or S. 480, Cr. P. C. Chogmal Sraogi v. Emperor.

Order XVIII, rule 5, requires that a statement of a witness when recorded, should be read out to him and this, for a double reason. —O. XVIII, rr. 5, 6—Provisions about interpretations—Directory—Deposition interpreted by reader, Judge and Pleader not attending—Prosecution for perjury—Validity.

The provisions of O. XVIII, rr. 5 and 6 of the C. P. C. are directory, and non-compliance with them does not render the deposition inadmissible at a subsequent trial of the deponent for perjury.

If the deposition has not been read over to the witness in the presence of the Presiding Judge, it does not prove itself under S. 80 of the Evidence Act, but it may be proved in some other way. The Judge who recorded it, can prove it or the accused can admit it; S. 91 of the Evidence Act merely excluding the oral contents of a deposition but not making it admissible in evidence.

If a deposition has been interpreted by the Reader working in the same room as the Judge even though the Judge and the Pleaders for the parties did not attend to the interpretation, there has been sufficient compliance for all purposes with the provisions of O. XVIII, r. 5, and a deposition so interpreted proves itself under the provisions of S. 80 of the Evidence Act. Mirabax v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 500 : 68 I. C. 36 : 18 N. L. R. 192.

A preliminary decree in a suit for accounts directing the defendant to furnish and render accounts is not an "injunction" within the meaning of r. 32 of O. XXI, C. P. COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE WITH ENEMIES ORDINANCE (VI OF 1914.)

———If retrospective—Trading with the Enemy Proclamation No. 2, cl. 5 (7) scope of Royal Proclamation of 5th October 1914—"Destined," meaning of—Enemy destination, when not—Penal Statute, construction of—Agency—Principal, when criminally liable for agent's wrong—Offence under Proclamation—Intention, necessity of—"Trading," meaning of.

Ordinance VI of 1914 is not retrospective and for the purpose of establishing an offence of trading with an enemy against an accused under the said Ordinance, a Court can look at only such acts as took place after it was enacted.

Where, however, the accused shipped mica from India before the war, and it was sold after the declaration of the war and the date of the Trading with the Enemy Ordinance No. 2, by the accused's agent in Europe to a German firm:

Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under cl. 5 (7) of the Ordinance.

The word "destined" in the trading with the Enemy Proclamation No. 2, cl. 5 (7), when used in connection with the word "trading," is not limited to "on the way to" but is equivalent to the term "intended for." Legal destination must not be confused with actual destination.

Sub-cl. 7 of S. 5 of the Proclamation deals only with goods actually in existence or capable of ascertainment and there must be an actual dealing with the goods themselves or with the documents of title thereto to constitute an offence under the third part of the said clause, and the mere intention or desire to get goods for the enemy does not constitute an offence under this part of the sub-clause, unless there are goods in existence or capable of coming into existence.

Ordinarily a person is not criminally liable for an act unless he has himself committed the act. But in cases where a particular intent or state of mind is not of the essence of the offence, the acts or defaults of an agent in the ordinary course of his employment may make the master or principal criminally liable, although he was not aware of such acts or defaults and even where they were, were against his orders.

To constitute an offence punishable under the Proclamation, a particular intent or state of mind is not necessary, it is sufficient to constitute an offence thereunder by the principal that the act has been committed by the agent, even although not expressly authorised by the principal.

Per Beachcroft, J.—The term "trading" includes any commercial transaction between parties which has, for its object, the transfer of goods by purchase, sale, barter, or exchange. It is not necessary that goods should, in fact, pass and the term cannot be limited to cases where one of the parties is actually in physical possession of the goods. Indar Chand v. Emperor.

—S. 3—"Obtaining," meaning of—Receiving goods ordered before Ordinance, whether offence—"Attempt to obtain," rule of law applicable to—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), S. 511—Interpretation of Penal Statutes.

▲ The accused was charged with contravening the Royal Proclamation of the 9th September 1914 at Madras between the 21st and 26th November by obtaining and attempting to obtain goods from an enemy and from an enemy country. It appeared that on the 28th July the accused had cabled to his agent (who afterwards became an enemy) an order for 28 bales of tobacco leaf and on the 31st July the agent wrote saying that he had executed the order. These bales were shipped at Amsterdam on the 7th October and consigned to the London Agents of the accused, who paid the freight, took them out and re-shipped them for Madras where they arrived on the 21st November. The Ordinance prohibiting commercial intercourse with the enemy had come into force on the 14th October. It further appeared that on the 26th November accused wrote two letters, one to his Amsterdam Agents and the other to Blum Bros., an enemy firm in Goch. In these letters the accused sought to get his tobacco stored with Blum at Goch in Germany, sent to Amsterdam and undertook to pay the incidental charges :

Held, (1) that inasmuch as the goods in question were shipped before the 14th October 1914, the date when the Ordinance came into force, the accused could not be convicted of "obtaining" enemy goods within the meaning of S. 3 of the Ordinance.

(2) (Coutts-Trotter, J., dissenting) that the charge could not be altered into one of obtaining goods at Madras from his London Agents by way of transmission from an enemy, as, if the accused be held to have obtained the goods in London, he could not again be convicted of obtaining them from himself.

Y (3) that the conduct of the accused in sending the letters of the 26th November 1914 amounted to an attempt within the meaning of S. 511, I. P. C., which also applied to cases punishable under some other law, and that it could not be contended that it was no offence for the accused to send for his own goods, as the removal of merchandise, even though acquired before the war, from the enemy country after knowledge of the war without a Royal licence is illegal.

Per Wallis, C. J.—A Penal Statute has no retrospective operation unless the intention of the Legislature that, it should have such effect; is clearly indicated.

The word "obtaining" in S. 3 of the Commercial Intercourse with Enemies Ordinance VI of 1914 includes procuring, or ordering the goods from the enemy as well as taking delivery of them on arrival.

Though the provisions of the I. P. C. do not in terms apply to offences created by special laws, there is no reason why the same rule should not apply to cases of attempts which are punishable under some other law.

Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—The same goods could be "obtained" twice within the meaning of the section and such an act would constitute a second offence under the latter part of the subsection, but as the accused had not been charged under it, the charge could not be altered, especially in view of the fact that the accused had acted without realising that he might be breaking the law.

Whenever the Legislature declares a series of acts to constitute a crime, any person who has entered upon that series of acts must, from that moment, stay his hand, and if he proceeds to the completion of the series of acts, he is guilty of the crime.

Breaches of law enacted to safeguard the welfare and safety of the Empire in war time must be punished, if only as a warning to others. Frederick Edmed Hooper v. Emperor.

COMPANIES ACT (VII OF 1913)

———S. 74—"Manager", definition of—Default in filing balance-sheet—Managing Agents and Directors, liability of.

The expression "Manager" as used in S. 74 of the Companies Act, 1882, includes every person or body of persons who conducts or conduct the affairs of a Company and to whom its management, subject to the control of the Directors, is entrusted.

Where, therefore, a firm is entrusted with the management of a Company, it cannot escape liability for its misfeasance or non-feasance merely by calling itself "Managing Agent" instead of "Manager".

Where the balance-sheet should have been made out and filed with the Registrar on the 20th August 1913, but was not in fact submitted till the 22nd October, and the Chairman of Directors and the Managing Agents of the Company were convicted under S. 74 :

Held, (1) that the Chairman of Directors could not escape liability on the ground that he depended upon the Managing Agents to do all that was necessary, and had, on several occasions, asked them to do so.

(2) that the fact that one of the members of the firm, which acted as Managing Agents, was also punished in his individual capacity as a Director was no reason for not punishing him as a member of the firm. Tota Ram v. Emperor.

So a complaint under S. 74 of the Indian Companies Act, VI of 1882 for wilful default in filing a balance-sheet, not brought by the Registrar but by a clerk of his office and counter-signed by the Public Prosecutor, is bad in law and not entertainable by a Criminal Court.

Under S. 76 the company had to hold a general meeting before 30th June, 1922; no such meeting was held, but on a requisition of certain share-holders, an extraordinary meeting was held on 29th June, 1922. On the complaint of a share-holder the Directors of the Company were prosecuted for failing to comply with Ss. 76 and 131 of the Act, and it was argued on their behalf that the holding of the meeting on 29th June, 1922, was a compliance with the provisions of S. 76 :

The proviso to S. 132 of the Evidence Act does not prohibit the answers given by an officer of a Company during his examination under S. 196 of the Companies Act from being proved in evidence against him in subsequent criminal proceedings. The said proviso applies only to answers given to particular questions and does not confer a general immunity on a person who has been examined, and, further, does not come into operation at all unless the witness has objected to answering such questions. The expression ‘in civil proceedings’ in S. 196 (7) of the Companies Act was introduced with a view to save the provisions of S. 132 of the Evidence Act and does not confine the admissibility of the notice of an examination under S. 196, Companies Act, to civil proceedings only. Such evidence is, therefore, admissible against the person examined, unconditionally in civil proceedings and subject to S. 132 of the Evidence Act in criminal proceedings. *Ram Chand Gurcila v. —Balance-sheet—Loan and Deposit—Consolidation of the two amounts to suppression of the truth—Loan to depositor shown as overdraft—Concealment of facts.

A loan and a deposit are items differing completely in principle from the balance-sheet point of view. Strictly speaking, they ought to appear on different sides, for one is an asset and the other is a liability. Consolidating the two and presenting them as one item to the readers, is striking case of non-disclosure, amounting to a suppression of the truth.

A Company giving a loan to one of its depositors and showing it to be an overdraft to him, conceals the true statement of facts Super- —Examination of complainant in presence of accused—Pardanashin lady—Daughter of prostitute married to respectable person—Examination on Commission.

Where it is doubtful whether any offence has been committed, the trying Magistrate must, before any other step is taken, insist on examining the complainant in the presence of the accused so that the latter may have an opportunity of cross-examining the complainant. Where the daughter of a prostitute marries a respectable person, in whose family women observe pardah, she is entitled to be treated with respect, despite her lowly origin. A complaint was made at Delhi under Ss. 363, 442, against the accused residing at Hissar for kidnapping A. The accused contended that A was his lawful wife and resided at Hissar as a pardanashin lady: Held, (1) that A should not be compelled to attend the Delhi Court for the purpose of her examination; (2) that A should be examined upon Commission through the District Magistrate, Hissar, arrangements being made to respect her pardah. *Abdul Ghaffar Beg v. —————Admissibility made to a person not a police officer and when accused not in police custody—Confession made under inducement held out by one who is not a person in authority—Proof of so much of confession as relates to facts thereby discovered—Admission—Evidence of Magistrate to prove confession recorded by him.

The appellant who was accused of murder, made a statement during the course of police investigation to certain men of influence in the neighbouring villages when no Police official was present. In consequence of the accused's statement, some money and other things belonging to the deceased were found at the places mentioned by him. The accused also made a statement before the Magistrate of the District. The District Magistrate refused to make the memorandum referred to in S. 164, Cr. P. C., because it appeared to him that the statement was not the accused's free and spontaneous statement but was made by him in consequence of certain hopes which a constable had held out to the accused. In the Court of the Committing Magistrate when the statement made by the accused before the District Magistrate was read out to him, he stated that some constables had given him bhang and liquor to drink and he did not remember what he stated. The Sessions Judge held both statements to be inadmissible, the former under S. 27 of the Evidence Act, the latter on the ground that it did not contain the memorandum required under S. 164, Cr. P. C. On appeal, the Court of Judicial Commissioner directed the Sessions Judge to examine the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate was examined and he proved that the accused appeared to be in perfect possession of his senses and that there was absolutely nothing to suggest that he was under the influence of any intoxicant: Held (Per Ryves, O. A. J. C.) that the confession of the accused made to the residents of the neighbouring villages was admissible in evidence against him. A confession made not to a police officer and not improperly obtained as laid down in S. 24 of the Evidence Act is always admissible against an accused. In the same way any fact discovered in consequence of an admissible confession can also be admitted against him. Held (per Scott, J. C.). The former confession although having been made when the accused was not in police custody, proof of it was not prohibited by Ss. 24 and 26 of the Evidence Act and it was relevant under S. 24 if inducement held out to him did not proceed from "a person in authority"; and the latter was admissible under S. 533, Cr. P. C., as the evidence of the District Magistrate who recorded it was taken to prove that the said statement was made voluntarily. Harbans v. Emperor.

where the confession takes place under such circumstances that the Police Officer is in such proximity as to make his presence likely to affect the mind of the confessing person, is in substance a confession to a Police Officer and is, therefore, inadmissible. But, although a mukhia is undoubtedly a man in authority, where the accused volunteers to make a statement to a Mukhia if he could get some assurance from him that he would do his best to help the accused, the statement cannot be regarded as having been made under any inducement proceeding from a person in authority so as to make it either inadmissible or irrelevant. *Emperor v. —Admissibility—Voluntary and true confession—Retraction of confessions—Duty of Judge.

A judge should, in the first instance, see whether a retracted confession is voluntary or has been improperly induced. The mere fact that a prisoner puts in a plea of not guilty and denies having made the confession or explains having made it by allegation of Police torture, is enough in itself to put a Judge upon enquiry. And he then has to decide before admitting the confession at all, or allowing it to be looked at, whether it has been improperly induced. That is a question for the Court, i. e. the Judge to answer in limine. If it appears to the Judge that the confession has been properly induced, no matter how true it may be, he is bound to exclude it. Emperor v. Bhagi Vedu.

—Admissibility—Uncorroborated, retracted confession—Stolen property found in possession of accomplice identified by accused in presence of Chief Constable, but not before Magistrate and without other articles being placed with it.

Where an accused, who was alleged to have been a member of a gang that had committed a dacoity in a certain village at night with face cloths on, identified in the presence of a Chief Constable, some of the stolen property found in the possession of one of his accomplices in the identification that was carried under the orders of a Magistrate without other articles being placed with the articles to be identified, and where he also made a confession before the Magistrate, which he retracted at the trial and which was also uncorroborated : Held, that the whole procedure was simply an inadmissible confession obtained quite irregularly in a manner which had no sanction whatsoever ; that the Magistrate should have been present when the accused identified the property ; that the weight to be attached to an uncorroborated confession, must depend upon the circumstances of each case ; that when such a confession as this, which had been made the fabric rather than the foundation of their case by the police was made, they could very easily corroborate it and force its truth —Extra-judicial—Extra-judicial confession—Proof—Evidence, weight of.

Per Shadi Lal, C. J.—It is the duty of the Court before which an extra-judicial confession, is relied upon, to scrutinise the whole of the material before it. A mere general statement to the effect that the accused had confessed is too uncertain a foundation to sustain a finding against him, and the trial Court ought to ascertain, as far as possible, the very words spoken by an accused who is said to have confessed. But if the evidence gives the substance, though not the actual words of the statement made by the accused, and if that evidence is reliable, there is no rule of law which precludes the Court from holding that the confession has been proved. If the statement made by the witness as to confession represents merely the impression conveyed to his mind of what was said by the prisoner, it would be insufficient to prove the alleged confession. But it cannot be held that in no case can an extra-judicial confession, not reduced to writing, be held to be proved unless the Court has before it the exact words used by the accused. Per Fforde, J.—A general statement by a witness that an accused person admitted that he committed the offence for which he is being tried, should not be accepted, and as a rule of caution, the Court should always require the witness to give the actual words uttered by the accused as nearly as the witness can recollect them. But the fact that witness gives the statement in the third person instead of in the first person does not make the evidence inadmissible. When a witness cannot give a clear account of what the accused is alleged to have said, his testimony will have to be received with great caution. Nur Ali v. Emperor.

Before a confession can be admitted into evidence, the first thing which requires proof is that the accused person really made it. It is necessary that the Magistrate should take the signature of the accused person. If the Magistrate is not examined as a witness, in view of the fact that the appellant signed his own signature in the Judge's Court, it cannot be said that the confession was proved. But when he is ex-mined and he has proved that it was the accused who made the statement, it is sufficiently proved. Emperor v. Aradjaddin Molla.

A widow before entering her village threw off her illegitimate child into a well, out of shame. When its body was found floating, she was questioned. She made a full confession but retracted it at the trial. She had been seen nursing a child before the murder. She also admitted the body to be her child's, when it was found. Medical evidence showed that the death had been caused by the skull striking a hard substance : Held, that a retracted confession, if believed to be both true and voluntary, was sufficient basis for a conviction. Emperor v. Bai Pani Ramji.

—————Retracted confession, weight of, against co-accused.

—————Retracted, value of—Corroboration, whether necessary.

The mere fact that a confession is retracted, will not raise an inference that it was obtained by improper inducement, threat or promise. Such a conclusion can only be arrived at from the evidence on the record or from the surrounding circumstances. The weight to be attached to a retracted confession depends upon the circumstances. As regards the person making it, a retracted confession may, without corroboration, form the basis of a conviction, and though corroboration may be necessary as regards a co-accused, it is not necessary that this corroborative evidence should, by itself, be sufficient to support a conviction. *Mohar Singh v. CONFESSION it false—Question as to why a person should retract confession—Whether one of law.

The mere fact of retraction of confession is not sufficient reason for believing that the confession must have been false. —————Retracted.

The retracted confession of an accused, if voluntary and true, should be acted upon by the court and so far as the accused making the same is concerned, is sufficient for his conviction. It cannot be rejected simply on conjectural grounds. Paragi v. Emperor. 33 Cr. L. J. 929 :

Though a confession may not be a full and perfect account of the whole state of the accused's mind and though the accused may not have made a clean breast of every detail, yet, where it could not possibly be supposed that he could be tutored to that extent, or that, if tutored, he would produce a statement which is without any doubt substantially an account of what he himself tells of his knowledge, the confession is relevant, even if retracted. *Jadav Amra v. Though, as a matter of law, a conviction may be based upon a retracted confession, if the Court can come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is voluntary yet, as a matter of prudence, no conviction should be based upon such a confession. CONFESSION —————Test of truth.

A Court must not regard the confession of an accused person in the same light as an admission made by parties in civil litigation. What has to be seen in the case of a confession is (1) whether the same was made voluntarily, i. e., whether the disqualifying conditions given in S. 24 of the Evidence Act were absent, and (2) whether, if so, the confession is true as tested by the circumstances in which it was made, its internal evidence of truth and its consistency with other evidence. Moti Ram v. Emperor.

24 Cr. L. J. 904 :
75 I. C. 152.

—————Test of truth—Appellate Court's power to enquire whether confession is voluntary.

Although at the foot of a confession there is a memorandum signed by the recording Magistrate that he believed it was voluntarily and the Sessions Judge was also convinced that the statements were true, yet these facts do not preclude the Appellate Court from enquiring into the matter. Sangam Lal v. Queen-Empress, 15 A. 129, referred to. Under the circumstances of the case, the confession was held not to be voluntary. Jogjiban Ghose v. Emperor.

—————Test of truth—Deposition—Contradiction—Value to be estimated of the confessional statements.

—————Test of truth—Inducement though outside S. 24, Evidence Act, proved—Admissibility of confession.

If a confession is not voluntary in the wider sense of the term, ex hypothesi, the person who made it did not do so from any desire to tell the truth. In such circumstances if facts are proved which suggest that an inducement of some kind, although outside the terms of S. 24, Evidence Act, was in fact given, the Court may well refuse to accept the confession as true. *Kalijiban Bhattacharjee v. ———Value of—Confession—Retracted Confession—Value of confession against co-accused.

The net result of authorities on the value of confession seems to be this.

(i) That it is not illegal to base a conviction upon the uncorroborated confession provided the Court is satisfied that the confession was voluntary and is true in fact ;

(ii) That, from the point of view of legality, pure and simple, the fact that a confession has been retracted, is immaterial ;

(iii) That the use to be made by the Court of

a confession, whether retracted or not, is a matter rather of prudence than of law ;

(iv) That in the absence of corroboration in material particulars, it is not safe to convict on a confession, unless from the particular circumstances in which it was made and judging from the reasons, alleged or apparent, of the retraction, there remains a high degree of certainty that the confession, notwithstanding its having been resiled from, is genuine ;

(v) That when it is a question of using a confession against a co-accused and the Court would not be prepared to accept the confession per se as sufficient, the corroboration ought to be of the kind that not only confirms the general story of the crime, but also unmistakably connects the said co-accused with the crime. *Jawan v. Some of the articles relating to the pending case (1) remonstrated against universal house-searches, (2) protested against the harsh treatment of those arrested, (3) deprecated certain methods attributed to the Police, (4) requested that the case should not be tried before a Special Magistrate as a conviction by him would not command public confidence, and (5) appealed to the recognised fairness of the Government accompanied with advice: Held, that no suspicion of contempt of the High Court was to be found in the first, second and fifth of the topics even if there be involved in them what the prosecution alleged to be the inexcusable effrontery of presuming to offer advice to the higher authorities; that the fourth topic allowed that the writer knew very little about what he was discussing, for the case could not be tried and the accused convicted by a Special Magistrate, as their trial in the normal course could only come before a Sessions Judge sitting with assessors and against such a tribunal not a word had been said, and that there was nothing in the discussion of this topic that was in any degree a contempt of the High Court; that as to the third topic, although indiscriminate attacks on the Police are to be deprecated, there was nothing in the articles showing a contempt of the High Court; and that the only ground on which it could be suggested that there had been a contempt of the High Court, an interference with the due administration by it of justice, would be if it could be shown that witnesses might have been deterred from giving evidence by reason of this attack of Police methods or of anything contained in the articles. *Governor of Bengal v. Comments on cases pending or allegations against parties to suits that are pending, if published, amount to contempt. But it would not be right to lose sight of the intention by which a person giving publicity to a matter which is the subject of the charge of contempt, is actuated.

On the day after the suit against an Attorney by his daughter was instituted, there appeared in two newspapers a paragraph in each with a sensational heading "Suit against an Attorney", which made reference to some of the allegations set out in the plaint. The Attorney replied by two letters addressed to the Editor of the two newspapers, being only anxious to preserve his honour being discussed in the papers before a judicial declaration had been made by a competent Court. On the statement contained in those letters, an application had been founded for proceedings for contempt against him: Held, that as the intention of the defendant was not to pre-possess or prejudice the mind of any person in reference to the matter in dispute, and as the publications in question did not tend to prejudice a trial, the date of which was not yet fixed and which was very distant, the defendant (Attorney) was not guilty of contempt. *Ketra Moni Dasi v. ———Contempt proceedings—Nature of—Rule of evidence, applicable.

Per Woodroffe, J.—All proceedings, whether in respect of civil or criminal contempts, are of a criminal nature. But it does not follow that the procedure in such cases is in all respects the same as in an ordinary criminal case. In fact both the offence of contempt as also the jurisdiction and procedure under which it is tried are sui generis. There is but one rule of evidence which in India applies both to civil and criminal trials, and that is contained in the definition of "proved" and "disproved" in S. 3 of the Evidence Act. Per Mookerjee, J.—A criminal contempt is conduct that is directed against the dignity and authority of the Court. A civil contempt, on the other hand, is failure to do something ordered to be done by a Court in a civil action for the benefit of the opposing party therein. Consequently in the case of a criminal contempt, the proceeding conforms as nearly as possible to proceedings in criminal case. In the case of a civil contempt, the proceeding in its initial stages at least may be deemed as instituted at the instance of a party and thus to possess a civil character. But here also refusal to obey the order of the Court may render it necessary for the Court to adopt punitive measures against the persons who have defied its authority; at that stage at least the proceedings may assume a criminal character. In both the cases, a proceeding to punish for contempt has the essential qualities of a criminal proceeding. In the matter of, Amrita Bazar Patrika. 19 Cr. L. J. 530 :

—High Court's inherent power to punish for contempt—Whether taken away by Contempt of Courts Act (XII of 1926).

The inherent power of the High Courts as superior Courts of Record to punish contempt of themselves has not been taken away by the Contempt of Courts Act. A non-Presidency High Court is a Superior Court of Record, and, this being so, the jurisdiction to punish for contempt of itself is inherently vested in every High Court. ———Ill-treatment of process-server, whether contempt.

It is contempt of Court to assault, ill-treat or threaten a process-server engaged in his duty. The object in punishing for contempt in such a case is not to vindicate the dignity of the Court but to prevent undue interference with the administration of justice. The law has armed the Court with the power and imposed on it the duty of preventing breve manu and by summary proceedings any attempt to interfere with the administration of justice. It is on that ground and not on any exaggerated notion of the dignity of individuals that insults to witnesses, jurymen and process-servers are not allowed. The principle is that those who have duties to discharge pursuant to orders of Court are protected by the law and shielded on their way to the discharge of such duties while discharging them and on their return therefrom in order that such persons may safely have resort to Courts of Justice and carry out their orders. The test in such matters is, did the person in question abuse or maltreat the serving clerk while he was engaged in the execution of his duty. C. A. H. Skone v. F. N. Bason.

—Kinds of contempt—Object of punishment.

Any act done or writing published calculated to bring a Court or a Judge of the Court into contempt, or to lower his authority, or calculated to obstruct or interfere with the due course of justice, or the lawful process of the Courts, is a contempt of Court. But if reasonable argument or any expostulation is offered against judicial act as contrary to law or the public good, a Court could or would treat that a contempt of Court. The jurisdiction to punish for contempt is a jurisdiction, to be exercised only when the case is clear and beyond reasonable doubt. The Judge of a superior Court is precluded by considerations of decency of taking proceedings for libel or slander before the ordinary tribunals which are subject to his own jurisdiction, and he requires, therefore, in the exercise of his office a special protection in order that his authority and dignity may be maintained. A Judge should neither fear nor resent public criticism, whether of his judgment in matters of law or his judgment in matters of fact but it is his duty to protect the dignity of his office and to punish those who offer it affront. Punishment is inflicted for attacks of this character upon Judges, not with a view to protect either the Court or the individual Judges but with a view to protect the public, and especially those who, either voluntarily or by compulsion, are subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, from the mischief they will incur. *Emperor v. —Newspaper articles—Journalistic privilege—Imputation of discharge.

In determining whether an article published in a newspaper constitutes a contempt of Court, the point to be considered is the natural and probable effect of the article, and not only the avowed intention of the Editor. Where the article, as a whole, would leave on the mind of an ordinary reader the clear impression that injustice had been deliberately done in the trial of a case, the publication of such an article would constitute a contempt of Court. Judges and Courts are alike open to criticism, and if reasonable argument or expostulation is offered against any judicial act as contrary to law or the public good, no Court could or would treat that as contempt of Court. But it is to be remembered that in this matter, the liberty of the press is no greater and no less than the liberty of every subject. It is a jurisdiction, however, to be exercised only when the case is clear and beyond reasonable doubt. The freedom of the journalist is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject, and to whatever lengths the subject in general may go, so also may the journalist, but apart from Statute Law his privilege is no other and no higher. No privilege attaches to his position. Every contempt of an inferior Court will not necessarily constitute a contempt of the High Court. All such cases must be considered on their own facts. A newspaper in commenting upon a criminal trial pending against certain volunteers of a Temperance Committee in a Mufussil Court said : ".....there is a thick rumour that on the day on which the volunteers were arrested, the trying Magistrate ran up the stairs of the Collector's office and called on Mr. Painter and that some whisper took place between them. It is a contempt to publish an article in a newspaper commenting on the proceedings in a pending criminal prosecution or civil action. But the summary jurisdiction to punish for contempt of this nature ought only to be exercised when it is probable that the publication will substantially interfere with the due administration of justice. It is not enough that there should be a technical contempt of Court: The fact that the accused was not aware of the pendency of proceedings in a Court when he wrote the article is not a valid defence. Any act done or writing published, which is calculated to bring a Court or a Judge into contempt or to lower his authority, or to interfere with the due course of justice or the lawful process of the Court, is a contempt of Court. *Government Advocate, Burma v. finding of Magistrate, held amounted to contempt of Court—Tendering of apology by accused, if sufficient for securing immunity from punishment.

Object of proceedings for contempt is not the protecting of either the Court or individual Judges from a repetition of the offence of contempt but the protecting of the public, and especially those who either voluntarily or by compulsion are subject to its jurisdiction, from the mischief they will incur if the authority of the tribunal be undermined or impaired. (117 I. C. 180 (1) and 89 I. C. 833 (4), relied on.) An article in a newspaper containing comments on the finding of the Magistrate in an inquest under S. 176, Cr. P. C., into the death of a person which are tantamount to imputations of deliberate perversity, incapability and partiality to the Police are calculated to bring into contempt, the Magistrate, in his capacity as such, and the editor and the publisher of the newspaper are liable. The mere fact that an apology has been tendered by the accused is not a sufficient reason for securing immunity from punishment. (89 I. C. 833 (4), relied on.) *Advocate-General, Burma v. —————Order of High Court staying proceedings—Telegram by Vakil informing Magistrate of stay order—Order not communicated officially—Magistrate, refusal of, to adjourn case—Bona fides.

An order of the High Court cannot be defied with impunity by a party or an officer who having knowledge of it chooses to disregard it. Notice of an order can be given otherwise than by an official communication of it. Where the liberty of subject is involved and the Court is dealing with the conduct of a responsible officer such as a Magistrate of same standing, it shall give the benefit of every doubt to the respondent, and when no inferences are possible, shall accept that which is consistent with the bona fides uprightness of the Magistrate. The High Court having made an order staying further proceedings in a criminal case pending before a Sub-Divisional Magistrate, the Vakil for the accused sent a telegram to the Magistrate informing him of the order. A formal petition was also filed supported by an affidavit of a person who was instructing the Vakil for the accused and who was present when the stay order was made by the High Court. This application was rejected and judgment was delivered the same afternoon. The accused applied to the High Court asking that the Magistrate be committed to prison for contempt of the High Court's orders: Held, (1) that the Magistrate was bound to obey the High Court's order; (2) that as the Magistrate had not refused to adjourn the cases knowing or having reason to believe that the High Court had stayed proceedings, he could not be said to be guilty of contempt. *Ponnuswami Aiyar v. A coarse expression used by a litigant but addressed to the Court can scarcely be treated as an intentional insult to the Court or an interruption of its proceedings, under S. 228, I. P. C., even if the expression was actually overheard by the presiding officer. Litigants are bound to conduct themselves in an orderly manner, but too much notice should not be taken of a sudden lapse, during a moment of excitement, into language which is unfortunately too common among the lower class of rustics and is not meant to be taken seriously. Where a litigant is detained and adopts a submissive attitude when brought before the Court later after the excitement has worn off, a due admonition or a petty fine at the most is sufficient for preservation of order. *Jit Singh v. —————Person addressing threatening notice to Counsel demanding withdrawal of certain allegations of fact made in written statement of his client held guilty of contempt of Court.

The law of contempt covers the whole field of litigation itself. Various persons have their respective contributions to make in the proper fulfilment of the task. They are necessarily the Judges or the Magistrates, the parties to the proceeding, or their agents or Pleaders or Advocates, the witnesses and the ministerial or menial staff of the Court. All these persons can well be described as the limbs of the judicial proceeding. Anything that tends to curtail or impair the freedom of the limbs of the judicial proceeding must, of necessity, result in hampering the due administration of law and in interfering with the course of justice. It must, therefore, be held to constitute contempt of Court. A person addressed a notice to a Counsel demanding that certain allegations in the written statement of his client should be withdrawn unconditionally and an apology tendered on pain of legal proceedings being taken against him. Another letter was sent by him or some one interested in him to the client complaining against the Counsel: Held, that the addressing of the notice and the letter to the Counsel was calculated to interfere with and to obstruct or divert the course of justice. The sender was, therefore, clearly guilty of contempt of Court. (Helmarc v. Smith (1), In re: Johnson (2), Smith v. Lakeman (3) and 159 I. Proceedings for contempt are not brought to vindicate the character of any particular Judge or Judges who have been assailed, but to protect the administration of justice. The question of sensitiveness does not arise. The only question which the Court has to decide is whether the published article lowers or tends to lower the dignity and prestige of the High Court: Held, that the passage in the article in the newspaper clearly constituted a contempt of Court of which the High Court in the interests of the administration of justice was bound to take cognizance: Held, also that the fact that a large proportion of the population who resort to the Court for the decision of their disputes are illiterate is of little importance in considering this matter. —Publications, when constitute contempts—Three kinds of offences—Publishing injurious misrepresentations of party to action—Fact that trial Judge would not be affected by article has no bearing on matter—Belief of publisher while publishing article—Held, article constituted gross contempt of Court.

All publications which offend against the dignity of the Court, or are calculated to prejudice the course of justice, will constitute contempts. Offences of this nature are of three kinds—namely, those which (1) scandalise the Court; or (2) abuse the parties concerned in causes there; or (3) prejudice mankind against persons before the cause is heard. To publish injurious misrepresentations directed against a party to the action, especially when they are holding up that party to hatred or contempt, is liable to affect the course of justice, because it may, in the case of a plaintiff, cause him to discontinue the action from fear of public dislike, or it may cause the defendant to come to a compromise which he otherwise would not come to, for a like reason. The fact that the trial Judge would not be affected by the article has no bearing on the matter. Whatever might have been the belief of the publisher at the time he published these articles, that belief will not protect him from the consequences if his publication has been of such a nature as to disturb the free course of justice. Where, therefore, while a suit was pending, an article was published which stated the defendant's case and inferred it to be true; made accusations against the plaintiffs as having ruined the defendants and of having concocted false criminal cases against them and further accusations of plaintiff using his influence maliciously and ended in an appeal for assistance for the defendants : Held, article constituted gross contempt of Court. *Raja Velugoti Sarvagna Kumara Krishna Yachendra Bahadur Varu of Venkatagiri v. —Publishing and commenting on document forming part of the record of a pending case—High Court, power and duty of, to protect inferior Courts.

It is not permissible to publish comments on or extracts from any pending proceedings in a Court unless the leave of the Court is first obtained. It is a contempt to publish any part of the record of a case while proceedings are pending. The High Court has power to protect Courts of inferior jurisdiction, and in proper cases, it should extend its protection to Courts in the Mofussil. A District Judge wrote a letter to the Registrar of the High Court for determination of the question whether certain conduct of some of the legal practitioners practising in the District Judge's Court, was consistent with their duties as Advocates and Pleaders. —Reasonable comment—Purpose of punishment for contempt.

If reasonable argument or expostulation is offered against any judicial act as contrary to law or the public good, no Court could or would treat that as contempt of Court. But to say of a Judge of the High Court that he had decided a case not according to the dictates of justice but in order to please and carry favour with others, or to say that the door of the High Court had been closed against a certain community, is a very grave and serious contempt of the Court. Underlying principle of punishment for contempt is not to protect either the Court as a whole or the individual Judges of the Court from a repetition of them, but to protect the public, and especially those who either voluntarily or by compulsion are subject to its jurisdiction, from the mischief they will incur if the authority of the Tribunal were undermined or impaired. Attacks upon Judges excite in the minds of the people dissatisfaction with all judicial determinations, and whenever men's allegiance to the laws is fundamentally shaken, it is the most fatal and dangerous obstruction of justice, calling out for a more rapid and immediate redress than any other obstruction; not for the sake of the Judges as private individuals, but because they are the channels by which the King's justice is conveyed to the people. In the matter of : Habib.

His proper course is to apply to the Court to redress his grievance. The Court will not permit the Receiver appointed by its authority to be interfered with or dispossessed of the property, by any one, even though the order appointing him may be perfectly erroneous. —————To suggest to Court to take certain course in case which is sub judice, when amounts to contempt.

Reference made to pending cases or the publication of items of news which are connected with pending cases are not contempt. The intention and the bona fide nature of action have an important bearing on the question whether the Court should take action on the petition, but good intention is not the deciding factor. To comment on a case which is sub judice or to suggest that the Court should take a certain course in respect of a matter before it, undoubtedly constitutes contempt and honesty of motive cannot remove it from this category. The criterion is not whether the Court will be influenced, but whether the action complained of is calculated to prejudice the course of justice. Similarly, to comment on a case which is about to come before the Court with knowledge of the fact is just as much a contempt as a comment on a case actually launched. *P. S. Tuljaram Rao v. Matter published in a newspaper relating to the past life of an accused or to his antecedent character, particularly if it suggests an offence similar to that with which he is charged, is contempt of Court. But contempt of Court is not a matter of mere form or technicality, but of substance and the Court may not interfere, if it is not satisfied that such comments were calculated to prejudice the fair trial. ———S. 2—Chief Court has jurisdiction in respect of contempt of Courts subordinate to it—Chief Court has position akin to that of Court of King's Bench—It has inherent power to protect Subordinate Courts and prevent interference with course of justice—Such power is not negatived by S. 2—Act merely defines and limits such powers.

The Contempt of Courts Act is an Act which creates no fresh powers at all, but seeks to define and limit them. In the first place, sub-cl. (1) of S. 2, does not define the powers of the High Courts in respect of contempts of themselves at all but merely speaks vaguely of the jurisdiction, powers and authority which the High Courts already have and exercise in respect of such contempts. In the second place, sub-s. (2), which relates to Chief Court, contains a patent inconsistency. The Contempt of Courts Act far from being an exhaustive enactment, indeed contains provisions consistent with the view that it does not negative the powers and authority of the Chief Court to deal with contempts of inferior Courts, and cannot, therefore, be said that it would be contrary to the canons of construction for summary powers to be exercised in the name of inherent powers in disregard of the machinery contemplated by the Act. The Chief Court is by virtue of Ss. 8 and 9 of the Oudh Courts Act, and Ss. 219 and 220 of the Government of India Act, 1935, the High Court of Oudh and the one and only Court of record, and by virtue of its position, it is a superior Court of record with a position akin to that of the Court of King's Bench, and has an inherent power and authority to protect its Subordinate Courts and to prevent interference with the course of justice in any way which may be necessary. Its powers in that respect are defined and limited by the Contempt of Courts Act of 1926. That Act is silent as to the power of the Chief Court to deal with contempt of Courts subordinate to it but such a power cannot be negatived by silence and is to be inferred from the wording of sub-cl. (2) of S. 2. The Chief Court has, therefore, jurisdiction in respect of contempt of Courts subordinate to it. Mohammad Yusuf v. Imtiaz Ahmad Khan. (F. B.)

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT (II OF 1912).

S. 43 (1)—Rules framed under by Punjab Government—R. 26 (c)—Scope of—Liquidator summoning person whether has power to ask for security from such person or impose sentence of imprisonment or fine for failure to furnish security.

Rule 26 (c), of rules framed under S. 43 (1), Co-operative Societies Act, restricts the powers given by S. 32, Civil Procedure Code, to those given in the sub-rule. Hence in whatever capacity a person may have been summoned, the Liquidator has no power either to ask for security or to impose a sentence of imprisonment or fine for his failure to furnish security. In re Hakim Wasan. 40 Cr. —In the case of a prosecution for alleged infringement of copyright of a book published before 1914, the question to be considered is, therefore, not whether the copyright under Act of 1847 was subsisting at the time of infringement, but whether it was subsisting when Act III of 1914 came into force. *Emperor v. The whole spirit of the Coroners' Act is that all persons acquainted with the circumstances and cause of the death of a deceased person, excepting persons implicated in a crime in respect of such death, shall be examined as witnesses on oath by the Coroner, and that any person who is suspected of being so implicated, shall not be examined. If by an inadvertance any such person is put on oath and examined, such a statement, immediately it is found that the person is in the position of the accused, should be struck of record or if he wishes to give evidence it should be taken after due warning. It would be wrong of a Coroner to examine an accused person on oath on the ground that he did not know that the person was the accused person and thereafter use that evidence, and on such evidence, come to the conclusion that that person is guilty of an offence in respect of the death of the deceased person. *Emperor v. —S. 24—Inquisition by Coroner—Commitment to High Court—Power of Presidency Magistrate to enquire or try—Effect of acquittal or discharge by such Magistrate.

The drawing up of an inquisition by the Coroner does not of itself oust the Magistrate of his jurisdiction to inquire into or try the case of an accused person, though it may have the effect of a valid commitment upon which the High Court in the exercise of its Original Criminal Jurisdiction may act. But it has not that effect until it has been accepted by the High Court, and the officers of the Court have drawn up a charge in accordance with it. And until the High Court has accepted the inquisition drawn up by the Coroner as a commitment, the Magistrate's order of acquittal or discharge that he may make will be operative, subject to the discretion of the High Court, when the time comes for it to consider, whether it should take action upon the Coroner's inquisition as an effective commitment. *Emperor v. Ss. 16, 25 (9)—Meaning of word "place" in definition of "mill"—Inspector of Cotton Excise—Right of free access to godown—Owner refusing to have locked up godown opened—Wilful obstruction—Subsequent offer of access, whether condones obstruction.

Under S. 16 of the Cotton Duties Act, the Inspector of Cotton Excise has a right of free access to the godown of a mill. Therefore, if the owner of a mill does not, after due notice, get the locked door of a godown of the mill opened to give access to the Inspector of Cotton Excise, the owner is guilty of wilful obstruction under S. 25 (9) of the Act, the particular purposes for which the Inspector wanted access being immaterial so long as his object was to perform a duty under the Act. Once access is refused, and thus intentional obstruction is caused, a subsequent offer to give access is not sufficient to condone the obstruction. Mukundlal Bansilal v. Emperor.

CRIMINAL APPEAL ORDINANCE OF TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO (1931).

—Court of Criminal Appeal established under—Whether branch of Supreme Court—Person appointed as acting Judge under S. 7 (1) of Judicature Ordinance of Trinidad and Tobago (1880) as amended in 1936, if can act as member of Court of Criminal Appeal—Court of Criminal Appeal composed of Chief Justice and two acting Judges held not properly constituted—Interpretation Ordinance (XIX of 1933), Ss. 17, 20—Applicability—Constitution of Court.

The Court of Criminal Appeal established under Criminal Appeal Ordinance, 1931, of Trinidad and Tobago, is not established as a branch of the existing Supreme Court ; but as a separate Court of Record, the Judges of which are stated to be the Chief Justice of Trinidad and Tobago and the Puisne Judges of Trinidad and Tobago. A person appointed under S. 7 (3) of the Judicature Ordinance of Trinidad and Tobago (1880), cannot, therefore, sit as a member of Court of Criminal Appeal. Ss. 17 and 20 of the Interpretation Ordinance, 1933, deal with the case of one individual being appointed to take the place of another individual and to act as a substitute for him. An acting Judge is not a Puisne judge of the Colony, for the number of Puisne Judges is fixed and cannot be exceeded. Where, therefore, an appeal from conviction of the accused is heard by the Court of Criminal Appeal composed of the Chief Justice of the Colony and two acting Judges of the Supreme Court appointed under S. 7 (3) of the Judicature Ordinance, the Court is not properly constituted and its judgment is void and of no effect. *Tubal Uriah Butler v. —Ss. 16, 17 (1), (2)—Exhortation to form unlawful association—Promoting meeting of unlawful association, what amounts to—Authority of accused to act on behalf of unlawful association, proof of.

A person who merely urges the forming of an association cannot be said to promote or assist in promoting a meeting of that association, when the association itself had not come into existence, within the meaning of S. 17 (2) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. A certain association and all jathas organized by it or affiliated to it had been declared by the Government to be unlawful associations within the meaning of S. 16. Accused addressed a meeting in which he exhorted those present to organise themselves into jathas and to proceed to certain places in the name of the unlawful association. Accused gave out that he was acting on behalf of the association but there was no proof that he had been authorized by the association to act on its behalf : Held, (1) that even if a jatha had been formed in response to the appeal of the accused, it would not have been an unlawful association unless it was organized by or affiliated to the particular unlawful association which had been so declared by Government, and that in the absence of evidence that the accused was authorized by that unlawful association to act on its behalf, it could not be said that any jatha so formed was organized by or affiliated to that association ; (2) that it could not be said that the accused had promoted or assisted in promoting a meeting of the jathas which had not come into existence within the meaning of S. 17 (2) ; (3) that the accused could not be said to have committed an offence under Sub-s. (1) of S. 17.

(XXIII of 1932), S. 7.

A procession, passing a shop in a particular mohalla and possibly repeating the procession a week later, cannot be construed into loitering or an act similar to loitering. In order to commit an offence under S. 7, the loitering must be done with the intention that any person is deterred from entering or approaching or dealing at the particular place near which such loitering occurs. Halting for the purpose of distributing handbills, announcing a meeting for a later hour, cannot be interpreted as being with the object of deterring any prospective purchaser from entering or dealing at the particular shop near which the halt was made. *Radhika Kivan v. —S. 7—S. 7 (1) (a), whether applies to picketing of house of public servant—Loitering before Premier's house for forcing him to get cancelled certain order passed by Government, if falls under S. 7 (1) (a).

There is no indication within the Criminal Law Amendment Act, that a public servant whose house is picketed, cannot claim the benefit of the section. The Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1932 deals with picketing and makes picketing in certain circumstances an offence. The Criminal Law Amendment Act is, therefore, to be deemed to be a special law within the meaning of S. 41, Penal Code, and there can, therefore, be an abetment of an offence under S. 7 (1) (a), Criminal Law Amendment Act. The language employed in S. 7 is clear and admits of only one meaning. In these circumstances, it is unnecessary to speculate on the intention of the framers of the Act. The Premier is entitled to move the Legislature or the Government to repeal the order which was passed by the Government, and if people loiter in front of his house with the object of forcing him to move in the matter in order to have the order cancelled, which he has a right to do or abstain from doing, the action imputed to the accused would apparently fall within the

In the face of S. 4 of the Repealing and Amending Act of 1937 and of S. 6-A of the General Clauses (Amendment) Act of 1936, it is not open to contend that the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932, has been repealed in its entirety. These sections leave the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1932, so far as S. 7 is concerned, intact. The notification which was issued by the Government of Madras applied S. 7, and the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932, so far as S. 7 was concerned, was still on the Statute Book: Held, also that there was no necessity for re-notification and that S. 7 applied to the Madras Presidency. In re: Swami Arungirinatha. 40 Cr. —S. 4 (1) (h)—Complaint—Police Report—Charge of sedition.

The report of a Police Officer must be some statement made in connection with or at least under the colour of the duty of the maker as a Police Officer. It is not the duty of a Police Officer to make reports of offences to Magistrates under S. 124-A, I. P. C.

Therefore if he puts in a complaint under the instructions of a District Magistrate directed by Government to institute a prosecution, his complaint virtually is the statement of the District Magistrate in compliance with the order of Government; and it is nonetheless a complaint because he is a Police Officer. Where a Police Officer files a formal complaint in a non-cognizable case, he cannot be said to make a police report and his complaint falls within the definition of "complaint" In re : Subramania Siva.

—S. 4 (1) (h)—Penal Code, S. 211—Complaint to Police—Subsequent complaint to Magistrate—Report of Police that complaint is false—Prosecution of complainant under S. 211, Penal Code.

The accused lodged an information of arson before the Police. The Police reported the charge laid by him to be false and asked for his prosecution under S. 211 of the Penal Code. The accused filed a petition before the Magistrate protesting against the Police and requesting that the complaint laid by him may be proceeded with, but he was summoned by the Magistrate under S. 211 of the Penal Code and committed to the Sessions: Held, that the petition filed by the accused before the Magistrate amounted to a complaint within the meaning of S. 4 (h) which had to be disposed of before an action against him could be taken under S. 211 of the Penal Code. *Ramdhari Gope v. —S. 4 (1) (h)—Sanction to prosecute—Complaint of Court.

A Revenue Court, being satisfied from the perusal of documents tendered in evidence and previously tendered in another case, that the documents were forgeries, sent the case for inquiry to the Magistrate of the District, who was also Collector of the District. The latter sent the case for trial to a Subordinate Magistrate, who pointed out that sanction under S. 195 had not been granted. The Collector, as the Court superior to the Revenue Court in which the documents were first tendered in evidence, granted sanction under S. 195 : Held, that the communication by the Revenue Court to the Magistrate of the District was a complaint on which the latter could act. *Inder Bhan v. The report of a Police Officer in respect of a non-cognizable offence, if it contains an allegation in writing to a Magistrate with a view to his taking action under Cr. P. C., that some person has committed an offence, amounts to a complaint of which cognizance can be taken under S. 190 (1) (a) and S. 200, cl. (aa). It is not necessary in such a case to examine the Police Officer who is a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties. Where a Police Officer makes a report after investigation under S. 155 (2) under the orders of a Magistrate, the report would fall under Cl. (b) of S. 190, even though the offence was a non-cognizable one. The wording of S. 190 is quite general and would include even a non-cognizable offence being taken cognizance of by a Magistrate upon a report in writing by a Police Officer. *Emperor v. The Deputy Commissioner took up the report as a Magistrate, and, without examining the Akunwun on oath, issued a warrant against the applicant under S. 477-A of the Code: Held, that his procedure was not correct, as he should have examined the Akunwun on oath before issuing a warrant, but that the omission was an error in procedure and did not vitiate a concluded trial: Held, also, that the report of the Akunwun was a com-

Accused, who held a decree against the complainant, recovered in execution of the decree a sum larger than was due thereunder. The complainant thereupon applied to the Court for sanction to prosecute the accused. No sanction was granted, nor was any action taken under S. 476 of the Cr. P. C. The presiding officer of the Court, however, addressed to the Magistrate of the district a letter in which he stated all the facts and concluded by soliciting orders in the case. The accused was tried and convicted under Ss. 193 and 210 of the Penal Code: Held, (1) that the letter addressed to the District Magistrate did not amount to a complaint within the meaning of S. 476; (2) that no sanction having been granted under S. 195, the trial and conviction were illegal. *Sheo Sampat Pande v. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—Ss. 4 (1) (h), 199—Adultery—Complaint—Statements in husband's deposition in a trial on another charge—Practice—Penal Code, (Act XLV of 1860), Ss. 366, 379, 498.

The accused was charged in the first instance under Ss. 366 and 379 of the Penal Code. When the complainant, the husband of the woman, was examined as a witness, there were certain statements made in his deposition amounting to an offence under S. 498. The Court acquitted the accused on charges under Ss. 366 and 379, but convicted him under S. 498: Held, that the conviction was bad and ought to be set aside. The Court could not take cognizance of the offence under S. 498, as there was no complaint by the husband; the statement in the husband's deposition as a witness could not be said to be a complaint. *Emperor v. An application to the Magistrate did not suggest that the Magistrate should take any action against any person for committing an offence; nor did the allegations in the application form the ingredients which constituted any offence under the Penal Code; nor was there any offence referred to in the application by the number of the section. It only said that R, the husband of K, came to the house of D and took her away from that house. The relief asked was that K should be set at liberty and taken from the custody of her husband because there was an apprehension that he might ill-treat her; Held, that the application was not a criminal complaint but an application under S. 552, that the Magistrate was not bound to take the deposition of the applicant on oath and his omission to do so did not vitiate an order subsequently made by him directing a complaint under S. 182, Penal Code, to be made against the applicant for prosecution under S. 199 (1) (a), *Dalpat Rai v. O's file during his tour, if amounts to appointment—Such Magistrate, not empowered under S. 192, transferring case in good faith to his own file—Transfer, validity of.

A District Magistrate who has been delegated powers under S. 13 (3), is competent to appoint a Sub-Divisional Magistrate on a particular date or dates or for a particular period. This he might do without relieving the permanent incumbent. The mere authority from the District Magistrate to be in charge of the S. D. O's file at headquarters so long as he is on tour is an appointment within the meaning of S. 13 though the appointment is limited only to a particular kind of work and a particular occasion. Where such a Magistrate transfers erroneously but in good faith a case of which he has not taken cognizance to his own file as second officer, the order of transfer is valid by virtue of S. 529 (f). The fact that he is not empowered to do so under S. 192, is immaterial. Ram Krishna Sinha v. Emperor.

A person accused of theft of a pair of shoes was convicted by a Magistrate of the First Class and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment, including two months' solitary confinement and thirty stripes. The accused had six previous convictions for offences against property, and in two cases, the sentences were each for a period of three years' imprisonment: Held, that the accused should have been committed to the Court of Sessions, as the case was one in which the advisability of transporting him for life should have been carefully considered, but since the accused had been whipped, he could not be sentenced to more than five years' rigorous imprisonment. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—S. 35—Separate convictions for two or more offences—Separate sentences.

Whether a Court must inflict a separate sentence for each of the offences of which a person has been convicted at one trial, must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. Where, there are two or more separate convictions for two or more distinct offences in the same case, S. 35 contemplates a separate sentence for each offence.

Emperor v. Wadhawa. 19 Cr. L. J. 223 : 43 I. C. 799 : 46 P. R. 1917 Cr. : A. I. R. 1918 Lah. 297.

—S. 35—Separate sentences for hurt and rioting, legality of—Practice.

Under S. 35, as amended in 1923, separate sentences for rioting and hurt are legal although in practice it is undoubtedly better to give a single sentence for all the offences or to order the sentences to run concurrently.

Ali Akbar v. Emperor. 30 Cr. L. J. 575 : 116 I. C. 216 : I. R. 1929 Lah. 472 : A. I. R. 1929 Lah. 670.

—S. 35—Separate sentences for offences under Ss. 457 and 380, Penal Code.

Under S. 35, as amended, the Court can pass separate sentences for offences under Ss. 457 and 380, Penal Code. But the punishment provided for any one of these two offences will be sufficient, and if the Court of Appeal finds that the trial Court has wrongly passed two separate sentences but the sentences taken together are not excessives they can be consolidated.

—S. 35—Trial includes conviction—Separable offences not distinct offences—Penal Code, S. 71—Assessment of punishment.

There is nothing improper in the accused being charged with and tried at one trial for the two offences under Ss. 147 and 332/149, and the illustrations to S. 235, show that trial includes conviction. Separable offences, which come within the provisions of S. 71, I. P. C., cannot be treated as distinct offences within the meaning of S. 35, Cr. P. C. There is, therefore, no authority for awarding separate sentences. A Court in awarding punishment under S. 71, I. P. C., should pass one sentence for either of the offences in question and not a separate one for each offence. Where the lower Court has concluded separate sentences for each offence, but the aggregate punishment awarded does not exceed the punishment provided by law for the major offence, it is merely an irregularity and does not call for interference by the High Court when no failure of justice has been occasioned.

Distilling spirit and possessing the spirit obtained by such distillation are not distinct offences within the meaning of S. 35, and a double sentence is prohibited by S. 71, Penal Code. Although under S. 235 (1), Cr. P. C., separate convictions for the two offences are legal, yet it is neither necessary nor desirable to convict for possessing spirit when the manufacture is proved.

—Ss. 35, 397—Accused convicted in two separate cases—Second sentence order, to run from date of order—Direction illegal—Concurrent sentence, when can be passed.

The question whether sentences should be concurrent or consecutive, arises only in cases of separate convictions at one trial. In all other cases, S. 397 is imperative and should not be disregarded. On 30th March, A was sentenced to four years' rigorous imprison-—Ss. 35, 397 — Concurrent sentence—Separate trials.

The only case in which a Court may pass concurrent sentence for two offences is, where the accused is convicted at the same trial for both the offences, as provided for in S. 35. If the trials are separate, S. 397 applies, and the sentences must take effect consecutively. In the latter case if the second sentence is one of transportation, the Court has the discretion to reverse the order, and direct that the sentence of transportation should take effect first, but the Court cannot make them concurrent. *Imperator v. The provisions of S. 56 do not deprive a constable of his statutory power under S. 54 to arrest without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned. The mere fact that in such a case a Command Certificate has been given to the constable under S. 56 of the Code is immaterial as the constable independent of any such Command Certificate is entitled to make the arrest. The failure of the constable in such a case to comply with the provisions of S. 56, does not take away from him the protection which attaches to him while acting in the discharge of his duty in a manner authorised by law. *Kishun Mandar v. Section 54 is very wide and not controlled by S. 56. A police constable is entitled to arrest under S. 54 independently of S. 56, the person required without a warrant in a cognizable case. The word "complaint" in the first clause of S. 54 does not admit of a restricted meaning that the complaint should be made to the arresting

Where, therefore, the constables are directed by the Sub-Inspector to bring the offender before him, on a complaint being made to him, the constables shall be acting within their powers under S. 54 (1). A reasonable complaint or suspicion must be founded on some definite fact or some tangible proof which is sufficient to establish in the mind of reasonable Police Officer, the reasonableness or credibility of the charge, information or suspicion. Further, to justify an arrest under S. 54 (1), Para. 7, there must be in existence as a fact as opposed to any belief which may be entertained by any person, a warrant which has been issued under the Extradition Act. *Hara Mohan Patnaik v. The writing out of a warrant or an order for arrest when the person to be arrested comes within the first clause of S. 54 is a superfluous act but cannot be considered illegal. —S. 54 (1)—Arrest by constable without warrant—Cognizable offence—Reasonable complaint.

When a Magistrate, after recording the statement of the complainant in a complaint of a cognizable offence, issues a warrant for the arrest of the accused, there is a "reasonable complaint of the accused being concerned in a cognisable offence" and the arrest by a constable without warrant of such an accused is justified under S. 54 (1), Cl. (1). It is not necessary that the complaint referred to in the section should have been made to the constable himself. It is sufficient that there was a reasonable complaint made to a person entitled to entertain it. Alay Mohammad v. Emperor. 22 Cr. L. J. 758 : 64 I. C. 278 : 3 U. P. L. (A.) 198.

—S. 54 (7)—Police Officer, duty of—Person liable to be extradited, when can be arrested—Procedure after arrest.

Per Mukerji, J.—S. 54 seventhly gives a Police Officer personal authority and involves a personal responsibility and reasonable suspicion and credible information must be based upon definite facts which the Police Officer must consider himself before he acts under the section and he cannot delegate his discretion or take shelter under the plea or judgment of another officer or authority. The arresting Police Officer has to exercise his own judgment, and form his own opinion as to whether he should or should not act. The last portion of clause seventhly of S. 54 contemplates cases in which there is a present liability and not cases in which there may be liability in future for apprehension or detention. The issue of some sort of process for extradition under the law would create such a liability although the process may not have arrived and is not available for execution. Even where all the conditions necessary to satisfy the requirements of clause scritthly of S. 54 are made out and the arrest is validly or lawfully made, the person arrested must forthwith be produced before a Magistrate in order that the detention may conform to the provisions of S. 23 of the Extradition Act. *Subodh Chandra Roy v. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—S. 59—"In view of," meaning of—Accused standing with pot of toddy in cocoanut tree—Arrest by private person, legality.

Where a complainant saw one accused person standing on the ground by a cocoanut tree with a pot of toddy in his hands and two of his friends climbing the trees for the purpose of bringing the toddy down : Held, the offence of theft of toddy was committed "in the view of" the complainant within the meaning of S. 59. In re : Arumuga Goundan. 25 Cr. L. J. 792 : 81 I. C. 312 : 18 L. W. 818 : A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 384.

—S. 59—Penal Code, Ss. 224, 225—Escape from lawful custody—Arrest by private persons—Duty of private persons.

S. 59 does not require a private person making an arrest to take himself the person arrested to the Police Station. The directions are sufficiently complied with when the person arresting forwards the person arrested in charge of a servant or village servant, where the person in charge of the person so arrested was prevented from taking him to the Police Station and the person arrested was rescued from his custody by the accused: Held, that the accused were guilty of an offence under S. 225, Penal Code. *Parridhan v. —S. 61—Offender to be produced before Magistrate forthwith.

It is proper that where an officer does not see his way to release an arrested person on bail, he should produce him before a Magistrate with as little delay as possible so that the Magistrate may determine, whether in the circumstances of the case, the person is entitled to be enlarged on bail. Srilal Agarwalla v. Emperor. 27 Cr. L. J. 1185 : 97 I. C. 945 : 44 C. L. J. 134.

—Ss. 61, 167, 344—Remand when to be granted—Under-trial prisoners.

The power of remand under S. 167 is given to detain prisoners in custody while the Police make the investigation, and in a proper case, to commence the inquiry, but the period of detention is limited to fifteen days in all. But the custody mentioned in S. 344 of the Code is quite different and is intended for under-trial prisoners. Nagendra Nath Chakrabarty v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 732 : 81 I. C. 220 : 38 C. L. At the expiration of the maximum period of 15 days' detention of an accused person and the additional time necessary to bring him before a Magistrate allowed under Ss. 61 and 167, an accused person must either be released by the Police under S. 169, security for his appearance if and when required being taken, or the Magistrate, empowered in that behalf, must either take cognizance if he has before him a Police report (which ordinarily would be a report in the form laid down in S. 173) which he thinks makes out a prima facie case or he must release him. *Bholanath Das v. Under S. 190 (b) the term Police Report does not necessarily mean only a chalan, but includes also a Report by the Police under S. 62. Cl. —Ss. 64, 196—Scope of—Person committing offence under S. 171-D, Penal Code, in presence of Magistrate—If can be arrested under S. 61—Previous sanction of Local Government, necessity of.

S. 196 does not control the powers of a Magistrate under the Code, but only prevents a Court from taking cognizance of certain offences without there being a complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor-General-in-Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General-in-Council in this behalf. Therefore, a Magistrate not functioning as a Court but only as a Magistrate acting under S. 64 is fully authorised to arrest and to release on bail a person who has committed an offence in his presence under S. 171-D, Penal Code, and no previous sanction of the Local Government is necessary for the Magistrate to take cognizance of such an offence. The word "offence" used in S. 64, is obviously wide enough to include an offence under S. 171-D, Penal Code. Brahma Nand Misra v. Emperor. 41 Cr. L. J. 85 : 184 I. C. 662 : 1939 A. L. J. 779 : I. The most important part of the publication of a Proclamation under S. 87, is the publishing of it in the accused's place of residence and the thirty days allowed by the section should be reckoned from the date of such publication. In proceedings under Ss. 87 and 88, the Magistrate ought to take particular care to preserve proclamation and the record must be so clear as to satisfy the Court that the legal formalities were duly observed. Where neither the proclamation nor any copy is forthcoming and the only evidence consists of a statement of one of the accused persons that a proclamation of some undescribed sort was at some unspecified time issued, the evidence is insufficient to show that the legal formalities were observed by the Court. Where land is attached, regarding which no warrant has been issued, the High Court may in view of the provisions of Ss. 530 (a) and 439, release the property from attachment in exercise of its inherent powers, where, it cannot do so under the strict provisions of S. 89. *Buta Singh v. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—S. 88—Attachment in District other than that of issuing Magistrate without endorsement of District Magistrate of that District.

An attachment of property is not authorised in a District other than that of the issuing Magistrate except when the order of attachment has been endorsed by the District Magistrate within whose District the property to be attached is situated. Such an attachment is illegal. Ganu Shukul v. Emperor.

A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 347.

—S. 88—Claim by third person to attached property—Procedure—Rejection of claim—Remedy.

Where property is attached as the property of an absconder and another person claims the property as his own, it is proper to give to the claimant an opportunity of establishing his right. If a claim is put forward which the Magistrate has not inquired into or has rejected, the claimant's remedy is by Civil suit against the Secretary of State and the person at whose instance the attachment was effected. Nga Po Aung v. Emperor.

11 I. C. 256 : U. B. R. 1911 (1) 66.

—S. 88—Claim of third person to attached property—Procedure—Civil suit.

There is no law requiring a Magistrate who has attached property to investigate the claims of third persons to the ownership of such property. If a Magistrate passes an erroneous order in respect of such property, the only remedy is by way of Civil suit. Su We v. Emperor.

7 Cr. L. J. 81 :

—Ss. 88, 87, 89—Illegal sale of property of absconder—Suit to recover property—Jurisdiction.

Where the property of an absconding offender was attached and sold by a Court purporting to act under S. 88, and it turned out that the procedure culminating in the sale was irregular and illegal, it was held that the Civil Courts had jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the owner of property so sold to recover the same in the hands of a purchaser. *Mian Jan v. —Ss. 88, 89—Accused, application of for removal of attachment—Proof—Limitation.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

Under S. 89 it is necessary that the proof that the accused person had not absconded should be offered or given within two years from the date of attachment. It is not enough to show that the accused appeared voluntarily or was apprehended or brought before the Court within that period. In re: Nilkanth Ramchandra Kulkarni. 14 Cr. L. J. 237 : 19 I. C. 333 : 15 Bom. L. R. 175.

—Ss. 88, 89—Application by legal representatives to set aside attachment.

Where property has been attached under S. 88, it is only the person whose property has been attached, that can apply for its restoration. The legal representatives of a person whose property has been so attached have no locus standi and cannot, therefore, apply to set aside the attachment. Ramiah v. Government of Mysore. 10 Cr. L. —Ss. 88, 89—Joint Hindu family—Absconding accused, attachment of interest of, Receiver, appointment of—Rights of other co-parceners.

By the Full Bench.—The undivided interest of an absconding member of a joint Hindu family in the family property is liable to attachment under S. 88. What has to be attached under the section is the share of the defaulting member of the family, which is subject to the rights of the other members of the family and may be realised by a Receiver in a suit for partition or otherwise. Secretary of State v. Rangasamy Ayyangar. 17 Cr. L. J. 296 : 35 I. C. 168 : 31 M. L. J. 84 & 120 : 20 M. L. T. 58 & 60 : 4 L. W. 21 & 24 : 1916 2 M. W. N. 88 & 90 : A. I. R. 1917 Mad. 366.

—Ss. 88, 89—Joint Hindu family—Attachment of father's property—Severance, if effected.

The language of Ss. 87 to 89 does not warrant the construction that the attachment effects a severance of a joint family or precludes the after-born sons of the absconder from claiming their shares in the property on partition. Secretary of State v. Rangasamy Aiyangar. 17 Cr. L. J. 296 : 35 I. C. 168 : 31 M. L. J. 84 & 120 : 20 M. L. T. 58 & 60 : 4 L. W. 21 & 24 : 1916 2 M. W. N. 88 & 90 : A. I. R. 1917 Mad. 366.

—Ss. 88, 89—Joint Hindu family—Attachment of father's share—Rights of after-born sons.

By the Division Bench.—The effect of an attachment under S. 88, clauses (3) and (4), read with cl. (7), is only to secure to the Government the enjoyment of the income during the continuance of the attachment, and not to vest the property or the share of the absconder in the Government as confiscated. Quod the property attached the rights of the Government are governed by the ordinary —Ss. 88, 89, 439—Absconder's property attached and sold—Sale, finality of—Locus standi of third party.

S. 89 provides for applications by the absconding offender only for restoration of the property attached, and no provision is made for claims by third parties to such property. S. 89 lays down that before release, the person suspected of absconding must prove that he did not abscond and that he did not have notice of proclamation. A warrant which, on the face of it, is a good and valid warrant, is signed by the Magistrate, sealed with the seal of the Court, addressed to a Police Officer, and which states the reason upon which the Magistrate relied, is not invalid merely by reason of the fact that the Magistrate has omitted to record in writing, otherwise than in the warrant, the reason which actuated him to issue the warrant. *Government of Assam v. A complaint was made by Police to a Sub-Divisional Magistrate of the offence under S. 399, Penal Code. The facts stated in the complaint disclosed that the accused was also guilty of having bombs in his possession or control, which was a preparation to commit dacoity. Magistrate was informed that an application to Government had been made for the sanction. Subsequently, the Superintendent of Police put in a complaint before the District Magistrate with Government sanction. The District Magistrate then proceeded with the case : Held, that although the case was not formally withdrawn from the file of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, the District Magistrate —S. 90—Magistrates, duty of, to record reasons.

Before issuing a warrant, the Magistrate should record his reasons specifically in writing and should not be satisfied with signing a warrant in the form given in the schedule to the Cr. P. C. —S. 90—Warrant, issue of, in lieu of summons—"record reasons in writing"—Adoption of stereotyped printed form, whether sufficient.

Court should record its reasons in writing. The adoption of a stereotyped printed form is not a sufficient compliance with the imperative language of the section. Therefore, the issue of a warrant in the first instance without any reasons being recorded on the order sheet by the Court issuing the warrant, is illegal, and the resistance to such a warrant is not an offence. *Sukheshwar Phukan v. In a case in which a summons should ordinarily issue, a warrant of arrest cannot be issued unless the conditions of S. 90 are fulfilled. A written report by a Police Officer is not evidence of service of summons under clause (b) of S. 90. Emperor v. Poni. 3 Cr. L. J. 353 : 3 L. B. R. 116.

The terms "bailable warrant" and "non-bailable warrant" are nowhere employed in the Code. There are bailable offences and non-bailable offences. There is nothing in the Code anywhere which says that a warrant issued under S. 90 to a person who is charged with a bailable offence must contain an endorsement under S. 76. An order directing a person to produce or give inspection of his books in a dispute to which he is not a party, involves a serious inroad upon his normal rights as a citizen, and the Courts have always set their faces against giving anything in the nature of a roving or fishing commission to inspect documents. It is not the practice of the Court to allow inspection of Bankers' Books under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act unless a prima facie case is made out for thinking that there is some matter on which the books of the Bank are bound to be relevant. *Central Bank of India, Ltd. v. When a Magistrate makes an order for production under S. 94, he does not thereby commit himself to the proposition that inspection of all the documents, production of which is ordered, must necessarily follow. Usually inspection should only be given of particular documents shown to be relevant, and not of documents in bulk and the party producing the documents in compliance with the order of the Court is not precluded from objecting to their subsequent inspection. *Central Bank of India Ltd. v. —S. 96—Search warrant—Duty of Court.

Before issuing a search warrant, it is the duty of the Court in the first instance, to consider if a summons to produce would not have the desired effect. The Court ought to remember that it is a grave step to issue a search warrant directing that a man's house should be invaded and searched. It is necessary that the power to issue search warrants should not be exercised without full appreciation of the gravity of the step, and after the Court has come to the conclusion that the step is really necessary in the ends of justice. *Mulchand v. Where the Magistrate gives no reasons whatever for believing that the accused would not produce the articles in question if a summons were issued to him for their production, the requirements of sub-s. In a case of theft, the whole object of issuing a search warrant under Ss. 96 and 98, to search the house of the accused for the property alleged to be stolen, is to secure for the purpose of the trial identification of the property and to ascertain whether it is really in the possession of the accused or not. A delay of more than three weeks in the issue of a search warrant in a prosecution for theft, defeats the purpose for which the warrant is issued. Bilas Roy Chaudhuri v. Ram Gopal Khemkar. 19 Cr. ———S. 96—Search warrant, scope and object of—Practice.

The power of issuing a search warrant is not intended to be used for the purpose of giving complainants an opportunity of fishing for evidence. The warrant is intended for use in respect of definite documents believed to exist, which must be clearly specified in the warrant, and before issuing it, the Magistrate must have before him some information or evidence that the documents are necessary or desirable for the purposes of the inquiry before him. To issue a search warrant for the search of a man's house and for the production of all papers and books in it for the purposes of an inquiry as to whether he had used or sold articles with a counterfeit trademark, is a gross perversion of the law. *L. Per Chaudhuri, J.—S. 96 does not contemplate an order thereunder to further a Police investigation which may or may not result in an inquiry, but refers "to an inquiry now being made or about to be made." Per Newbould, J.—S. 96 empowers a Magistrate to issue a search warrant before any proceedings of any kind are initiated and in view of an inquiry about to be made. There is a distinction between "an inquiry about to be made" and "an investigation that is being made" the former does not include every investigation. Jagannath Agarwalla v. Emperor. 21 Cr. L. When there is no inquiry or trial or other proceeding under Cr. P. C., a general search warrant cannot be issued under S. 96. The provision of the law requiring the sanction of a Magistrate before the issue of a search warrant means that the Magistrate should apply his

—S. 99-A—Scope of—Conditions of applicability.

In order to make S. 99-A applicable, two things are necessary : (1) promotion of feelings of enmity or hatred, and (2) between different classes of the subjects. Everything done which may have a remote bearing on promoting feelings of hatred or enmity would not be an offence. There should either be the intention to promote such feelings or such feelings should be promoted as a result of such publications. Again feelings of enmity and hatred should be aroused between two sections of the people which can be classified as two groups opposed to each other. A vague, indefinite and nameless body, even though given one name, may not, in certain circumstances, be considered as a class by itself, particularly if individuals overlap indiscriminately, although it is not necessary that the classes should be so distinct and separate as to make it easy to put an individual in one class or the other. The section does not contemplate the penalising of political doctrines, even though of the extreme kind like Communism, but merely such writings as directly promote feelings of hatred or enmity. Gautam v. Emperor.

—S. 99-A—Translation of original book—Original authors not having His Majesty or British Government in mind—Translation, if comes within S. 99-A.

It cannot be laid down as any general proposition that translations should be permissible when the originals are not proscribed. Translations in Indian vernaculars may become accessible to a very large population and the danger arising therefrom may be immensely greater, calling for the intervention of the Government. The Courts are not concerned with the policy underlying such forfeitures. The sole consideration is whether the books contain any objectionable matter referred to in S. 99-A. Where the authors of the original books did not have His Majesty the King-Emperor or the Government established by law in British India particularly in mind, and were attempting to deal with certain supposed conditions prevailing in the entire world, it is very difficult to hold that these books bring or attempt to bring into hatred or contempt or excite or attempt to excite disaffection towards His Majesty or the Government established by law in British India. It is possible that such writing may have the remote effect of causing some disaffection. But it cannot be said that there was any such intention directly implied. When they seem to be directed against supposed capitalists who exploit the working classes, the translation cannot be brought within the scope. M. L. Gautam v. Emperor.

To set aside an order of the Local Government forfeiting a publication, it is convenient to allow the Government Advocate to begin and state the case in support of the Local Government's orders. Where two views are reasonably possible with regard to a publication, which has been ordered to be forfeited, the applicant must have the benefit of that which is most favourable to him. In considering the nature of a book which has been ordered to be forfeited, it would be unfair, generally speaking, to pick out objectionable sentences here and there and condemn the

The liberty to criticize the religious beliefs of others does not include a licence to resort to vile and abusive language. The licence of a missionary to advocate his own religion and to denounce other religions is not unlimited. Holding up to obloquy and derision, a religious belief would amount to stirring up resentment and hatred on the part of those who accept it as their creed. There is no distinction between an attack upon a system of religion in the abstract and one upon the people who believe in it. Kali Charan Sharma v. Emperor.

The woman searched for was found and apprehended with a view to producing her in Court in accordance with the warrant. The accused, however, who were 14 in number, took possession of the woman by force, and in the fight which took place, the Police officer received injuries : Held, that the accused could not be held to be protected by a right of private defence. They could not be convicted under Ss. 225-B and 332 of the Penal Code, but if the prosecution could establish that hurt was caused and that the causing of hurt was a common object of the accused, they would be liable to punishment under S. 147, I. It is not sufficient that the Panchas should merely be summoned and kept present outside the building while the search is being carried on within it, and then called in to see what has been found. But the mere fact that the Panchas were not present throughout the search and did not witness every detail of it, would not be enough in itself to justify in setting aside the conviction. Even if the search has not been legally conducted, it is open to the Court to find the fact of possession of an illicit article proved. A conviction cannot, however, be sustained where the failure to comply with the provisions of the law relating to searches has created a reasonable doubt as to whether the article found was really in the possession of the accused. *Dinkar Nhamu Mangaonkar v. The requirements of a statute must be strictly observed and complied with before the liberty of the subject can be taken away by sending him to jail or by exacting a fine from him. Where no order in writing is issued by the officer concerned under S. 103, to attend and witness a search, no person is bound by law to render assistance to him in making the search, if a person who is not bound by law to do a certain act voluntarily agrees to do it, he will not be deemed to have made himself subject to any criminal liability that may attach to the non-performance of the act. A search under the Opium Act should conform to the provisions of S. 103, Cr. P. C. The Collector of Rangoon issued a warrant authorising an Excise Inspector and Excise Sergeant to search the shop of R. C. Sen and to seize or take possession of any morphia or marked money, &c. The Excise Inspector did not follow the course laid down by S. 103 of the former Cr. P. C. He went to an elder, and on the way, picked up a lighthouse-keeper, the Excise Sergeant and another person, who was afterwards sent to buy morphia, accompanying them to the elder's house. It did not appear that any list was made by the Excise Inspector and therefore none could have been signed by elders: Held, that the provisions of S. 103 were disregarded in two particulars, for the lighthouse-keeper had not been shown to be "a respectable inhabitant of the locality" but apparently an acquaintance of the Excise Inspector, who picked him up on the way, and asked him to accompany him; and secondly, no list was prepared by the Inspector and signed by the elder; and that, therefore, the appeal must succeed on these grounds alone: Held, also, that the appeal must succeed on the further ground that there was no proof that morphia was sold at all. *N. A Sub-Inspector of Excise entered the premises of the accused after sunset and after entering the premises, he sent for two search witnesses. A search was made and some opium was found. The Sub-Inspector thereupon arrested the accused and took him to the Police Station, but retained the opium found on the premises, which he produced in Court when he made his statement. He submitted a report and charge-sheet, and the Deputy Magistrate took cognizance of the case, treating the report of the Excise Sub-Inspector as a Police Report, and convicted the accused under S. 9 (c) of the Opium Act: Held, (1) that the proceedings

P. C., was an illegality which vitiated the proceedings; (2) that the conviction could not be maintained by reason of the following serious irregularities by the Excise Sub-Inspector.

(a) his entry of the premises after sunset in contravention of S. 14 of the Opium Act;

(b) his entry of the premises without search witnesses in disregard of S. 103, Cr. P. C.;

- Security.
- Unlawful Assembly.
- Ss. 106, 107—Appeal from orders.

Orders under S. 106 can be appealed from under S. 406 of the Code, but no appeal lies in proceedings instituted under S. 107 for keeping the peace read with S. 118. Shamrao v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 67 : 74 I. C. 979 : 19 N. L. R. 160 : A. I. R. 1924 Nag. 60.

— S. 106—Appellate Court.

An Appellate Court cannot act under S. 106 (3) in all appeals before it, but only when the Court below had the power to take security itself. Emperor v. Hardit Singh. 10 Cr. L. J. 309 : 3 I. C. 577 : 7 P. R. 1909 Cr.

— S. 106—Appellate Court, power of, to demand security.

The power conferred on an appellate Court by S. 106 (3) is not limited by the fact that the Court whose decision is under appeal should have had power to direct security to be taken. Hasan Beg v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 657 : 81 I. C. 145 : 19 N. L. R. 154 : A. I. R. 1924 Nag. 49.

— S. 106—Appellate Court, power of, to make order for security.

Under S. 106 (3), an Appellate Court has power to make an order for security, even though the original trial Court had no such power. Tilak Rai v. Emperor. 22 Cr. L. J. 310 : 160 I. C. 998 : 19 A. L. J. 123 : 43 All. 372 : A. I. R. 1921 All. 217.

— S. 106—Appellate Court, power of, to order security in affirming conviction.

An Appellate Court has power, in affirming a conviction and sentence to pass an order binding down the accused under S. 106, even though the Court, convicting in the first instance, was not competent to do so. Buchan Singh v. Emperor. 18 Cr. L. J. 118 : 37 I. C. 470 : 2 P. L. J. 21 : 1917 Pat. 57 : 3 P. L. W. 250 : A. I. R. 1917 Pat. 701.

— S. 106—Appellate Court—Appellate Court, power of, to order execution of bond for keeping the peace.

Under S. 106 (3), an Appellate Court may pass an order directing security to be taken in cases coming to it on appeal from a Court incompetent to pass such an order as an original Court. Bharat Singh v. Emperor. 14 Cr. L. J. 592 : 21 I. C. 384 : 16 O. C. 281.

When the Magistrate originally convicting an accused person is not empowered by law to take security to keep the peace, the Appellate Court also has no jurisdiction to proceed under S. 106. Radha Singh v. Emperor. 6 Cr. L. J. 276 : 6 P. R. Cr. 1907 : 2 P. W. R. Cr. 77.

— S. 106—Appellate Court—Conviction by Second Class Magistrate—Appellate Court's power to demand security.

An Appellate Court on hearing an appeal from a conviction by a Second Class Magistrate can also direct the accused to execute a bond giving security to keep the peace. In re : Gunda Ganji Reddi. 15 Cr. L. J. 192 : 22 I. C. 768 : A. I. R. 1914 Mad. 280.

— S. 106—Appellate Court—Conviction by Third Class Magistrate—Appeal—Recommendation to First Class Magistrate as to binding down—Conviction and appeal good—Recommendation bad.

The accused were convicted by a Third Class Magistrate who submitted the record to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under S. 319, Cr. P. C. in order that they might be bound down under S. 106. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate ordered the accused to be bound down. An appeal was then instituted from the original conviction, and the Appellate Court set it aside : Held, that the recommendation as to binding down the accused was without jurisdiction, and the action of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under S. 106 was also without jurisdiction but the original conviction and the appeal against it, were good and within jurisdiction. Lukhan Dasadh v. Bachi Singh. 11 Cr. L. J. 170 : 5 I. C. 576.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—S. 106—Appellate Court—S. 106 (3).
Power of Appellate Court to demand security.

An order requiring security cannot be passed by an Appellate Court in an appeal from an order of a Second Class Magistrate. Karam Singh v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 457 : 67 I. C. 729.

—S. 106—Appellate Court—Security on conviction—Appellate Court, power of, to demand security.

One of the essentials for justifying an Appellate Court in requiring security under S. 106 is that the accused must have been tried and convicted by a Court of the Magistrate not inferior to a Magistrate of the First Class. Lal Khan v. Emperor. 19 Cr. L. J. 336 B. : 44 I. C. 352 : 5 P. R. 1918 Cr. : A. I. R. 1918 Lah. 370.

—S. 106—Appellate Court—Security, power of Court of Appeal or Revision to demand.

The fact that a case is tried by a Second or Third Class Magistrate, does not deprive a Court of Appeal or Revision of the power to demand security under S. 106. Lachmi Narain v. Emperor. 22 Cr. L. J. 276 : 60 I. C. 676 : 23 O. C. 380.

—S. 106—Appellate Court—Security to keep peace—Power of Appellate Court.

The Appellate Court is competent under S. 106 (3) upon an appeal against a conviction to pass an order requiring the appellant to furnish security to keep the peace. Miran Bakhsh v. Emperor. 2 Cr. L. J. 190 : 6 P. L. R. 148 : 21 P. R. Cr. 1905.

—S. 106—Applicability.

A Patkari was doing his duty in making a patrol accompanied by two tenants of the village, when the accused emerged from his house followed by two servants. An altercation issued between him and the Patkari resulting in grievous hurt being caused to the latter: Held, that there was nothing in the circumstances to suggest that the grievous hurt was caused in a manner or under conditions which would either necessarily or likely cause a breach of the peace. Durga Bharathi v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 491 : 72 I. C. 955 : A. I. R. 1923 Oudh 37.

—S. 106—Applicability — Convictions under S. 143 or S. 297, I. P. C.

An order under S. 106 cannot be passed on a conviction under S. 143 or S. 297, I. P. C. as these offences do not necessarily involve use of force. Abdulla v. Emperor. 22 Cr. L. J. 709 : 63 I. C. 869 : 2 Lah. 279 : A. I. R. 1921 Lah. 96.

—S. 106—Applicability of.

It is not sufficient, in order to justify the passing of an order under S. 106 that the accused should have committed the offence of criminal intimidation, it is necessary that he should have been convicted of that offence. An order cannot be passed under S. 106, Cr. P. C., on a conviction for an offence under S. 143 or S. 297 of the Penal Code, as those offences do not

—S. 106—Applicability—Offence of hurt.

Where the offence of voluntarily causing hurt includes an assault on the person to whom the hurt has been caused, the Court has jurisdiction to pass an order under S. 106 when convicting the accused. *Ramaswami Thevar v. S. 106 is not applicable to a person not convicted of any of the offences specified in the section. Although intimidation is one of the elements of an unlawful assembly, the criminal intimidation specified in S. 106 is the offence specifically defined by S. 503, the sentence provided by S. 506 being more severe than that provided by S. 143, and S. 106 cannot be applied to a person convicted under S. 143 merely because intimidation by show of criminal force is in the fourth and fifth parts of the definition in S. 141, an element of the offence punishable under S. 143. *Abdulla Khan v. There is nothing to prohibit the making of an order under S. 106 after a conviction for simple hurt on a summary trial, and the imprisonment to be undergone in default of furnishing security is not a part of substantive sentence. The sentence not being in itself appealable, does not become so, because the person convicted has

—S. 106—Construction—Assault—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), Ss. 325, 351, 352—Grievous hurt, voluntarily causing, whether assault.

An offence under S. 325, the Penal Code involves the use of criminal force and is, in that sense, an assault, but the word "assault," as used in S. 106, Cr. P. C. refers to the offence of assault as defined in S. 351 of the Penal Code and made punishable by S. 352. Dubri v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 227 :

71 I. C. 691 : 8 O. L. J. 318.

—S. 106 — Construction — "Breach of peace", what is.

The expression "breach of the peace" used in the accepted meaning which it bears in England, implies some offence against the public. Dubri v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 227 :
71 I. C. 691 : 8 O. L. J. 318.

—S. 106 — Construction — "Offences involving breach of peace," meaning of—Conviction of accused under Penal Code—Order under S. 106.

The expression "offences involving a breach of the peace" means offences in which the commission of a breach of the peace is a necessary ingredient, or offence, the commission of which has actually led to a breach of the peace (irrespective of the party by which that breach is committed). It is impossible to construe the word 'involve' as equivalent to the words 'likely to lead to.' The mere use of abusive language in a public place is not of itself a breach of the peace, though of course it is likely to lead to one. It is not one of the offences affecting the public tranquillity mentioned in S. 106. The word 'peace' is used as a synonym for security rather than for tranquillity. Where, therefore, an accused person is convicted of an offence under S. 294, I. P. C., an order under S. 106 cannot be made unless there is a finding that active criminal intimidation or assault, etc., have actually occurred in consequence of the obscene abuse. *The King v. volving breach of peace" meaning of—Conviction under S. 504, I. P. C.—Demand of security.

The expression "offences involving a breach of the peace" in S. 106, Cr. P. C., means offences in which breach of the peace is an ingredient and not offences provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace. An order cannot, therefore, be passed under S. 106 upon a conviction under S. 504, Penal Code. Asoke Parsanna Bal v. Emperor. 32 Cr. L. J. 359 :

The words "other offences involving a breach of the peace" refer to the actual definition of an offence in the substantive law, that is to say, the commission or intention to commit a breach of the peace must be one of the elements which would go to make up the offence. *Ankulal Shah v. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—S. 106—Security—Revision—Security to keep peace—Security proceedings—Preventive sections—Order of security on expiration of substantive sentence of imprisonment—Order for imprisonment in default of furnishing security.

A person convicted of criminal intimidation was sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment, and was further ordered to give security to keep the peace for six months under S. 106. At the time of the sentence, the Magistrate added an order to the effect that if the accused failed to give the security demanded, he was to undergo six months' simple imprisonment. The case was referred to the Chief Court by the Sessions Judge as it had been held in a previous case that an order made in similar circumstances for imprisonment in default of furnishing security was premature: Held, that it was unnecessary to interfere with the order in revision. *Emperor v. —S. 106—Security—Security to keep the peace—District Magistrate, power of, to direct cancellation of bonds, scope of.

S. 406 of the Cr. P. C. allows an appeal to the Court of District Magistrate against an order to find security for good behaviour. In respect of an order for security to keep the peace, the District Magistrate's powers are limited to the cancellation of the bonds under S. 125, and the words of the section seem to imply that the District Magistrate has no power to revise the original order of a Subordinate Magistrate passed under S. 106 or 107 of that Code. The words of the section contemplate cancellation of a bond for reasons arising subsequently to its execution and not for the reason that the District Magistrate is of opinion that execution ought not to have been ordered. *Khushal v. Prima facie a surety merely agrees to pay the creditor failing the debtor, and his liability is, as a rule, co-extensive with that of the principal. But where a person has stood surety for another bound down to keep the peace, both persons are liable if the condition of the bond is broken, for that is not a case of ordinary suretyship for the payment of money, but the surety is an additional security for the principal's keeping the peace and not merely a surety for his paying for it. *Saligram Singh v. ————S. 107 — Applicability — Manager of zemindar encouraging illegal acts likely to cause breach of peace—Manager bound down in security, legality of.

Petitioner, as Manager of a zemindar who owned a hat, employed peons to realize a toll from the users of the hat; the peons, in attempting to realize the toll, resorted to acts of violence and force and threatened to molest the users in order to obtain payment. As these acts were found to have been committed with the knowledge and consent of the petitioner and there was a reasonable apprehension that if, persisted in, a breach of the peace would occur, he was directed, to furnish security to keep the peace : Held, that the order was justified. *Bepin Behari Mukherji v. ————S. 107—Applicability—Security for breach of the peace—Bad feeling existing between two sections of community.

Under S. 107 of the Cr. P. C., the condition precedent to taking security is that the Magistrate should be informed that some person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do some wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity. Where there is nothing definite to go upon with reference to each accused person individually and no proof of use of violence, security cannot be taken merely because a bad feeling exists between two sections of a population. Sher Khan v. Emperor.

—S. 107—Applicability—Mere apprehension of breach of peace, sufficient.

In order to attract the application of S. 107, it should not only be shown that there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace but it must also be shown that the particular persons, against whom proceedings are drawn up, were likely to commit a breach of peace. There being dispute between the zemindars and the tenants with regard to possession of certain land, the Deputy Magistrate instituted proceedings under S. 145, between the parties and attached the land and made a temporary settlement thereof with a third party. One of the parties to the proceedings having moved the High Court, the proceedings were held to be defective and the Deputy Magistrate allowed them to be dropped holding that there was no further apprehension of a breach of the peace. The third party, however, remained in possession of the land, and there being in the meantime a survey and settlement of rights in the village, the Settlement Officer recorded them as being persons in possession, and the zemindars apparently acquiesced in the arrangement. The tenant, however, attempted to interfere and were eventually bound down under S. 107: Held, that proceedings under S. 107 taken under such circumstances were based on a misunderstanding of the real position of the parties and, therefore, could not be maintained. *Maigh Lal Singh v. the peace and offer violence to the law-abiding citizens. Acts in respect of which security is required, must not be acts, the repetition of which, may be merely apprehended from past commission of similar acts, but acts from which a reasonable inference can be drawn that the accused are likely (not were likely) to commit a breach of the peace. The fact that the persons hold a respectable position in the community to which they belong and wield an enormous influence with its members, is not enough to institute proceedings under S. 109 against those persons, for acts done by the members unless it is shown that they themselves are likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or do any wrongful act which may probably occasion the breach of peace. *H. —S. 107—Applicability—Security to keep the peace—Practice—Principle.

It is a common and proper practice to take security from the leaders of opposing factions that are shown to be likely to commit breaches of the peace. But before a person is bound over to keep the peace, it must be shown that he is himself likely to commit a breach of the peace or do a wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity. Whether a person is in possession of the land in dispute or not, if he raises a bona fide dispute of possession, the only course open to a Magistrate is to proceed under S. 145. Procedure in order to finally determine and declare the possession of one of the parties or to attach the land and thus put an end to the danger of the breach of the peace. He can, of course, take steps under Ss. 107 and 144 to prevent an immediate danger to the breach of the peace; but he is bound to start a proceeding under S. 145. —S. 107—Evidence—Security for breach of peace—Accused agreeing to give security—Breach of peace, proof of, absence of—Order, legality of.

A Magistrate called upon the accused under S. 112 of the Cr. P. C., to show cause why they should not furnish security to keep the peace under S. 107, on the ground that they were members of an unlawful assembly. The accused denied these allegations but expressed their willingness to execute bonds to keep the peace. Thereupon the Magistrate directed them to execute bonds for Rs. 100 to keep the peace for one year : Held, that the order was illegal, inasmuch as the accused did not plead guilty and there was no evidence on the record. Emperor v. Rai Singh.

—S. 107—Evidence—Security proceedings—Assault case, evidence and judgment in, whether can be considered.

Where a Magistrate is trying security case and an assault case on the same day against the same persons, there is no harm if he uses his knowledge of the one to govern his judgment in the other, and makes such use appear in his judgment. If the Magistrate convicts them in the assault case, and thinks that they ought to be bound over, he ought to bind them over as part of the decision of the assault case. The result of that would be that when the assault case is upset in appeal, the binding over would be upset too. Where, however, the persons accused are not identical, the proceedings and judgment in the assault case cannot be taken into consideration in arriving at a conclusion with regard to the security proceedings. *Din Dayal v. —S. 107—Evidence—Security to keep peace—Order made on admission of accused—Evidence, whether necessary.

It is illegal to place a person on security merely on his stating that he has no objection to furnish it. —S. 107—Fresh proceedings—Facts forming subject of previous enquiry resulting in discharge whether ground for fresh enquiry under S. 107.

In initiating proceedings under S. 107, a Magistrate should not rely upon facts and information which formed the subject of a previous enquiry and in which the accused were discharged. There must be fresh materials available on which it can be said that a fresh apprehension has arisen of a breach of the peace being committed by the accused. In re : Nagireddy Kondareddy. 18 Cr. L. —S. 107—Grounds—Apprehension of breach of peace, necessity of—Mere enmity between two parties, insufficient.

The mere existence of enmity between two persons or factions is no ground for instituting proceedings under S. 107, against one or both the parties. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

The facts that the dispossession of the complainant under S. 107 was apparently illegal and forcible and that a breach of the peace is likely to result from his attempting to resume possession are not sufficient grounds for binding over the opposite party to keep the peace. Hira Singh v. Mohan Singh. 10 Cr. L. J. 221 : 3 I. C. 64 : 5 N. L. R. 94.

—S. 107 — Grounds — Person inducing others to commit breach of peace, liability of.

A person is liable to be dealt with under S. 107, not only when he himself is likely to commit a breach of the peace, but also where for any wrongful act on his part other persons may do things which would probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity. *Satindra Nath Sen Gupta v. —S. 107—Grounds—Proof of violence in past not sufficient.

What must be proved in order to justify an order binding over persons under S. 107, is that they are likely to break the peace in future. Mere proof that they have committed certain acts of violence in the past is not sufficient. In re : Kumarappa Chettiar. 39 Cr. L. J. 416 : 174 I. C. 248 : 1937 M. W. N. 1072 : 47 L. W. 322 : 10 R. —S. 107—Grounds—Taking different sides in Municipal politics—Security order, passing of.

The mere fact that two parties had taken different sides in Municipal politics is not sufficient for passing an order taking security under S. 107. Kura Mal v. Emperor. 29 Cr. L. J. 714 : 110 I. C. 458 : 10 A. I. Cr. R. 434 : A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 863.

—S. 107—Grounds.

The mere fact that certain sahukars were threatening to get the zemindars imprisoned as they would not pay their debts, is not sufficient for an order under S. 107. Ram Kishan v. Emperor. 33 Cr. L. J. 915 : 140 I. C. 91 : 33 P. L. R. 935 : I. R. 1932 Lah. 684 : A. I. R. 1933 Lah. 36.

—S. 107—Grounds.

The mere fact that there has been a series of disputes, litigation and strong feeling between the parties, that is to say, there is only a possibility of a breach of the peace, is no justification for an order under S. 107. *Mathura Sahu v. —S. 107—Joint trial—Charge against collective body of persons—Proof against each person, necessity of—General hostility, effect of.

In a charge under S. 107 against a collective body of persons, it is insufficient to suggest that they are indulging in feelings of hostility towards another body of persons. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

—Ss. 107, 537—Joint trial—Principle of joinder of charges and persons applicable to inquiries for keeping the peace—Misjoinder of opposite parties—Irregularity not cured.

The main principles applicable to a criminal trial regarding joinder of charges, and the joint trial of accused persons may well be held to be applicable to inquiries under S. 107. Where persons belonging to the two opposite parties were all tried together under the said section, some amongst them having also been examined as witnesses in the case: Held, that they could not be said to have been concerned in the same transaction in any proper sense of the term, and that the inquiry was, therefore, most irregular: Held, further that S. 537 did not cure the irregularity. *Pran Krishna Saha v. S. 107—Jurisdiction—Residence of accused within jurisdiction, necessity of.

It is not necessary that that person should reside within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. But a person who resides outside the jurisdiction cannot be held to be a person within the jurisdiction merely because he is present in Court in obedience to a summons issued by the Magistrate. *Hamid Hasan v. The fact that a person is within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of a Magistrate when an apprehension of a breach of the peace arises, is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to bind such person over under S. 107 though the person to be bound over has his place of residence outside the jurisdiction. *Ziaullah Khan v. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898)

————S. 107—Lawful acts—Applicability of against wronged persons—Magistrate, whether can take action to prevent lawful acts resulting in breach of peace owing to wrongful acts of others.

The word “wrongful” in S. 107, must mean some act wrongful according to some law. S. 107 cannot be intended to authorize a Magistrate to take action to prevent lawful acts which may result in a breach of the peace because of the wrongful or unlawful acts of others. S. 107 is intended to be applied against the wrong-doers and not also against the wronged. “The collection or the acquiescing of collection of women” for the purpose of religious instruction, discourse or songs, the meeting together of men and women for a joint Satsang or meeting is no offence under the law nor is the education of children, and the Magistrate, therefore, cannot take action to prevent such lawful act even if it would result in a breach of peace owing to the wrongful acts of others. *Jasoda Lekhraj v. ————S. 107—Lawful acts—Delivery of possession by Civil Court—Proceedings under S. 107 or S. 145, if can be started—Magistrate, when should proceed under either section.

A Magistrate in spite of delivery of possession by the Civil Court has jurisdiction to start a case under S. 145. A Magistrate has discretion when there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace to choose either S. 145 or S. 107. Generally speaking, if the dispute arises immediately after the delivery of possession by the Civil Court and is between the parties to that delivery of possession, the more appropriate step will be to bind down under S. 107 the party who has been dispossessed by the Court. But if the delivery of possession is an old one or the dispute is between a man who has been given possession and a man who was not dispossessed by the Court, a proceeding under S. 145 will be more suitable. *Rajendra Narayan Bhanja Deo v. S. 107—Lawful acts—Religious acts when likely to provoke breach of the peace—Blowing of conch in a place not set apart for the purpose with intention to wound feelings of neighbours.

The blowing of a conch in a public place for one's personal amusement, or with any other lawful and innocent motive and without any intention of thereby annoying or hurting the religious feelings of any other person, is not a wrongful act. The blowing of a conch in connection with ceremonial acts of worship, in accordance with established usage in a place fixed for the ceremonial or periodical performance of such ceremonies or worship, will not, as a rule, be a wrongful act, even though there may be persons, within hearing of the sound, who find their religious feelings hurt in consequence. But if certain Hindus commence to perform ceremonies involving the blowing of a conch in a place in no way set apart for the purpose and where no such ceremonies had hitherto been performed with the deliberate intention of triumphing over, insulting and wounding the religious feelings of their Muhammadan neighbours, their act is a wrongful act, which is likely to provoke a breach of the peace and disturb the public tranquillity. *Emperor v. The proprietors of the village were mostly Sikhs. There were some Muhammadan inhabitants. There had been a great deal of tension between the Sikhs and Muhammadans on the question of cow sacrifice on the occasion of Id-ul-Zuha. The leader of the Muhammadans in this village, was bound down under S. 107, by the order of Magistrate, First Class. He executed a bond in the sum of Rs. 2,000 binding himself not to commit a breach of the peace or to do any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace for a period of one year. The District Magistrate also passed an order under the rules framed under S. 43, Punjab Laws Act, prohibiting cow sacrifice on the occasion of Id-ul-Zuha. After the Id prayers had been recited, the leader who was bound down, sacrificed a cow at a distance of about 100 yards from the abadi in the area of an adjoining village in an open place under a pipal tree. The place where the cow was sacrificed was visible from the abadi of the Sikh village and was near a public thoroughfare. Within a few hundred yards of the place where the cow was sacrificed was an approved slaughter house. The Muhammadans maintained that sacrificing cows at the time of Id-ul-Zuha was a religious right of the Muhammadans, and that by sacrificing the cow in the area of another village, they had not done any wrongful act: Held, that in the circumstances the leader of the Muhammadans was certainly doing a wrongful act within the purview of S. 298, Penal Code, and was thus provoking a breach of the peace and, therefore, his security bond under S. 107, could be forfeited. *Ibrahim v. Accused was, on 23rd May 1921, ordered to furnish security under S. 108, for one year, or undergo imprisonment for that period. On 31st July, 1921, he was convicted of a substantive offence under S. 500, Penal Code, and sentenced to undergo three months' simple imprisonment, but he remained on bail till 23rd November 1921, when the bail bond was cancelled. In the meanwhile, on the 16th October 1921, he withdrew his security and on 23rd November 1921, was committed to jail under S. 108: Held, that the sentence of imprisonment under S. 500, Penal Code, took effect on 23rd November 1921 when accused's bail-bond was cancelled as on the date on which that sentence was imposed, he was not undergoing a sentence of imprisonment. *Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi v. Where before the commencement of the trial, the petitioner put in an application, protesting that he had never made any speech for the purpose of disseminating seditious matter but to remove all room for misunderstanding, expressing his readiness to give an undertaking that he would deliver no speeches on political subjects from public platforms for a period of one year; but the District Magistrate declined to accept any such undertaking: Held, that the Magistrate was right in doing so. The case before the Magistrate was Criminal and he had to conform to the provisions of the law strictly before passing an order restricting the ordinary rights of a subject of the Crown. The undertaking offered was not one of penitence as no offence was admitted. Vaman Sakhararam Khare v. Emperor.

The rule laid down in Sital Prasad v. Emperor, 34 Ind. Cas. 974, that in order to justify an order under S. 108 (b), one has only got to find that there are words used in the matter complained of which are likely to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, is wholly unsupportable. The utmost that is warranted on any view of the section is that a person comes within its scope if he disseminates matter which reveals an intention to promote feelings of enmity. Matter which has in fact a tendency to do so may be published alio intuitu or even with an honest view to stop class hatred. P. K. Chakravarty v. Emperor.

The Courts have got, in all cases coming up either under Ss. 108, 109 or 110, to pay strict regard to the question whether the evidence produced is legal evidence in the case on the question of repute. Where a mere general charge is put forward against a certain person that he is a burglar or thief, this statement must be tested in the light of tangible facts and particulars: if there are any such facts to support the story, and if there are no such facts, the evidence loses its value. *Emperor v. The phrase "give satisfactory account of himself" in S. 109 does not mean that the person should satisfy the Magistrate that he spends his time, or at least his leisure hours, in a satisfactory manner. A municipal peon, whose residence and occupation are well-known but who is said to prowl about at night, to be a companion of scoundrels, to bolt from the Police and to be armed with, and using a lathi, cannot be said to be a person who is unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, and cannot be bound down under S. 109. *Sharif Ahmad v. The wording of S. 109 is not otherwise, and it cannot be apprehended that a person can be considered to have given a satisfactory account of himself, if being found with unmistakable burgling instruments in his possession, in the middle of the night, he says that he is a respected house-holder, following an honourable profession in the day time still less can he be said to have given a satisfactory account of himself when, on being accosted, he flings away a bundle of house-breaking implements and runs to his own house by a devious route, and when forced to open his door to the Police, denies that he had left his house that night. *Ahesanali v. Certain persons were found on a dark night at about midnight in a mango grove outside the abadi of a village with house-breaking implements, and when challenged by the constables tried to run away, and on being caught, they first gave incorrect names and false addresses in order to hide their identities. They were residents of the sub-division in which they were found : Held, Per Sulaiman, Actg. C. J., and Kendall and Weir, JJ., (Boys and Banerji, JJ., dissenting), that the case fell within sub-cl. (a) of S. 109 and justified the initiation of proceedings for taking security from the suspected persons. Per Boys and Kendall, JJ., (Sulaiman, Actg. C. J., contra and Weir, J., dubitante).—The facts fell within the purview of sub-cl. (b) of S. 109. Per Sulaiman, Actg. C. J. and Kendall and Weir, JJ.—The expression “within the local limits of such Magistrate’s jurisdiction” in S. 109 (a), is an adverbial clause modifying the word ‘conceal’ and not an adjectival clause qualifying the noun ‘presence’, and on a correct interpretation of the section if a man is taking precautions anywhere in order to conceal his presence, and that concealing is to be effected within the jurisdiction of a Magistrate who receives the information, such Magistrate has power to demand security even though the residence of the person informed against within the jurisdiction is well-known. Per Sulaiman, Actg. C. J.—The expression ‘cannot give a satisfactory account of himself’ in S. 109 (b) of the Code, does not include mere inability to account for one’s presence at a particular place at a particular time. If a man proves that he is a resident of the neighbourhood, and is a man of substance, he must be said to be able to give a satisfactory account of himself, although he is not able to, or does not, give any convincing explanation why on a particular dark night he was found prowling about in a lonely place. Per Boys and Kendall, JJ. (Sulaiman, Actg. C. J. contra).—The expression “cannot give a satisfactory account of himself” in S. 109 (b), includes inability to explain his presence at a particular time and place where his presence at such time and place is suspicious. Per Weir, J.—It is not the length of time during which the concealment lasts, but the object which prompts the concealment, that determines whether the concealment is, or is not, such as to come within the purview of S. 109 (a). Emperor v. Phuchai.

(b)—Person concealing in deserted hut running out at approach of some person—Person caught—Being questioned giving out identity and place of residence but admitting that he along with others had come to commit theft—Sindh cutter and gunny bag found in hut.*

Persons arrested under S. 55, do not necessarily come under S. 109 (a) but may come under the provisions of S. 109 (b). In interpreting S. 109 (a), the ordinary meaning of the words should be followed. S. 109 (a), therefore, refers to a continuous concealment and not to an isolated act of concealment. The expression "has failed to give a satisfactory account of himself" in cl. (b) means a satisfactory account of himself generally, and not a satisfactory account of his presence at the place and in the circumstances in which he was found. A person was hiding in a deserted hut in an orchard, and at the approach of some persons, ran out of the hut but was caught. When questioned, he gave out his identity and was living openly at the address given by him. He further admitted that he had come there with two other persons for the purpose of committing theft and that his two companions had gone away to select a house for the purpose, leaving him in the hut. When the hut was searched, a Sindh cutter and a gunny bag were found there: Held, that S. 109 (a) did not apply but cl. (b) applied as he must be held to have failed to give a satisfactory account of himself. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Ishali.

A Magistrate is empowered to put in force the provisions of S. 108 whenever he has credible information that the accused has no ostensible means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory account of himself and is within the limits of his jurisdiction. It is immaterial how he (accused) came before him (Magistrate). Emperor v. Madho Dhobi. 1 Cr. L. J. 535 : I. L. R. 31 Cal. 557.

—S. 109 (b)—Object of—"Give satisfactory account of himself", meaning of.

The whole object of the latter part of cl. (b) of S. 109 is to enable Magistrates to take action against suspicious strangers lurking within their jurisdiction, for the greatest criminal in the world is not liable to be questioned as to his presence in his own home unless there is some specific charge against him. The expression "gave a satisfactory account of himself" does not mean that the person should satisfy the Magistrate how he spends his time but that he has to satisfactorily account for his presence within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. It means that if a person is present within such limits or is present at a place within such limits to which place he does not belong, and there are circumstances justifying a suspicion that he is there not for an innocent purpose, he has got to explain his presence. *Sheikh Piru v. —S. 109 (b)—Prosecution under S. 109 (b)—Evidence showing accused to be thief by habit—Proper order is one under S. 110 and not under S. 109 (b).

A proceeding against a man because he has no ostensible means of subsistence is a totally different proceeding from one for being by habit a thief. An order was framed against a person under S. 109 (b), as having no ostensible means of subsistence, but the evidence led was all about his being by habit a thief. The Magistrate still passed an order under S. 109 (b), to furnish security. No appeal was filed against the order : Held, that the proper order to be passed in such a case was one under S. 110, but as no appeal was preferred from the order, it was not right to set it aside. *The King v. The section may be made an engine of oppression unless care is taken by Magistrates to prevent its abuse. Merely to be penniless or out of work, is not an offence. If it were the law that persons are exposed to proceedings under S. 109 (b) merely because they cannot give a satisfactory account of the manner in which they are eking out a precarious existence, the Magistrate's hands would be full, and much injustice might be done to innocent persons. Victor v. Emperor. 27 Cr. L. J. 497 :

—Ss. 109, 110, 112—Recording evidence before framing order under S. 112.

A Magistrate acting under S. 109 or 110, need not confine himself to the information contained in the Police papers. He can, if he thinks fit, take information on oath in the presence of the accused before framing the order under S. 112. Emperor v. Nga Pa Thaung. 2 Cr. L. J. 462 : U. B. R. 1905 I. P. C. 1905.

—Ss. 109, 112—Scope of.

Under S. 118, which in its turn, is dependent upon the order passed under S. 112, all that the final order can contain is a direction to furnish security to be of good behaviour for a period which cannot, in any case, exceed one year, and which must not be beyond that specified in the order under S. 112. Any order which specifies a period of imprisonment in default is, to that extent, illegal. Rangi v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 388 :

Proceedings under the preventive sections of the Code, fall within meaning of the expressions 'enquiry' or 'trial' in S. 517. A Court dealing with an accused person under Ss. 109 and 110 can confiscate property produced before it or in its custody, even in the absence of proof that any offence was committed with respect to that property or that it was used for the commission of an offence. In re: Pydi Ramanna. 20 Cr. —Ss. 109, 118—Scope and application by—Dishonest living, necessity of—Poor, outcast and old offences.

The meaning of Ss. 109 and 118, is that if a person is unable to prove the source of his livelihood, he ought not to be ordered to execute a bond under Ss. 109 and 118 unless there is reasonable ground for suspecting that he is sustaining himself by some dishonest means ; for such an order can only be made where it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour. In such a case, the prosecution must satisfy the Magistrate that suspicion that he is living dishonestly attaches to the accused because of his failure to give a satisfactory explanation when called upon to account for his presence in the place where he is found, e. g., if he fails to account for being discovered in the company of persons living a dishonest or criminal life, or detected in some place where he has no legal right to be. But the poor and the outcast and the old offender must somewhere live and move and have their being. Victor v. Emperor.

Cr. P. CODE (1898), S. 110

Though local inquiry is most appropriate where it is a question whether proceedings under S. 110 should be instituted. Once, however, the accused are before the Court, the case must be decided on the evidence alone. In a proceeding under S. 110 the Magistrate dealt with the evidence at great length, and on that evidence came to the conclusion that it was established that the accused were habitual thieves. In his order the Magistrate stated that camping at the spot he had received information which confirmed the conclusion at which he had arrived on the evidence: Held, that the course adopted by the Magistrate in making an inquiry at the spot was irregular but that was not sufficient, in the circumstances of this case, to set aside the whole proceedings. *Ram Pargat v. —S. 110—Applicability—Demanding security from a person trying to reform himself.

Where it is found that an accused person is trying to reform himself, and has, for a fortnight, led an honest life, security should not be demanded from him under S. 110 on the ground that there is no guarantee that he has mended his ways. In re : Billa Appayya.

—S. 110—Applicability—Evidence—Vague allegations that person proceeded against was suspected in several cases, of having committed offences against property—Security.

An order under S. 110 read with S. 118.

Cr. P. CODE (1898), S. 110

cannot be made on vague allegation, e. g. that the accused had been suspected in several cases of having committed offences against property, otherwise none would be safe. Unless a man is proved by habit a robber, house-breaker, thief, or forger, or by habit a receiver of stolen property, etc., drastic measures cannot be taken against him, and if in all cases in which the person proceeded against was sent up, he was either discharged or acquitted, it cannot be urged that the requirements of S. 110 are satisfied. *Islam ud-Din v. S. 110—Applicability—Evidence needed.

In order to bind a person down under S. 110 there should be evidence in which the accused is proved to have been concerned in certain criminal cases, or some direct evidence to establish his complicity in such cases. The evidence ought to be of such a nature as to lead to a reasonable and definite ground for coming to the conclusion that the accused is a habitual thief. Amjad Ali v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J. 35 :

Section 110 coupled with S. 117 gives very extensive powers to Magistrate and should be administered with scrupulous care, and materials ought not to be brought on to the record which are not legally admissible in evidence and which are liable, if on the record, to prejudice the accused. *Jabru Din v. The Police having failed to establish the guilt of the accused in regard to three specific charges of dacoity, instituted proceedings against the accused under S. 110: Held, that the Magistrate was not wrong in initiating proceedings under S. 110 but, in such circumstances, the evidence against the accused must be very satisfactory before security can be demanded of him under S. 118. *Surindra Nath v. S. 110—Applicability—Habitually bringing false cases in Civil Courts—Evidence of general repute, admissibility of.

S. 110 does not apply to a person who has the reputation of habitually bringing false claims in Civil Courts. Such a person may be punishable under S. 209, I. P. C. but he does not, by so doing, commit the offence, either, if he succeeds, of extortion or, if he fails, of attempting to commit extortion. In proceedings against such a person, although evidence of general repute is admissible, it

A man cannot be called upon under S. 110 to give security for harbouring dacoits. Such a person should be dealt with under the substantive provision of the Penal Code, i. e., S. 216-A. Manni Ram v. Emperor, 30 Cr. L. J. 694 :

The Manager of a Public Shrine, which does not belong to him and which is freely open to the people, cannot be called upon to furnish security under S. 110 (c), although some thieves have been arrested there on several occasions and it is generally used as a gambling resort, and among the people, who come up there, are a number of thieves and bad characters and although the manager himself has nine convictions against him. *Soman v. ———S. 110—Applicability—Protecting or harbouring an offender—Meaning of.

The "protecting or harbouring" of S. 110 (c) seems to contemplate assistance of the former kind, and not of the latter. The clause is designed to meet the case of the professional receiver of stolen property who assists the thief after the theft by relieving him and encouraging him, protecting him from discovery and arrest, and helping him to dispose of his stolen property. It does not apply to a mere associate of suspected thieves. The acts which amount to harbouring must be done with the intention of screening the offender. If a man from mere motives of humanity, and without any intention of enabling the fugitive to escape from justice, were to give food to a man who was starving, or surgical assistance to one who was wounded even with a full knowledge of his character, he commits no criminal act. *Nga Pu Gyi v. The question whether the person who has been registered as a member of a criminal tribe, can be proceeded against under S. 118, depends on the facts and circumstances of each particular case. Each case has to be scrutinised on its merits. The fact that the reputation of such persons continued the same as it was when they were registered as members of a criminal tribe, is no ground for taking further preventive action. ———S. 110—Evidence of good character—Previous convictions, effect of—Evidence of general reputation, what constitutes—Suspicion of Police men, value of—Duty of Magistrate.

In proceedings under S. 110, the existence of a number of previous convictions of offence, such as theft, is a matter which may and should be taken into consideration as indicating the character and disposition of the accused. But the existence of such convictions is not by itself sufficient to justify ordering the accused to furnish security. Weight must be given to a consideration of the period that has elapsed subsequent to the last of the convictions in order to see, whether during that period, the accused has apparently shown a disposition to conduct himself properly or whether there are indications that he has, during that period, continued in his previous course, though he may not have actually brought himself within the clutches of the law. The suspicions of a witness that a particular man committed, either singly or with others, a theft in his house is wholly inadmissible. In this respect a Police Officer stands in no stronger position than any other witness. The mere production of a string of witnesses who say that an accused person's general reputation is so and so, can carry very little weight unless some attempt has been made to show that he is a person in a position to know the general reputation, and there has been

General repute, admissibility of—Desperate and dangerous character, proof of.

Under Ss. 110, cl. (f), 112 and 117, evidence of mere general repute is not sufficient to prove that a person is so desperate and dangerous a character, that he cannot be allowed to remain at large, but that such a finding must be based on evidence of facts. It is not sufficient to do so on vague and general evidence that some one was robbed or beaten and people say that the accused was responsible for it. Babu Murtaza Husain v. Emperor.

Where the Police or the Magistrate want to make use of S. 117 (t), the witness should be allowed to depose, if he can in fact give evidence, that the accused has a general reputation as a habitual thief (or robber, etc., as the case may be), but he should not be allowed to state that the accused is a bad character or has the reputation of being a bad character. Evidence as to general repute is permitted by law ; but it is obviously a type of evidence which requires to be weighed very carefully ; and the Court should be careful that no improper laxity is permitted. *Emperor v. Cr. P. CODE (1898), S. 110

———S. 110—General reputation—Evidence of general repute, what is.

Evidence of general repute, means evidence as to his general character founded on the general opinion of the neighbourhood in which he lives. But the evidence need not show that such general opinion is based on the personal knowledge of the man by his neighbours generally, and it need not show that such general opinion has been publicly expressed by the neighbours. *Kamal Kishore v. Evidence of instances in which the accused has been suspected, is not evidence of general repute, nor evidence on which the Court can bind the accused over under S. 110, but such evidence may be admissible as corroborating independent evidence given of accused's reputation. Sanku v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 608 : 78 I. C. 352 : A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 112.

—S. 110—General repute—Evidence of—Police witness, value of—Stranger to place, if can give such evidence.

Per Burn, J.—The question what is a person's reputation is a question of fact. It can be spoken to by any one who knows what his general reputation is. The Police Officer who goes to the place where a particular person lives and who makes enquiries to find out what his reputation is, is perfectly competent to speak in the witness-box about the result of his enquiries. His evidence that the reputation of such a person is so and so, is evidence of a fact and it is not to be excluded as mere hearsay evidence. In one sense the evidence of general repute is of course hearsay but it is hearsay of a particular kind which is made admissible in cases under S. 110 by S. 117. Per Venkataramana Rao, J.—Reputation of a man's character is the inference or estimate from the sum total of a man's actions and qualities drawn or formed by persons who are acquainted with him or among whom he resides. It is generally understood that the 'place' or 'community' with reference to which reputation evidence is tendered, should relate to the neighbourhood where he dwells or moves, but having regard to modern conditions, it is impossible to define "neighbourhood" or "community" with any degree of accuracy. In re : Perne Maila Rai.

—S. 110—General repute—Instances of suspicion, value of.

Specific instances of crime in which the accused is suspected, are not good evidence and do not fall within the meaning of "general repute" under S. 117. —S. 110—General reputation—Opinions based on rumours, value of.

In considering oral evidence to prove a charge under S. 110, cl. (a), it is necessary to keep in mind that such evidence must be specific and must relate to particular instances within the knowledge of the witnesses. Mere belief and information without reference to acts and instances which have induced the witnesses to form their opinion cannot be regarded as evidence of repute within the meaning of S. 117 (3). The evidence must be of persons who are acquainted with the accused and live in the neighbourhood and are themselves aware of the accused's reputation. It must be an opinion formed by the witnesses from specific cases coming to their knowledge and not merely from reports or rumours received from others. For instance, where a witness says that to his knowledge a certain person is a thief or a house-breaker by habits, and on being pressed to give the source of his knowledge, he merely says that there is a rumour to such effect or that he heard it from the villagers generally, without being able to name any one of them, such evidence is not admissible in law. *Ram Lagan Ahir v. Where a person had been imprisoned for three years in default of finding security to be of good behaviour, a period of under two months from his release from jail is not a sufficient time to give him an opportunity of showing that he is willing to adopt an honest livelihood. Where there is no evidence of any complaint having been made to the police or to a Magistrate against a person called upon to find security to be of good behaviour, or that he had been arrested on a charge of having committed any offence, the facts that certain witnesses state that he bears a bad character and that he is said by the police to have been suspected in several cases, is not sufficient to warrant an order under Ss. 110 and 118 being passed against him. *Emperor v. Certain lands were thrown out by a river in a zemindari tract. The tenants formed themselves into a party to compel the zemindar to settle the land with them. They also entered into an agreement among themselves to drive the lands among all of them with whomsoever they were settled and to enforce the agreement themselves. Many loots, assaults and murders were committed by them against the zemindar and the recalcitrant members. Apart from this land dispute, there was nothing on the record to show that the tenants bore any despicable character or that they were implicated in theft, extortion, etc., or that they ever provoked a breach of the peace: Held, that the tenants could not be said to have acquired the habit of committing offences so as to bring them within the purview of cls. (a) to (e) of S. 110, but that the course of their conduct showed that they had become desperate and dangerous and that, therefore, proceedings could be taken against them under cl. A previous conviction is not necessary for proceedings under S. 110. On the other hand, S. 117 (4) lays down that the fact that the man is an habitual offender can be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise. Before passing any order under S. 110, therefore, the Magistrate must consider and weigh the evidence produced by the prosecution to prove that the person against whom the proceedings are instituted was a habitual thief even if there is no evidence that such person had any previous conviction. *Emperor v. S. 110 is intended to deal with persons who cannot readily be brought under the ordinary law. There is nothing in the wording of S. 110 that leads to the inference that S. 110 can only be used where the parties are strangers to the locality. Before a person can be bound over under this or similar sections, it is not necessary that a certain number of previous convictions should have been proved, if the evidence that a person is a habitual robber or house-breaker or thief can be proved otherwise. If there are no previous convictions, the quantum of proof necessary would naturally be greater. In re : Shanmugham Asari.

The test to be applied in cases where a plea of misjoinder is raised is whether there has been habitual association between the persons charged in respect of the misconduct alleged in the complaint. Kripa Sindhu Naiko v. Emperor. 19 Cr. L. J. 905 : 47 I. C. 277 : 8 L. W. 461 : 1918 M. W. N. 751 : A. I. R. 1919 Mad. 633.

—S. 110—Joint trial—Enquiry under S. 110—Joint trial—Association of accused, proof of.

When proceedings are taken against more persons than one for a joint trial under S. 110, proof should be given that they were associated together in the matter under enquiry. Nizamadai v. Emperor. 20 Cr. L. J. 551 : 51 I. C. 839 : 23 C. W. N. 488 : A. I. R. 1919 Cal. 359.

Cr. P. CODE (1898), S. 110

—S. 110—Joint trial—Evidence against each person.

Where a number of persons are tried jointly upon a charge under S. 110, it is incumbent upon the Magistrate to insist that definite evidence be given against each person who is charged. Jai Govind v. Emperor. 13 Cr. L. J. 760 : 17 I. C. 72 : 15 O. C. 263.

—S. 110—Joint trial—Habitual offenders—Joint trial.

Proceedings against a man for badmashi should be confined to himself alone, unless the case is that he has a confederate or a partner to whom all the evidence is equally applicable. Angnoo Singh v. Emperor. 24 Cr. L. J. 257 : 71 I. C. 865 : 20 A. L. J. 881 : 45 All. 109 : A. I. R. 1923 All. 35.

—S. 110—Joint trial.

In the case of persons acting in concert, joint trial is the proper procedure especially when they are alleged to be dangerous. But separate finding of each accused is necessary. Parbati Charan v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 952 : 149 I. C. 408 : 61 Cal. 588 : 6 R. C. 593 : A. I. R. 1934 Cal. 482.

—S. 110—Joint trial—Joint proceedings—Prejudice to accused—Illegality.

Proceedings under S. 110 were instituted jointly against two brothers, who lived together, and against whom, there was evidence of joint acts. There was, however, some evidence which was relevant to the case against one of them but was not relevant to the case against the other. An order was made against them by the Magistrate and was upheld in appeal. In dealing with the appeal, however, the Sessions Judge distinguished the evidence which was relevant to the case of each accused from the rest of the evidence and wrote two separate judgments: Held, that as no prejudice had resulted to the accused, the Sessions Judge having excluded from his consideration evidence which did not apply directly to the case of each accused, the joint proceedings were not illegal. Shamsuddin v. Emperor. 26 Cr. L. J. 1114 : 88 I. C. 282 : A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 381.

—S. 110—Joint trial—Joint proceedings against several persons, legality of—Evidence of reputation, nature of.

Where proceedings are taken under S. 110 (1), several persons may be dealt with together. The evidence of reputation admitted against them should, of course, not be against each accused separately but against them all together. In re : Appasamy Mudali. 32 Cr. L. J. 144 : 128 I. C. 449 : 32 L. W. 743 : 54 Mad. 334 : I. R. 1934 Mad. 33 : 59 M. L. J. 853 : 1930 M. W. N. 1045 : A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 873.

—S. 110—Joint trial—Joint trial of two persons, legality of.

It is not legal to try two persons jointly charged under S. 110 (f). Kripa Sindhu v. Emperor. 19 Cr. L. J. 905 : 47 I. C. 277 : 8 L. W. 461 : 1918 M. W. N. 751 : A. I. R. 1919 Mad. 633.

———S. 110—Joint trial—Joint trial, when allowed.

In order to entitle a Magistrate to try several persons jointly for offences under S. 110, the circumstances mentioned in S. 117 (4), must be established. Jai Rao v. Emperor.

23 Cr. L. J. 100 :
65 I. C. 484 : 3 P. L. T. 538 : 1923 Pat. 8.

———S. 110—Joint trial—When permissible.

Although there is no direct prohibition in the Code against trying a number of persons under S. 110 jointly, such proceedings are improper and should be confined to each person alone unless the case be that each of the accused was a confederate or partner with other persons to whom all the evidence would be equally applicable. If such proceedings are conducted jointly, it is essential that the case of each accused should be considered separately and individually. Muhammad Ismail v. Emperor.
